PEOPLE!

simple

4½ - these people have chosen to live a simple, uncomplicated lifestyle. Every one in the community is equal, but there are divisions of duties and labor which are both traditional and necessary. For example, the women are responsible for child-rearing and taking care of things at home and the men are responsible for providing. Although the roles are separate, the community sees each role as being equally important.

4½ - Children - children are not thought of as belonging to a set of parents. The children belong to the community. Although they recognize the family group, i.e. mother, father, son, daughter, etc., the children consider any mature, male adult in the same way as a father.

and having some difficulty in trying to explain it.

CHILDREN

4½ - Children - children are very important to this community. All people of the community look upon all of the children as their own. Likewise, the children perceive all of the men and women as their mother and father, or aunt and uncle, or grand mother and grandfather. The single family unit is not a part of this society.

BELIEFS!

4½ - These people do not believe in a God, per se. They believe in the concept of a force, a force that governs everything in the universe. They believe that this force has an awareness, a consciousness which can be found in anything --- animate or inanimate. For example if this force was their "GOD", then their "GOD" is represented by everything in existence. A tree, or a rock is just as much a reflection of this force as is man. These people do not worship a god, but ^{acknowledge} ~~worship~~ this "force" which can be found everywhere --- they worship life.
