Site consist of a structure, now partially in ruins. Parts of this structure which appears to have been a temple or a monument were constructed from dressed stone that appears to be marble. Other portions are put together with rocks in their natural form. The main portion of this structure is rounded and there are some columns and stairways associated with it. There is also a long hallway to the south, it appeared to be lined with columns. The climate felt warm and dry. This site was used as a meeting place of sorts at one time, where very large groups of people would gather to trade. The focal point, being a well. Somewhere at this site is the feeling of a deep, dark, purple void. The structure itself may have been of religious significance once upon a time, but appears to be in a state of ruin at this time.
