SG1A

The entity known as [REDACTED] is associated with illegal activity with indications of involvement with the [REDACTED] It is used for the transfer and loading of heavy metal objects. It is used as a "gaging" and "layover" place for those involved with this network. Work i.e. maintenance is done on a smaller vessel associated with the [REDACTED] This work is conducted within a wooden structure in which a boat can pull into (see diagram). The structure has a lower level situated just above the water line.

SG1A

There is an object which looks like an upturned animal claw embedded into the wall or door frame. There are stacks of rolls of material reminiscent of fiber glass or paper within the structure. The roof is abnormally thick for this style of structure. There are several disc or cone-shaped objects. A large, oblong-shaped black bag is connected on each end by ropes or chains. The bag is lifted and moved by these. The contents are hard and heavy.

There is a movement of wooden objects. An attractive woman who is associated with advertising or commercials is present and very interested in what is happening here. She is observing the transfer of material. There are a series of tubes which "must" be stored at a 50 to 60 degree angle.

There are triangles and clear, sparkling objects. There are a number of barrels which have been cut in half length wise. These are associated in some way to "refitting" and maintenance. These half barrels contain objects that look like melted down pieces of metal; like flattened nuggets. A little plastic box 2" x 4" x 6" with a metal lid is important to this operation.

Individuals come in and out of a location of "high terrain" to the wooden structure and this activity.

SG1A

The activity associated with [REDACTED] is illegal but not directly associated with drugs; it is a loading place for metal objects which are very valuable. When cued "What is the nature of the metal objects?" the concept of "plates" was perceived.

There is a metal case which is very brilliant. As it is opened, one can see the glimmering of a angularly-shaped object contained within the case. There are also other sparkling objects. The concepts associated with this case are: valuable metals; bright and silver-white; and an almost energetic brilliance of its own. These valuable metal objects are "pieces of a puzzle"; necessary pieces.

One disturbing concept, perceived very early in this session, is: someone within the organization knows about "our" efforts; they at least sense that there is a use of unconventional collection means within this operation.
