

Area is a tall large L shaped or Arrow-head shaped Building. Set in a park like setting, feeling of landscaped. Building feels whole unto itself.

People entering building are professional, and kinda of cold and detached, (like NSA Types). People feel civilian.

ON first floor there is a check point. A booth of blonde colored wood. There is a security guard. Further along in room is a waiting area with chairs + couches, similar to first floor of the DIA.

Second floor had a lot of activity. People coming and going. There are files here, both manual and computerized. Files covered many topics from barriers to species of birds. I had the feeling file provided information to make civilian decisions as opposed to military ones. Feeling near that, these people prepared information for someone else to use

Third floor I do not recall too much about. I believe there was an area which had something like (AOL) a steno-pool

Fourth floor had numerous rooms. In one of these rooms was an older man (50-55?), silver hair, slim build. He likes to wear dark suits, especially blue. Two flags behind his desk. Desk was polished wood or marble. He has a secretary. He considers himself a figer-head (AOL like a president of a parliamentary country). He makes some decisions but his authority is limited.

Fifth floor had many specialists. These people specialized in an certain geographical area or on a certain topic. Specialist worked mostly in shirt sleeves and exchanged information back and forth among themselves.

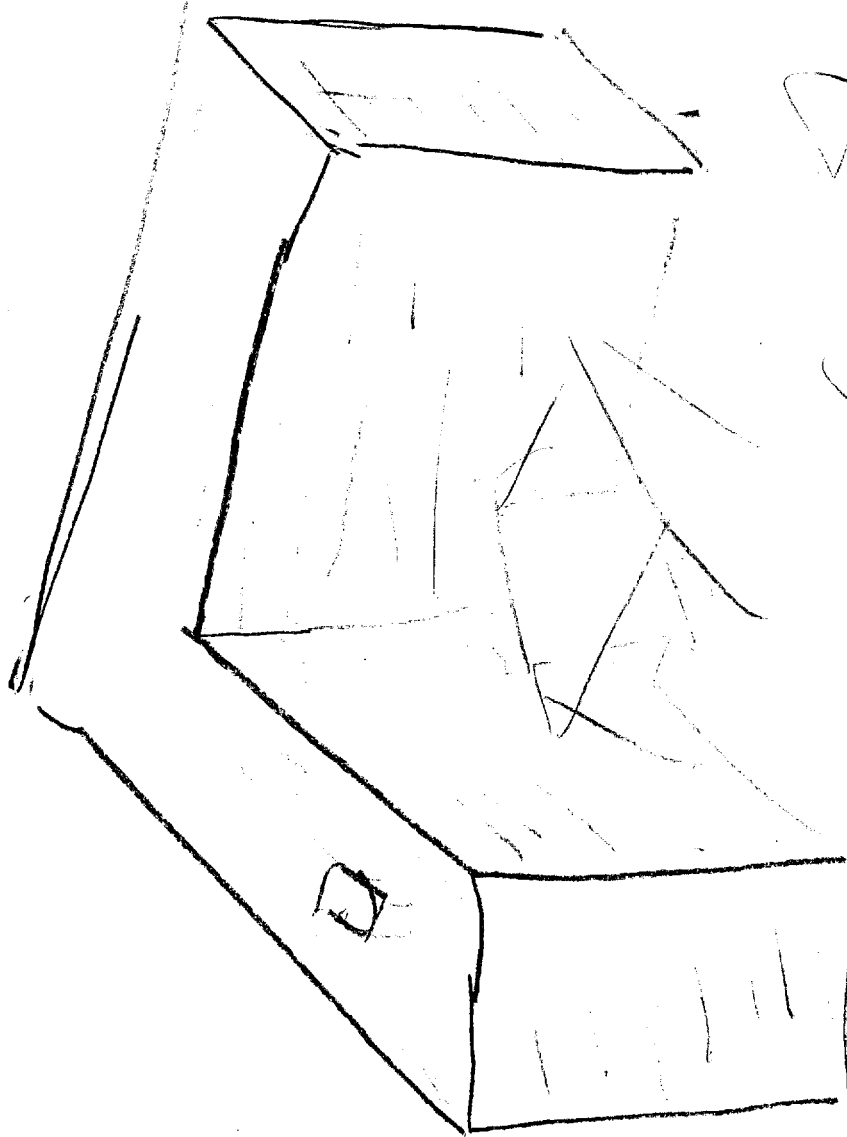

I forget what the sixth floor had.

There may or may not have been a 7th floor.

A Building had a new feeling. People were very conscious about their title. One woman on 2d floor was a cross between a secretary and an office manager. If I called her a secretary it would run her whole day.

There was a fenced area nearby. There may have been a bunker inside this fence. Bunker was partially underground and may have had something to do with communications and power.
