SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

SG1A

The target vessel [REDACTED] appears to be enroute for an area identified as Fajardo, Puerto Rico, where it will load contraband in the form of cocaine.

SG1A

The [REDACTED] will then sail in a southerly direction, and then in a westerly direction along the Western Antilles and towards Jamaica. It will then sail in a northeasterly direction along the Windward Passage in an area located between Haiti and Cuba. It will then proceed in a northwesterly direction between the Bahamas and Cuba while heading for the southeast coast of the US.

The target vessel will then sail off the east coast of Florida in a northerly direction towards the Pamlico Sound area located roughly between Beaufort and Englehard, North Carolina, where it will unload its cargo of drugs.

The drugs are stored in plastic bags in the aft portion of the vessel. There was some evident concern by the smugglers about the temperature somehow affecting the drugs.
