SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

From the third week in February 1989 to the fourth week of March 1989 inclusively, a terrorist group described as the "Arab United Front" will attempt to place a "letter bomb" aboard a British Airways "DC-9/DC-10" aircraft in Milan Italy. The aircraft will be en route to Tel Aviv, Israel. The letter bomb will be disguised in a courier-type envelope, as in a UPS package. The perpetrator was phonetically identified as "Aawryles/Arogiles/Aawryles" a suspected terrorist who currently resides in Milan.

Some passengers appear to be associated with the firm, "Schulite/Sholite" (phonetic), a telecommunication company and a subsidiary of a European firm known as "Dexetron" (phonetic). Additional passengers who may prove to be identifiable include a person bearing the name "Dewpont/Dewpoint" (phonetic), an unidentified business man from Ohio, and "the English Ambassador to Israel."
