SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

The target area seems austere. The surroundings consist of relatively colorless buildings constructed of concrete and steel. The area reminds me of the "Bad Lands" of Wyoming and Montana but that is not where I am located during the session. The weather is cold and grey.

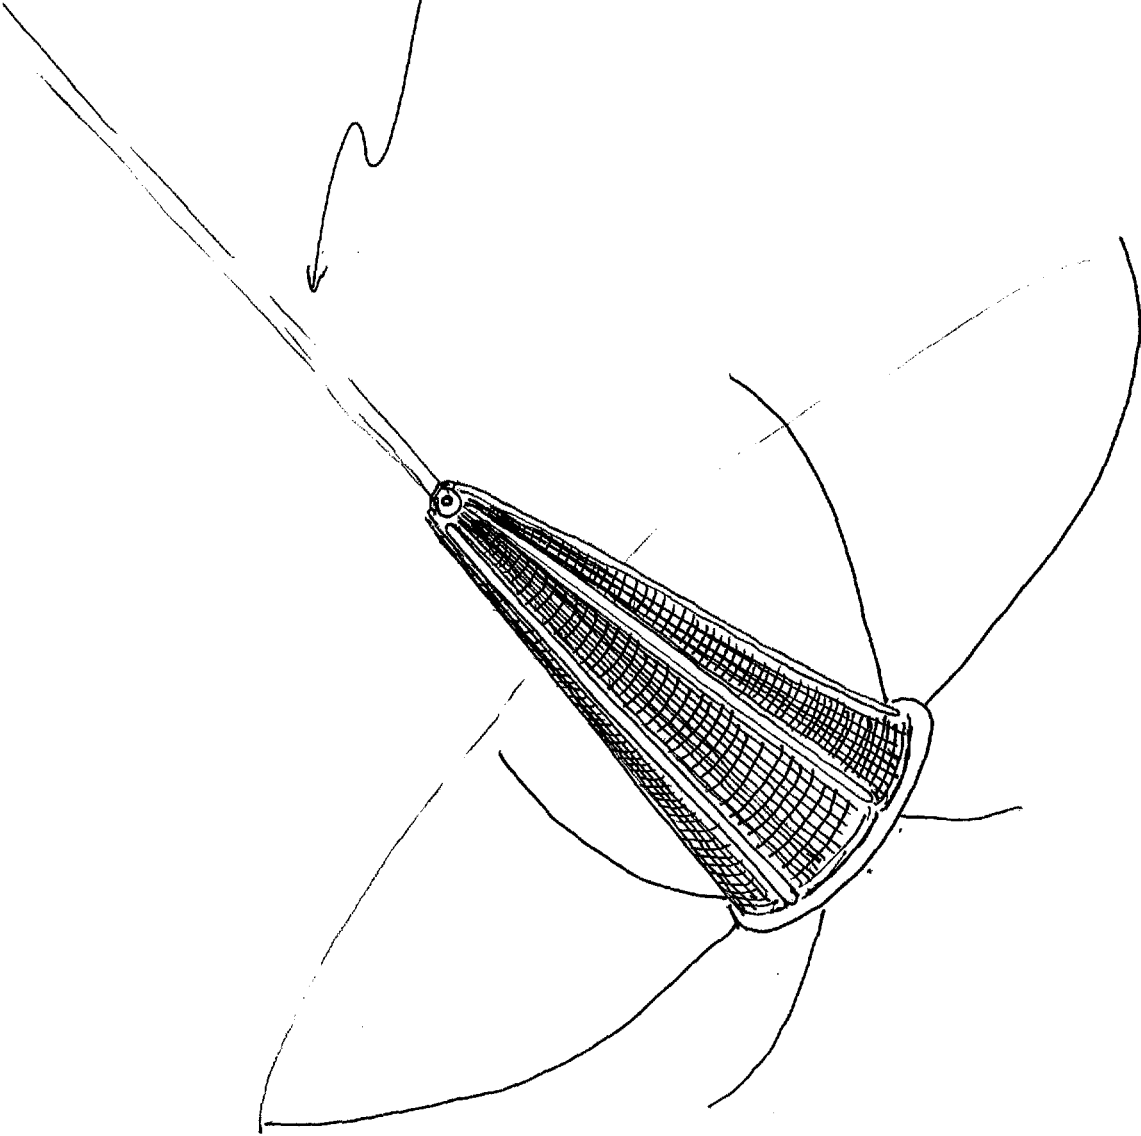

I was attracted to a structure that had several interesting aspects to it (See sketch #1,2,3). First, the structure was taller than the others in the area. Second, there was a great deal of movement associated with the structure (see arrows in sketch #2). This structure rotated on command clockwise and tilted back and forth. Third, there was something emitted from the structure -- it produced a stream of heat that flowed out like water and there was a definite humming noise associated with this behavior.

There were armed guards in the vicinity of this structure (See sketch #4) and the structure was positioned atop a very large steel frame with concrete footings.
