SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

Site is a structure. The structure is heavy and has aspects of large sweeping curves, supported ceilings and high ceilings or overhangs. There appear to be seats in large numbers or benches. Concepts associated with the word "benches" are: pews, seats, wooden, stone, chapel, prayer room, and waiting room.

There are aspects of pinnacles or pointed objects which are moving constantly (see sketches pages 6,7,8, and 9). The area around the structure is moving or has movement of many different types and forms. As relative to the site were of elevation, looking down at large expansive areas of light colored terrain with dark spots on it. There are doorways and rooms with high ceilings and austere surroundings or contents. Concepts associated with the words "bare essentials" are: food, water, cups, bed, bowls, books, clothing, monks, monastery, sanctuary, prison, and confinement. There appears to plant life in the area -- mostly if not exclusively below the site (or main area of the site).

As at the site was also one of comfort, warm feelings or "at home" perceptions.

MEAT POISONING. See FOOD POISONING; TRICHINA.

MEATH, maritime county, of E. Ireland, Leinster Province, bounded on the N by Cavan and Louth, E by the Irish Sea, S by Dublin, Kildare, and Offaly, and W by Westmeath; area 940 sq. mi.; pop. (1946) 68,220. The surface of Meath is a high fertile plain, which rises slightly to undulating hills in the north-west. The principal rivers are the Boyne, Dee, Delvin, Nanny, and Blackwater, all of which are noted as trout and salmon fishing streams. Meath has no lakes of any importance. The Royal Canal forms the southern border between Meath and Offaly and Kildare. There is a coastline of about 70 miles, but no good harbor in that distance. Agriculture and stock raising occupy most of the people of county Meath. Oats, potatoes and turnips are raised. Cattle and sheep are grazed, and there are numerous chicken farms. The only manufactures are textile factories producing linens of every texture and woven cloth and goods. There are many remains of ancient castles, monasteries, round towers, and burial mounds. Kells is famous for ecclesiastical objects, and in the county are also to be found Drogheda, Charard, Mellmont, and Dective abbeyes. At Tara is the traditional site of the early Irish capital and first Irish royal palace. The chief modern towns are Trim, the county seat, and Navan, and Kells. K. E. H.

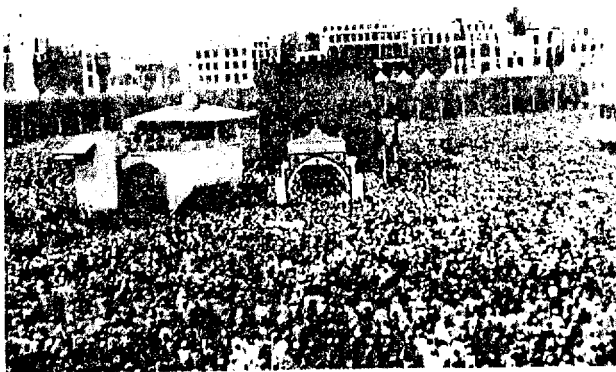

MECCA, holy city of the Islam world, birthplace of Mohammed, in Saudi Arabia, capital of Hejaz two-foot-wide belt, consisting of Koranic texts worked in gold-plated wire, is sent from India. Of the pilgrims' sacred rites probably the most important are to walk seven times around the Kaaba, to run seven times between the two hills Safa and Merwa, and to stand in prayer and hear a sermon on the sacred Mount Arafat, outside the city, where Mohammed prayed. If he is able to afford it, each adult male pilgrim sacrifices a sheep. See MOHAMMEDANISM.

Mecca is supposed to have been the home of Ishmael and his descendants, and of some early tribes. The Kaaba and many PILGRIM customs antedate Mohammed. In 692 the city set up its own caliph, who, however, was subsequently defeated. In spite of various struggles for independence, Mecca has been successively under the supremacy of Arabian, Egyptian, Turkish, and again Arabian rulers. The Turkish sultan first assumed power in 1513, ruling through the sherifs, supposed descendants of an ancestor of Mohammed. Later the sultan placed a governor in power, and the influence of the sherifs declined. During World War I Sherif Hussein, aided by the English through the famous T. E. Lawrence, threw off Turkish rule, and assumed the title of King of Hejaz. Hussein, after a struggle, was defeated by Ibn Saud, the Sultan of Nejd, in 1925, who later became king of Saudi Arabia. In 1927 a treaty with Great Britain guaranteed the protection and good treatment of pilgrims on their journeys to and from Mecca. Pop. about 80,000. C. S.

MECHANICAL DRAWING, a type of instrumental drawing showing various views of an object as observed by geometric projection. Such projected views are not true views, but are so shown to produce unimpaired projections in an object and are drawn to a definite scale. Completed drawings may include complete dimensioning, notes, and symbols for production, material lists, and other directions which cover working instructions for completion of the work. In general, there are assembly drawings which show the completed work, and detail drawings wherein one or more unit parts are fully developed on one sheet. The detail and assembly drawings are labeled and numbered to prevent loss of any sheet from the set.

Fig. 1 shows the boxlike arrangement of the planes of projection as they are assumed to exist in projection in the third quadrant. (The quadrants of projection will be discussed later.) Points and lines of the pillow block enclosed in the planes are projected perpendicularly to the planes, hence the term "orthographic

Province, at 21° 25' N lat. and 40° 15' E long., 46 miles by asphalt road (completed 1940) E of its port, Jidda, on the E shore of the Red Sea. Mecca is situated in a narrow valley surrounded by rocky hills, and is subject to intense summer heat between April and October, at which times the provincial government is moved to Taif. Always a center of trade, Mecca now subsists principally on the sale of articles to pilgrims. Stone monuments mark the limits of the Holy City, and past these markers non-Moslems are not permitted to go. All Mohammedans hope at some time in their lives to make the pilgrimage (hajj) to the Holy City, and annually the pilgrims number more than 125,000 men, women, and children. The great mosque, Beit Aitah, in the lower part of the city contains the KAABA, a massive, cubelike structure said to have been built by Abraham. In 450 the Kaaba was seized by an ancestor of Mohammed. Its four sides are shrouded in black silk renewed annually at the time of the pilgrimage. This, known as the "holy carpet," has two openings to reveal the sacred stones, one of which, a black one, is a very
