FOIPA Request No.: 1417683-000
Subject: FILE NUMBER 62-HQ-46855 (BOOK REVIEW FILE)

Dear Mr. Greenewald:
Records responsive to your request were previously processed under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). Below you will find informational paragraphs relevant to your request. Please read each item carefully.

Enclosed are 4,124 pages of previously processed documents and a copy of the Explanation of Exemptions. This release is being provided to you at no charge.

Documents or information referred to other Government agencies were not included in this release.
Please be advised that additional records responsive to your subject exist. If this release of previously processed material does not satisfy your information needs for the requested subject, you may request the additional records for processing.

Requester Response

[ Yes, process and provide me the additional records responsive to my subject.
[ No, close my request.
Please submit your response within thirty (30) days by mail or fax to-Work Processing Unit, 170 Marcel Drive, Winchester, VA 22602, fax number (540) 868-4997. Please cite the FOIPA Request Number in your correspondence.

If we do not receive your decision within thirty (30) days of the date of this notification, your request will be closed.

For your information, Congress excluded three discrete categories of law enforcement and national security records from the requirements of the FOIA. See 5 U.S. C. § 552(c) (2006 & Supp. IV (2010). This response is limited to those records subject to the requirements of the FOIA. This is a standard notification that is given to all our requesters and should not be taken as an indication that excluded records do, or do not, exist.

For questions regarding our determinations, visit the www.fbi.gov/foia website under "Contact Us." The FOIPA Request Number listed above has been assigned to your request. Please use this number in all correspondence concerning your request.

You may file an appeal by writing to the Director, Office of Information Policy (OIP), United States Department of Justice, Suite 11050, 1425 New York Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20530-0001, or you may submit an appeal through OIP's FOIA online portal by creating an account on the following web site: https://www.foiaonline.gov/foiaonline/action/public/home. Your appeal must be postmarked or electronically transmitted within ninety (90) days from the date of this letter in order to be considered timely. If you submit your appeal by mail, both the letter and the envelope should be clearly marked "Freedom of Information Act Appeal." Please cite the FOIPA Request Number assigned to your request so it may be easily identified.

You may seek dispute resolution services by contacting the Office of Government Information Services (OGIS) at 877-684-6448, or by emailing ogis@nara.gov. Alternatively, you may contact the FBI's FOIA Public Liaison by emailing foipaquestions@fbi.gov. If you submit your dispute resolution correspondence by email, the subject heading should clearly state "Dispute Resolution Services." Please also cite the FOIPA Request Number assigned to your request so it may be easily identified.

EXPLANATION OF EXEMPTIONS

SUBSECTIONS OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 552

(b)(1) (A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified to such Executive order;
(b)(2) related solely to the internal personnel rules and practices of an agency;
(b)(3) specifically exempted from disclosure by statute (other than section 552 b of this title), provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld;
(b)(4) trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential;
(b)(5) inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency;
(b)(6) personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;
(b)(7) records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information ( A ) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings, ( B ) would deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication, ( C ) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, ( D ) could reasonably be expected to disclose the identity of confidential source, including a State, local, or foreign agency or authority or any private institution which furnished information on a confidential basis, and, in the case of record or information compiled by a criminal law enforcement authority in the course of a criminal investigation, or by an agency conducting a lawful national security intelligence investigation, information furnished by a confidential source, ( E ) would disclose techniques and procedures for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions, or would disclose guidelines for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions if such disclosure could reasonably be expected to risk circumvention of the law, or ( F ) could reasonably be expected to endanger the life or physical safety of any individual;
(b)(8) contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of an agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions; or geological and geophysical information and data, including maps, concerning wells.

SUBSECTIONS OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 552a

(d)(5) information compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action proceeding;
(j)(2) material reporting investigative efforts pertaining to the enforcement of criminal law including efforts to prevent, control, or reduce crime or apprehend criminals;
(k)(1) information which is currently and properly classified pursuant to an Executive order in the interest of the national defense or foreign policy, for example, information involving intelligence sources or methods;
(k)(2) investigatory material compiled for law enforcement purposes, other than criminal, which did not result in loss of a right, benefit or privilege under Federal programs, or which would identify a source who furnished information pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence;
(k)(3) material maintained in connection with providing protective services to the President of the United States or any other individual pursuant to the authority of Title 18, United States Code, Section 3056;
(k)(4) required by statute to be maintained and used solely as statistical records;
(k)(5) investigatory material compiled solely for the purpose of determining suitability, eligibility, or qualifications for Federal civilian employment or for access to classified information, the disclosure of which would reveal the identity of the person who furnished information pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence;
(k)(6) testing or examination material used to determine individual qualifications for appointment or promotion in Federal Government service the release of which would compromise the testing or examination process;
(k)(7) material used to determine potential for promotion in the armed services, the disclosure of which would reveal the identity of the person who furnished the material pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence.

FOREWORD

Many schools of New Mexico have been teaching about communism, it's evils and fallacies for several years. However, not all schools have been able to give this instruction. In some instances local citizens have objected to the teaching about communism; in other instances teachers have felt the need of an approved guide and lists of resource materials, which were not available. Recently large number of citizens, associations and committees have requested that instruction about communism in the schools should be given approval with direction and assistance from the State Department of Education.

Some state legislatures have passed laws requiring that communism be taught at the high school level. Such laws have been passed in Florida and Louisiana.

The bibliography included in this publication has been evaluated and approved by persons recognized as knowledgeable on the subject of communism.

The use of communist materials, such as the communist manifesto, should not be excluded from the instructional program. However, when materials written by communists are used they should be carefully identified as such and students should be informed that the material is of communist origin. These materials should be used only to demonstrate the evils, fallacies and contradictions of communism:
Teachers should be carefully selected and thoroughly informed if they are assigned to teach a course about communism. Teachers who do not feel that they are properly prepared to teach about communism should enroll in special courses and get the proper preparation. Some of the colleges and universities of New Mexico will offer short courses for such teachers beginning in the fall of 1962 , if enough teachers request the need for such help.

It is recommended that this course be taught in the eleventh or twelfth grades. This plan will give students an opportunity to be well informed on the American Heritage before they approach this course, and thus be better able to make wise comparisons. This plan provides time for the careful study about communism instead of acquiring a few irrelevant facts. This approach also equips the student to defend human freedom.

The enemy threatening human freedom today has manpower, resources and technological weapons for waging war. Our nation has repeatedly demonstrated faith in our heritage of democratic ideals and courage to praise freedom and also be free. Now we hope that each student in our schools will be imbued with a deep sense of responsibility to defend this freedom.

Recognition is due Ellen Hartnett Digneo who worked diligently in compiling and editing this material.

Tom Wiley
Superintendent of Public Instruction

Many colleagues in the Department of Education and local school systems have provided valuable assistance in the preparation of this handbook. Special acknowledgment should go to George P. White, Chief, Instructional Services Area, who carried extra assignments to release my time for writing. State Superintendent Tom Wiley and Mr. White encouraged the pursuit of this task and assisted from time to time by reading the manuscript and making suggestions as did each of the following:

Mr. E. P. Ripley, Attorney, State Department of Education
Mr. Calloway Taulbee, Director of Secondary Education
Mr. Joe Lawler, Coordinator, Information Services Area
Dr. Lynn I. Perrigo, Professor of History & Social Science, New Mexico Highlands University, Las Vegas
Dr. Paige W. Christiansen, Head of Department of Humanities, New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, Socorro Nickie W. Meeks, My Secretary, has been especially helpful in the preparation of this manuscript.

The resource unit on Americanism vs. Communism published by the Floxida State Department of Education and the guide Teaching About Communism by the Ventura County Schools have also been extremely helpful.

In particular, I wish to salute the teachers who will use this handbook and go far beyond the suggestions given here. For as the teacher expands the realistic teaching, the student will understand the nature of communism and appreciate the heritage of American ideals. They will also appreciate the rights, duties and privileges of American ciltizenship.

[^0]On June 27, 1961 Tom Wiley, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, with the approval of the State Board of Education, appointed a statewide advisory committee on citizenship to work closely with the Instructional Services Area of the Department of Education to assess current practices with respect to teaching good citizenship and to make recommendations for extension of citizenship programs.

The committee was directed to be concerned not only with evaluation of formal courses such as civics and government but also with classroom and other extra-curricular activities which lend themselves to the demonstration of good citizenship practices.
"Although the schools have always taken leadership in the development of good citizens", Mr. Wiley said, "in times like these we must insure that the schools are making maximum effort within their areas of responsibility."

The committee has met several times and has developed some suggestions which will be helpful in strengthening our teaching of American heritage in the schools of New Mexico.

The New Mexico Directors of Instruction chose the topic, "An Articulated Social Studies Program: Grades One Through Twelve", at their annual meeting which was held on the New Mexico State University Campus at Las Cruces, January 19 and 20, 1962. The impact of this two day program was very effective in arousing interest in planning curriculum materials for teaching about communism and in alerting this group of leaders concerning menaces to American democracy.

Ross Malone, Attorney from Roswe 11, addressed the banquet meeting of this group. His topic was, "Menaces to American Democracy". Copies of "Menaces to American Democracy" by Ross Malone are available by writing to Mrs. Ellen Hartnett Digneo, Director of Teacher Education and Social Studies, State Department of Education, Santa Fe, New Mexico.

On March 24, 1962 a statewide workshop was held on the campus of New Mexico School of Mining and Technology, Socorro, New Mexico。 Dr. Paige W. Christiansen, Assistant Professor of Humanities, assisted by John Fanta, Director of Student Affairs and Mrs. Ellen Hartnett Digneo of the State Department of Education did the preliminary planning. About 100 teachers attended the meeting and showed an interest in continuing the study about comnunism.

The Roswell Public Schools have published an excellent booklet:

TEACHING ABOUT COMMUNISM, Roswe11 City Schools, Roswe11 N. Mex.
The Administration of the Roswell City Schools is acutely aware of the responsibility it holds in the present war of ideas and the crucial struggle for the minds of men. What the graduates of the Roswell City Schools think and know about our country and our way of life, together with what they think and know about our antagonist, communism, will directly bear upon the future of our great country.

This booklet was produced in the belief that the Patrons of the Roswell City Schools are interested in the part the schools are playing in this great struggle. It is designed to afford a quick over-all view of the minimum basic program being taught in the Roswell City Schools from grades seven through twelve in regard to our American heritage and the Communist danger. Most of the material contained in this booklet is simply an adaptation of material drawn from the courses of study for each of the following subjects required of all students:

Geography--Grade 7 (full year course)
U.S. History--Grade 8 (full year course)

Civics--Grade 9 (full year course)
World History--Grade 10 (full year course)
American History--Grade 11 (full year course)
American Government--Grade 12 (half year course)
The course of study for each of the above subjects is revised annually by the teachers themselves.

The statement that this booklet outlines the minimum basic program cannot be over-emphasized. Each teacher will go well beyond these required minimums in his own way and using his own choice of additional materials ranging from films and filmstrips through the teacher's own syllabus on communism which he may have developed.

The extent to which the teachers take the teaching of our American heritage and the communist threat beyond the required specifics of the course of study is well illustrated by noting that in one school year they use thirty-three school owned films, one-hundred-fifty school owned filmstrips, forty-three rental films, and approximately thirty films brought to us by private interests, all dealing with history and private enterprise.

But regardless of how much more any teacher may find the time and ability to do, the minimum requirements are met by all. LOS ALAMOS AND ALAMOGORDO PUBLIC SCHOOLS are also reorganizing their entire social studies program to give strength and a new emphasis on world affairs. These and other programs will be reported in the state Social Studies Bulletin, as we receive complete plans from the schools.

The Alamogordo outline shows how the American Heritage program in the lower grades will emphasize the American way of life and prepare students to meet: the Communist threat.

SANDIA HIGH SCHOOL PROJECT, Albuquerque, New Mexico
Sandia High School's History Department developed an excellent unit in the area of teaching about communism this past year, 1961-62. In a series of History Department meetings devoted to instructional problems in teaching about Communism the following conclusions were reached:

1. There was a definite need for the instruction of this topic.
2. The World History classes, composed of seniors, were the logical ones to deal with this topic.
3. Under the present system there was no coordination among the teachers involved in the teaching of this topic on an individual basis. Some teachers were doing more in this area than others.
4. Some teachers felt they were not adequately prepared to teach about this topic.
5. It was generally agreed that the ideal situation would be one where every teacher would deal with this topic within the framework of his World History course. However, since some teachers were not able to do this for reasons of preparation, it was decided to experiment with an instructional approach that would involve the following:
a. A basic and uniform unit on Communism would be presented.
b. The World History classes in each of our six period daily schedule would be grouped together for the presentation of this unit.
c. The instruction would be handled by a modified version of the team-teaching method. This would enable teachers to teach those phases of the topic in which they felt better intormed. An important secondary aim in the use of this method was that it would provide an "in-service training" experience for those teachers who were weak in this area of subject matter.

Planning the Content Material
The staff was generally agreed that the content material that gave teachers the most trouble was the philosophy and theory of Communism. The historical events leading to, and including, the Russian Revolution as we11 as the development of the Soviet Union since the Revolution were considered as phases that could be easily covered by each individual teacher before the basic unit was presented.

It was decided that three basic topics, presented in three lectures, would serve as the core around which our unit would be constructed. These three topics were presented in the first three days of the unit. We attempted, with some success, to present the following stages of development for Communism:

1. The development of socialism as a reaction to the uncontrolled growth of the Industrial Revolution.

The social and politicial schools of thought in socialism that were sympathet:ic to democracy, as well as those that took anti-democratic positions, were discussed. This, of course, was to be a prelude to the "scientific socialism" of Karl Marx.
2. The origin of the Marxist philosophy and how it became the core of the communist ideology. Here, the basic principles of the political and economic theories of Marx were covered, and presented to serve as a background to the phillosophy adopted by the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia.
3. The adoption and modification of the Marxist philosophy by Lenin and Staliln. Also included in this presentation was a sumnary of the doctrinal modifications effected by the Soviets in more recent times.

With these three presentations as the foundation, the group was then able to advance to other aspects of the unit, namely:

1. Why does Communism appeal to people? This was covered by a film.
2. What tactics are used by Communism? This was covered by a film.
3. Communist territorial expansion since World War II.
4. A statement on Communism by the F.B.I. This was presented by a tape recording. We had planned to have a guest speaker but cilcumstances did not permit it.
5. Aspects of international communism. Motives, tactics and objectives of the Soviet Union were presented through an interesting film featuring former Ambassador George Kennan.
6. The last topic was included to provide a bit of intellectual spice. It was presented by our psychology teacher who showed a genuine interest in participating in our team-teaching effort.

Instructional Materials

1. Library books dealing with the topic were placed on reserve and students were given a bibliography.
2. One tape recording borrowed from the local F.B.I. office.
3. The three films mentioned above were borrowed from the Fourth Army Film Exchange of Fort Bliss, Texas. Some of these films are also available from the Film Library of Kirtland Base.

Evaluation of the Unit

Subject Matter

A uniform test was administered to the 405 students who were involved in the unit. Test results generally followed the usual grade range pattern established by each individual class. In other words, we are safe in saying that we were able to put our material across with about the-same- degree of effectiveness as if we were engaged in individual classroom teaching.

Student Reaction

Each student was asked to express his reaction to the unit. At least $85 \%$ of the students expressed favorable reaction. More important, they were very constructive in their criticism, and many of their recommendations would certainly strengthen our unit if we were to present it again in the future to another group.

Most of the students felt they needed more time for this unit. Ten days did not give sufficient time for questions. Several students suggested that factual comparis on of the two doctrines would have been very helpful.

General Teacher Evaluation
The unit was generally successful in accomplishing our basic objectives. Needless to say, we were guilty of many shortcomings that can be attributed to our lack of experience in this sort of thing. It is not certain that we will try the same approach next year, even though we all seem favorably disposed to do so, but if we do, we will try to incorporate the following recommendations in order to strengthen areas of weakness:

1. Better coordination of the lecture material presented by each teacher to avoid omissions and repetitions.
2. Inclusion of more current Soviet objectives and tactics.
3. Inclusion of a comparat:ive analysis of the democratic system and the communist system.
4. Presentation, perhaps iln dramatic form, of how Americans must be prepared to meet and refute antidemocratic arguments.
5. Allow more time for question and answer sessions after the lectures.

NEW MEXICO HIGHLANDS UNIVERSITY, Las Vegas, New Mexico
New Mexico Highlands University has had a special summer program of courses in American St:udies sponsored by the Coe Foundation as a positive approach to the inculcation of American ideals. In the summer of 1961 and again in 1962 twenty teachers from New Mexico high schools were awarded scholarships for "refresher" studies in this program.

1. To teach of the traditions, ideals and achievements of American democracy and of our economic and social institutions.
2. To develop an appreciation of the American heritage, democratic processes, freedom of opportunity, enterprise under law and the will to preserve that freedom.
3. To understand the world in which our young people live and the affairs about which they will be privileged to vote.
4. To understand Soviet Communism and the threats to the freedom of the people of our nation (ignorance is dangerous).
5. To understand that an informed thoughtful knowledge and discussion will strengthen Americans.
6. To understand the nature and implications of the policies we must combat.
7. Study and compare the political, social and economic life in the U.S.S.R. and the United States thus strengthening democratic loyalties and deepening understandings of democratic ideals.
8. To understand the appeal of Communism in Communist and Satellite countries.
9. To understand the varied and changing meaning of the term Communism through the past two thousand years.
10. To understand differing definitions of communism.
11. To realize that existing dictatorships have given new meanings to the term communism.

Americans usually agree that the individual has responsibilities as well as rights and privileges. One of these responsibilities is maintaining and defending freedom. If the liberty of an individual is taken away there is no freedom. The individual's right to own property, buy and sell in a free market and earn a fair profit for this effort makes up the strength of America's competitive system. America's courts of justice and political and religious freedoms protect our liberties and give worth and dignity to the individual.

The worth of the state, in the long run, is the worth of the individuals compassing it....A state which dwarfs its men in order that they may be docile instruments in its hands even for beneficial purposes....will find that with small men no great things can be accomplished.

Thus wrote John Stuart Mill, the English Philosopher, in his famous essay on Liberty (1859).

Americanism consists of many ingredients-a devotion to principles that enhance an ideal of religious tolerance, patriotism, freedom, courage, integrity and an abiding faith in the United States of America.

The American way of life is reflected in the lives of great presidents; Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and many more. The inventors, the author:s and artists all made a special contribution which permitted the light from the past to help us find the road to the future. Citizenship is strengthened by understanding our past: Knowledge alone will not make anyone a good citizen, but lack of knowledge will limit an individual ${ }^{1}$ s effectiveness.

History explains why we think, believe, and act as we do. When we study the principles cherished by the best and wisest men among our Founding Fathers and the corresponding leaders of the Twentieth Century, there is one principle which remains unchanged throughout the history of our country. This is the principle that each individual has dignity and worth. This principle is not so much the product of America as America is a product of it. Many Americans feel that the magnificent human struggle toward making this principle a part of the daily lives of citizens is truly the American way of life, or Americanism.

The importance of each individual, his dignity and worth is of utmost importance to Americans. As we study the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, we feel the strength of the American ideal. The Declaration of Independence states that:

All men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Government in America is the creation of the people and its power rests with them. Provisions for changing the Constitution (by ballot and majority rule) was provided by the founders of our country. Jefferson also maintained that legal rights and liberties of all individuals and minorities must be protected against the passion of the mob, the vigilance of the party, the power of the privileged, the tyranny of secret police, the caprice of officials and the ambition of mad men.

In 1960, the noted jurist, Learned Hand, wrote:
The spirit of liberty is a spirit which is not too sure that it is right...which seeks to understand the minds of other men and women...remembers that not even a sparrow falls to earth unheeded...(it) is the spirit of Him who...taught mankind that lesson it has never learned but has not quite forgotten; that there may be a kingdom where the least shall be heard and considered....with the greatest. 1

Liberty is expressed in the different way Americans support divergent views. Diversity is one of the marks of liberty.

America is a nation of laws, even though we do not all see every issue facing this nation alike. If we feel that a law is not good we are free to work through proper channels of government to repeal the law.

In America we believe in the philosophy of union with dissent and a freedom which permits the minority approach to a problem within the confines of unity and the framework of law and order.

Firmly established in the American principle of individual dignity and worth is the belief that only when individuals are given free access to all different competing viewpoints can

[^1]they recognize what is honest and right and decide wisely which course to follow. The individual is given an opportunity through this method to direct his own destiny and to cooperate in the building of a strong nation. The cooperative efforts of individuals are important and fundamental in the American way of life. Jefferson impressed this upon us when he stated in the Declaration of Independence:

With a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Americanism is the recognition of the truth that the inherent and fundamental rights of man are derived from God and not from governments, societies, dictators, kings or majorities. 2

Many Americans say that Americanism cannot be defined. It is indeed difficult to define adequately in a brief statement. Americans follow many creeds and many solutions are sought to solve the problems facing the citizens. However, we do know that cooperative efforts of individuals are essential in the American way of life。

Americanism is expressed in the Declaration of Independence where our forefathers said that all men are created equal and that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, chief among which are life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. From this Declaration and the well-established interpretations that have been put upon it from the beginning of the Republic down to the present moment it is clear that Americanism recognizes the exist-

[^2]ence of a God and the all-important fact that the fundamental rights of man are derived from God and not from any other source. Amons these inalienable rights which are the gifts of man from his Creator are: (1) freedom of worship; (2) freetlom of speech; (3) freedom of press; (4) freedom of assemblage; (5) freedom to work in such occupation as the experience, training, and qualifications of a man may enable him to secure and hold; (6) freedom to enjoy the fruits of his work, which means the protection of property rights; (7) the right to pursue his happiness with the necessary implication that he does not harm or injure others in the pursuit of this happiness. Upon this basic principle, the whole structure of the American Government was constructed. The system of checks and balances in the Constitution was wisely conceived and ingeniously constructed to provide every possible guaranty that every citizen of the United States would enjoy and retain his God-given rights. First, the Federal Government was specifically enjoined from exercising any power that was not expressly or by necessary implication granted to it in the Constitution. Second, such powers as the Federal Government was authorized to wield were wisely distributed between the three great departments, the exectuvie, the legislative, and the judicial. The essence of Americanism is therefore class, religious, and racial tolerance. It should be emphasized in the strongest language possible that the maintenance of these three forms of tolerance is essential to the preservation of Americanism. They constitute the three great pillars upon which our Constitutional Republic rests, and if any of these pillars is destroyed, the whole structure of the American system of government will crumble to the earth. Therefore, the man who advocates class hatred is plainly un-American even if he professes racial and religious tolerance. The converse of this proposition is equally true. It is as un-American to hate one's neighbor (who)... has more of this world's material goods as it is to hate him because he was born into another race or worships God according to a different faith.

The American Government was established to guarantee the enjoyment of these fundamental rights. It therefore, follows that in Anerica the Government is the servant of the people. The rights of the people are protected through laws and their strict enforcement. For this reason, law and order are essential to the preservation of Americanism while lawlessness and violence are distinctly un-American.
Americanism means the recognition of the God-given rights of man and the protection of those rights under the Constitution through the instrumentality of an independent Congress, an untramelled judiciary, and a fair and impartial Executive operating under the American system of checks and balances. Americanism likewise means the protection of an unorganized majority from an organized minority as well as the protection of a helpless minority from an inconsiderate and thoughtless majority.

The characteristic which distinguishes our Republic from the dictatorships of the world is not majority rule but the treatment of minorities. Dictatorships muster huge majorities at the polls, through intimidation and high-powered government propaganda, but these majorities are used for ruthless tyranny over minorities. The majority rule of the American form of government is distinguished by its recognition of certain rights of minorities which majorities cannot alienate.

All of these definitions of Americanism are based upon the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. 2

[^3]WHY STUDY ABOUT COMMUNISM AND CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES

Twenty years ago Russia was not considered to be one of the important places or forces manacling American democracy. Many changes have taken place in the world. The changes are political, economic and social. With these changes have come problems, new issues and new sources of world tensions. Thus, America faces ever increasing threats to democracy. Ralph Linton, the noted anthropologist, has said, "One understands his own culture much better if it is held in focus with at least one other"。

Since Lenin made the declaration that, "The future belongs to youth - To win the world's youth for communism is to win the future", an intensive effort has been made by the Party to attract youth to join the "Revolutionary Movement". Among the one-billion people, approximately one third of the world's population now controlled by communists, are many youths who must live under the totalitarian regime of communism.

Many young people of our state and nation know more about the communist conquest for world domination than we realize. Some have learned from youths from Cuba; some have read and studied about the communist conspiracy. We must be sure that all high school youth have the opportunity to study the history and conspiracy in order to thwart the Party's Plan to win youth for communism and also to strengthen our American freedom.

The instruction about communism should not be designed to create hysteria or despair. The study should foster sober understanding of the dangers. It should be remembered that the study about communism is controversial. Our country's security is threatened by its plan. "In spite of the problems encountered, teaching about communism is urgently required not only in the name of up-to-date education and also in the name of National Civil Defense", says Dr. Gerhart Niemeyer, Professor of Political Science at the University of Notre Dame.

We should teach the foundations of American democracy, citizenship and our American heritage in a manner which will develop patriotic Americans we11 rounded in an awareness of their privileges, opportunities and responsibilities.

If communist students can be inspired by their purposes of destruction, how much more American students should be inspired by the defense of truth, love and order.

Students should be given reasons for studying about the nature, evils, and fallacies of communism. The strongest reason for the study of communism today is that totalitarian communism is now the foremost threat to the American way of life.

The democratic process and American system is founded on free exchange of ideas. As we come to grips with problems, work out differences and make our decisions, the democratic process is at work. The schools play an important part in developing attitudes and competencies needed by the citizen of a democratic state. We11 planned studies of controversial issues should help to prepare youths to resolve problems which they will meet in life.

Statement of Policy Important
A school can only deal with important problems of a controversial nature when it has the full support of the parents and school officials as well as the teacher. There are many problems - social, economic and political - which deal with everyday issues. A survey made by the N.E.A. showed various lay groups objecting to controversial issues listed here: religion, education, sex education, local politics, communism, socialism, public ownership, national politics, race relations, labor management, the United Nations. Therefore, teachers should have a clear written statement of policy from the local board of education before they begin this course on communism, rather than going forward fearfully or refraining from teaching that which should be taught.

The New Mexico State Board of: Education, through adoption of this bulletin, is giving endorsement to the study about communism.

Local and national teachers' organizations are making resolutions endorsing the treatment of controversial issues in the schools. When a local board clecides to give approval to the teaching about any controversial issue it is best to work through an advisory committee. This committee should then issue a policy statement that guarantees freedom to learn. The advisory committee should be made up of laymen, teachers and administrators. Working within the policies of the committee, teachers are protected from pressure groups and pupils can study and discuss significant issues in an objective atmosphere.

Many have questioned whether pupils should study problems which society itself has been unable to solve. However, it is important to realize that youth needs a sound introduction to the problems that confront the nation. Perhaps the proper study of these difficult topics will help develop some of the attitudes and techniques by which these important issues may eventually be resolved. Young people on the threshold of citizenship should be aware of, and able to grapple with, some of these unsolved problems. As the study unfolds, many varieties of opportunities develop for action. As pupils and teachers analyze and discuss chronic issues, and as they come to mutual agreement concerning solutions, the school is initiating one of the most potent forces for cultural improvement that education has presented to society. Children of all ages should discuss appropriate controversial issues. It is doubtful that comunism should be studied seriously before grade eleven or twelve.

Here are two sets of criteria which will help in the decision concerning the study of controversial issues:
Set 非:

1. Does the study contribut:e to the achievement of social science goals?
2. Will the study deal with an important aspect of living which is significant to the pupils?
3. Is the study related to past experiences and will it lead to broader interests and study of other significant problems?
4. Is the study within the range and ability of the group?
5. Will the study provide opportunities to satisfy basic needs of the students?
6. Are there enough factual and reference resource materials available for the study?

Set 非2:

1. Are the pupils mature enough to study this issue?
2. Is the issue of interest to the pupils?
3. Is the issue timely?
4. Has the issue been placed at the correct grade level for study?
5. Does the teacher feel prepared to handle the problem successfully?
6. Can study materials be provided for the study?
7. Is enough time allowed to justify the study?
8. Is the community ready for the study?

Three Purposes of the Study About Communism:

1. Education is the surest protection against agression of communist ideas." Education must create a strong will to resist attacks upon the American system of government.
2. The study of Russia and its system of government serves as an admirable vehicle for clarifying the meaning of our own ideas. All too little is done to instruct about the values of our way of life.
3. A third purpose for teaching about the Soviet Union is to impart information about its geographic and economic characteristics to pupils who need to know about the world in which they live. Aside from the ideological characteristics, the geographic facts about U.S.S.R. should be included in the education of every American citizen.

A thorough grounding in essentials of the American way of life is important. Even the unrealistic claims of progress by communists should cause the American to rebel against the price of liberty these gains cost. We should so love liberty that no material advantage would ever induce us to put it on a bargain counter. Education has no greater responsibility than to keep this principle alive in the hearts of each American. When this is done properly, nothing we learn about the U.S.S.R. can threaten our future.

Silence on the subject of communism in the school curriculum is not golden. To exclude a study of Russia and it's ideology serves chiefly to leave the pupil uninformed about the most dangerous adversary our country has ever known. Any timidity educators and boards of education may feel about introducing the study of the U.S.S.R. should be promptly suspended in favor of a carefully prepared program of instruction, said Car1 F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools, Washington, D. C. ${ }^{3}$

Freedom - America's Choice, Articles adapted from Reader's Digest, 1962.

[^4]The new role of the United States in the Mid-20th Century is based on the recognition of the fact that the peoples of the world are interdependent. Point four and technical assistance programs; alliances and regional agreements, including military assistance to allies; re-examination of trade policies; loans for industrial development; participation in the United Nations and its agencies are all evidences of an increased awareness of American responsibilities outside American borders.

American citizens must realize world interdependence and the measures of cooperation that must be implemented by national states and by individual citizens.

A citizen is a member of a state which in return for allegiance or fealty guarantees its protection to persons and property and insures the enjoyment of civic rights and privileges. A state not only extends protection to citizens at home but also usually extends diplomatic protection when traveling or residing abroad. 4 The problem here is that few people realize their own individual part of the guarantee (in return for allegiance). Many Americans accept the enjoyment of civic rights as well as the privileges offered by the government without giving a second thought to the allegiance on their own part.

World Book Encyclopedia, p. 1435.

Since our federal union was formed, American schools have given increasing attention to American History and Government. Even the elementary, junior high school, senior high school and college curricula have American History in one form or another firmly established: Courses in Civics or Government have also gained status. The rise of totalitarian governments in the $1920^{\circ}$ s and $1930^{\circ}$ s stimulated distinct and planned teaching of the traditions, ideals and achievements of American democracy and our economic and social institutions.

Many high schools have set up courses in the history and government of other nations. The offerings in European or World History have also increased during the past twenty-five years. Attention is also being given to the nature of democracy and it's totalitarian competitors.

The reason for requiring courses in history and other social studies is to develop an understanding by young citizens of the world in which they live and affairs about which they will be privileged to vote.

Some highly patriotic Americans have feared an understanding of Russia, and in particular, Soviet Communism. On the other hand many thoughtful people and responsible leaders in American public life have urged that understanding of Soviet Communism is essential to American citizens, that our loyalties must depend on informed and thoughtful knowledge and discussion rather than impressionistic feelings or prejudices.

The greater the threat of Communist propaganda or Soviet policy, the greater the need of our citizens to understand the nature of the appeals and the suggestions of the course of action we must fight against. Surely no one who has stopped to appraise our life in a democracy can believe that democratic institutions will suffer by comparison with life in U.S.S.R. The practical study about Soviet Communism should deepen understanding of and loyalty to democratic ideals and customs of our government.

All major nations and regions including the Soviet Union should be studied from the historic, the economic, the philosophical, the anthropoligical and the geographical point of view. As we proceed in our study of Soviet Communism, the analysis should bring about two understandings

First, we must understand how the meaning of the term communism has changed through the past two thousand years. Commuistic life has appealed to idealists in many societies. Early Christians, the Settlers of Jamestown and Plymouth and followers of social reformers responded to idealistic theories that contemporary commists still exploit in the U.S.S.R. and other places. Marxian Communism promised the workers material gains and status; however, these ideals are still conspicuously absent in Soviet life. Americans need to know and understand the conflicting, differing definitions of communism. They must also recognize that existing dictatorships are giving new meaning to the term.
Second, our democracy i& btter understood when we study contrasting political, economic and social systems. Such a study brings out the privileges and responsibilities of our democratic in citizenship.

As an aid to study communism a lengthy bibliography of read able materials is listed herein. These materials have been reviewed to assure reading for the average as well as the superior student. Much of the material is in terms of human experience such as reports of the U. S. Congress, House of Representatives, Committee on Un-American Activities, Senate Internal Security Sub-Comittee, Contradictions of Communism and J. Edgar Hoover's Masters of Deceit. These are just a few of the many listed references. The references have been chosen to encourage reading about history, ideology, party, the Soviet System, also about leaders, Aesopian language, fiction, non-fiction and philosophies. The materials are mostly in the form of narrative and descriptive history since this type of material is usually more effective with most high school students. Many of these references have succeeded in presenting the danger of the vital $1 s s u e s$ we face today.

Records of history reveal the fact that authoritarian govexnments in one form or another have repeatedly threatened human freedom. Mussolini, the fascist leader proclaimed:

There is no freedom of the individual; there is only freedom of people, nations and reces. The individual is only the means to achieve the noble purpose of the state. I spit upon the coref of liberty.

Suppression of human freedom i.s the objective of totalitarianism today. Weapons technology makes the present form of communism extremely dangerous. The Soviet Union and Communist China, controlled by a small group of unscrupulous men, are using an organized system of terror to achieve their objectives.

Today the threat is the Totalitarian Communist Party that uses espionage, subversion, agitation, propaganda and infiltration tactics in its effort to conquer the world. Under these conditions, the free world must continue to possess military strength superior to that of the communists and see that each citizen of the free world is prepared to meet and defeat communism. This is the challenge that we face today in America's classrooms.

Adequate planning for classroom instruction takes time. There are two distinct related phases to proper planning. These are pointed out in Education for Survival:

1. Overall preliminary planning. Such planning provides for ordering books, periodicals, films, filmstrips and other needed materials well in advance of the time when they will be needed for classroom use. This privides opportunity for teachers to plan well ahead for the subjects they will be called upon to teach. It enables them to familiarize themselves with course content, suitable teaching materials and other instructional resources. It facilitates lesson pianning.
2. The second phase of planning cannot be done adequately until the teacher knows the capabilities of students in the classes. Teaching plans must be appropriate to the level of the students understanding, their intellectual capacities, study habits and skills.

To facilitate lesson or teaching planning, some schools are providing time during the school day for selected teachers to prepare "resource units". Other schools are setting up workshops for principals, then they in turn will teach the teachers in an in-service program, the objectives, goals and program related to teaching about communism.

The Unit Plan is an outline of purposes, content, problems, activities and materials related to a given topic. Although there are variations among units, the major sections of most are typical. While there are many ways to approach the study about communism, the unit plan gives a diversified approach and an opportunity for all students to work at their capacity. Following a textbook or a lecture pattern confines the student to a narrow field of study. Obviously, if studies on the evils of communism are to be effective, students will need adequate references and current materials. Every school should endeavor to build a social studies materials center with materials of various levels available, so that every student will find information within his understanding.

Read about the life of Karl Marx. Born May 5, 1818 at Trier in the Rhineland. His parents, Herschel and Henriette, belonged to the respectable Jewish middle class. His father was a lawyer and a descendant of a long line of Jewish rabbis. His mother was a descendant of a Jewish family which had originally come from Holland. Neither the mother nor father accepted the official religion of the Pruissian State.
When Karl was twelve he entered the gymnasium at Trier. He was a brillant student at the age of eighteen. He entered the University of Bonn, with the intention of studying law.

Introduction or Initiation Statements:

Communism is not merely a set of ideas; it is an ideology combined with a combat organization. It is an organized ideological enterprise aiming to carry its ideology to power and to impose its power on the whole world.

Communism is admittedly committed to destroying capitalism as an economic system and democracy as a political system. The communists challenge every area of the American democratic way of life.

Communism is obviously in conflict with the democratic way of life which is accepted and supported by the people of the United States of America.

Communists have resurrected primitive approaches to life problems which substitute tyranny for democracy in government.

Communism can no longer be viewed passively. The people of the United States have come to realize that left alone communism has not faded away. It has continually grown in strength abroad until now it is a principal threat to the democratic way of 1ife.

Current thinking encourages a full knowledge and understanding of the communist system.

The truth concerning communism is the greatest means at hand for meeting its challenge.
J. Edgar Hoover has stazed, "Ilruth is the surest weapon against the lowering thre th of communism. More than anything else communists fear truth for deceit is their strategy."

The American Bar Association, The American Legion and the National Education Association add support to the plan of teaching about comunism in the following resolutions:

American Bar Association

Whereas, we recognize the urgency of instructing all Americans in the full scope and aims of communism and the increasing threat it poses to the free world and to our democracy and freedom under law to the end that an informed citizenry may successfully defend and preserve our American heritage; and

Whereas, our educational institutions, both public and private, especially at the secondary, college and adult levels afford the best means of developing sound programs of instruction in this area; and

Whereas, these institutions and educators, in accepting this responsibility, must be given public understanding and support;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved by the American Bar Association:
(1) That through our members and the cooperation of state and local bar associations we encourage and support our schools and colleges in the presentation of adequate instruction in the history, doctrines, objectives and techniques of communism, thereby helping to instill a greater appreciation of democracy and freedom under law and the will to preserve that freedom;
(2) That to insure the highest quality of instruction in this area, those responsible for our educational programs be urged to provide the appropriate training of instructors and to stimulate the production of scholarly textbooks and other teaching materials of professional excellence;
(3) That we seek to implement this resolution through a special committee of seven members to observe and encourage progress in this educational program and to render annual reports to the Association, the committee to include the Chairman of our Committees on American Citizenship, the Bill of Rights, and Communist Tactics, Strategy and Objectives, and one or more of our members who are educators.
---Resolution adopted by the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association, February 20, 1961.

The American Legion

Whereas, The American Legion lis vitally interested in the preservation of the fundamental principles of Americanism to the present and succeeding generations of citizens of these United States; and

Whereas, it is the belief of the Amexican Legion that there should be a regular couxse of instruction in each high school in the United States and its territories and possessions, which would: lst, clearly delineate the principles and policies which constitute the American system and why they are sound; and 2nd, teach the elements that comprise the Communist system and why it is evil,

Be it resolved, that the National Executive Committee does hereby urge each Department, District and post of The American Legion to work with their education officials to the end that every public and private secondary school in the United States and its territories and possessions will institute as a part of their regular curriculum suitable courses designed to deepen understanding of and loyalty to American democratic ideals and institutions and expose the fallacies of Communism.
---Resolution adopted by the American Legion Convention, Register No. 23, September 10-14, 1961 (Consolidation of Resolution No. 216 and Resolution No. 355.)

National Education Association

The responsibility of the schools is to teach the value of our American way of life, founded as it is on the dignity and worth of the individual; our youth should know it, believe it, and live it continuously.

As a measure of defense againsit our most potent threat, our American schools should teach about communism and all forms of totalitarianism, including the principles and practices of the Soviet Union and the Communist Party in the United States. Teaching about communism does not mean advocacy of communism. Such advocacy should not be permitted in American schools. At the same time the National Education Association condemns the careless, incorrect, and unjust use of such words as 'Red ${ }^{\text {B }}$ and 'Communist ${ }^{\text {B }}$ to attack teachers and other persons who in point of fact are not Communists, but who merely have views different from those of their accusers.

Members of the Communist Party should not be employed in our schools. Communist organizations and Communist front organizations should be required by law to register with the Attorney General of the United States.

The National Education Association strongly asserts that all schools have an obligation to teach the rights, privileges, and the responsibilities of living in a democracy.

The Association charges the teaching profession with the obligation of providing the best defense of democracy through full participation in making democracy really live and work.

The Association again reminds the public of the repeated pronouncements of our military leaders and statesmen that education is the basis of our national security and that a well-planned, adequately-supported system of free public schools is fundamental to the perpetuation of the American way of life.
---Excerpts from platform and resolutions adopted at the Representative Assembly of the National Education Association, San Francisco, Calif., July 6, 1951.
...At the heart of a profession dedicated to the welfare of students lies respect for the human nersonality and forthe continuing pursuit of truth. Members of the Communisl party, therefore, bar themselves from the teaching 'profession.

Communists may not join the National Education Associ ation, nor should they be permitted to teach in American schools

The program of the National Education Association is directed toward the following goals:
(1) Educational opportunity for every individual to develop his full potential for: responsible and useful citizenship and for intellectual and spiritual growth.
(2) Balanced educational progixams to provide for the varied needs and talents of individual students and for the strength and progress of the nation . . .
(f) Instructional programs which teach about-but do not advocate--comuunism and all forms of totalitarianism. . .
---Excerpts from platform and resolutions adopted at the Representative Assembly of the National Education Association, At:lantic City, N。J。, June 30, 1961.

Other Suggestions for Introduction:

To stimulate interest and to introduce problems.

1. Plan bulletin board with students, exhibit news pictures from magazines and papers depicting dangers of communism to democracy.
2. Use current news stories and feature stories to create environment.
3. Cartoons from magazines and daily papers point up tense situations.
4. Have students prepare creative cartoons to tell the danger they see in Communism.

Many students will need very little stimulus for they are already extremely interested in the world situation and the part Russia plays in it.

Some teachers may prefer to begin with a well prepared questionnaire to see what understandings students already have.

A teacher may wish to read thought provoking articles or have the students read some of these magazine and newspaper articles.

1. To create an awareness that indifferent citizens are a great danger to democracy.
2. To develop the attitude that the democratic way of life must be guarded constantly from threats of totalitarian ideologies.
3. To strengthen students in their respect for the dignity and worth of every individual.
4. To help students develop a feeling of personal responsibility for the activities of groups in which they are members.
5. To give students an opportunity to learn to function efficiently in situations demanding judgments based on facts.
6. To encourage habits of critical thinking and careful evaluation based on knowledge and understanding.

Specific Objectives (For the Teacher).

1. To assist students in gaining knowledge and understanding of the restrictions of a totalitarian government, in limiting the liberty of the individual citizen.
2. Teach the fallacies inherent in all forms of totalitarian governments.
3. To teach an understanding of the basic ideas of communism as practiced today in the Soviet Union and its Satellites.
4. To teach how to get facts and understandings of the world today and policies used by communists to get world dominion.
5. To give students an opportunity to understand how communists use propaganda in furthering the cause of communism.
6. To develop the habit of accumulating and analyzing facts before forming judgments.

Student Objectives.

1. To study about the people who originated communism and to evaluate their motives.
2. To find out the major aims of the Communist Party.
3. To learn about the strategy of communists in getting control of governments.
4. To examine the theory of communism.
5. To do research in order to find out what life is like in communist countries.
6. To examine the threat of commism to the democratic way of life in the United States:
7. To learn to separate fact:s from propaganda.
8. To improve skill in the use of resource materials.
9. To learn to work with others in group activities.
10. To improve organization of understandings and ideas in order to communicate more effectively with others.

The word communism means different things to different people. To many political leaders in colonial nations, it implies revolt against the white man ${ }^{\text {g }}$ s rule, liberation from colonialism and rapid industrialization, aided by Soviet money or advice. To some workers it means defense of lower class interests and sympathy with Soviet foreign policy. Western intellectuals tend to regard it as a Utopian ideal tarred by inhuman practices. To the policeman it is an international conspiracy of power-made criminals. To the Soviet citizen, the word connotes, in one sense, a meaningful goal his society is striving to attain within the forseeable future, with its rewards and its hardships. 5

Every Communist Party is a highly organized revolutionary group whose members are motivated by a zeal which rivals religious fanaticism in its intensity. ${ }^{6}$

Communism and its theory is more than rationalization. Undoubtedly, the thoughts and actions of communist leaders are determined in significant measure by the intellectual heritage of Marx, Lenin and Stalin. Their ideology must be faced as one of the strongest forces active in the world today.

[^5]Communism means an ideal, a politi al movement, a method of analysis and a way of life. The maning of communism depends on time, place, circumstances and the point of view of the observer.

Communism is not an invisible power. Its movement is created by men: the operation is by men as are all of its movements. Communism as an ideal extends back to Plato's Republic. In every century men have tried to resolve a contradiction in our social order.

Communism according to classical theory aims to create a classless society in which all production, distribution and exchange are community owned.

For those who subscribe to it $\mathrm{t}_{\text {, }}$ Communism is a secular religion. The creed of communism subscribed to by those who follow it is primarily the product of four: men. Marx and Engels in the last century set down the basic theory and Lenin and Stalin contributed to their doctrines.

Communist ideology emphasizes the "inevitable" triumph of communism over capitalism. This doctrine is based on the belief that they have the key to the history of economics.

Communist theory identifies five phases of human society as stages in historic progression toward communism: (1) primitive society (2) slaveholding society (3) feudal society (4) capitalistic society (5) social society. The final step is communism.

The schools of Russia are a weapon of the dictatorship. The Communist Party maintains and controls the schools. The schools are made to serve the purposes of the Communist Party.
Comunism is a fanatical movement; it has the characteristics of repression and tyranny which are difficult to cope with. It has caused some of the gravest problems of our time. There is a definite drive on for world wide communism. The free people of the world must be ready to face this truth.

Study Topics - Committee Assignment.
Examine the ideals and principles of democracy and compare them with the communist.

Individual Assignment to Report On.
Examine democracy as a way of life. Why has freedom been basic in democratic society?

Class Assignment.

1. Review classifications of governments.
2. List contrasts which exist in governments classified as democracies and those classified as dictatorships.
3. Assign class to locate and read statements that describe communism.

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

The Communist Party grew up as a tightly organized and selfconscious faction within the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party。

The Comminist Party worked to gain full control over the Russian working class movement with the aim of making its own policies prevail.

The party leader, Lenin, did everything within his power to make it into an organization whose every move was well under his own control, rejecting and casting out all persons and groups who refused to submit to such control.
The party does not reflect the will of the people when the communists speak of the rule of the proletariat; "they actually mean the rule of the communist party". According to the view of the communists they are to lead and guide the workers in the revolution. By infiltration and stimulation of force they hope to establish communistic rule over the world.

The Communist Party has a war- like character. It uses all kinds of inconsistent methods to develop conflict. It is not organized for the purposes of a normal political party.

Russia was the first country in the world to fall under the communist movement. They have not been able to make the theories work in practice.

There were many problems of party policy organization unsolved when Lenin became i11. The death of Lenin brought out serious unsolved problems of party government.

No American political party is so fanatically bound by dogma as is the Communist Party which is devoted to the theories of Marxism-Leninism-Stalinism. Briefly this dogma is based upon the following false conceptions:

1. That all phases of American life, industry, education, religion, politics, the press, radio and films, even family life, are dominated primarily by an irreconcilable class struggle between the capitalists and the workers.
2. That our system of free capitalist enterprise (which has produced for the American people the highest living standards in the world) has actually outlived its usefulness and must be destroyed.
3. That the system of communism (with its slave labor camps, L®w living standards, and onewparty dictac torship over every phase of human life is superis or to and must take the place of our system of free enterprise, thus abolishing the class struggle for all time.
4. That American democracy is not a government of ${ }_{9}$ by, and for the American people but a capitalist dictatorship, which must be destroyed.
5. That this change to communism and a classless society can be brought about only by the violent overthrow of the capitalist system and our form of govermment.
6. That the Communist Party is destined to carry out this historic mission.
7. That Communists owe their highest and unreserved loyalty to the Soviet Union, where the Communist system has been finally established. 7

Assignment for Students.

Organize and ontline the history of the Russian Communist Party.
Locate information concerning the doctrine and environ ment in which comarunism was worked out; this will give a good understanding of communism. Find the shortcomings of the party.
List major events and milestones in the history of the party that have made a lasting impact.

Question:

Why do people join and why do they leave the party? (The answer to this question may be found by reading the following )

ECONOMIC FACTS

When the Bolsheviks seized power on November 7, 1917, they took over plants and industries as the first step in establishing the basis of socialism or communism. The departments which took over the management of economic life were left with a legacy of dying industries which they were trying to bring under concentrated control. 8

One of the principles of early communism was that money is "a testimony of the right of the exploiter to obtain social goods with a view of speculation, profit and plundering the workers". Money thus ceased to serve its proper functions, when paper money was issued as a measure of value, unit of account, and medium of exchange. The government tried to move agricultural and industrial products without the use of money. This did not work. Trade bogged down. Towns were deserted.

[^7]In 1917 there was a decline in industrial production. This was followed by a decline in agricultural production. Despite the fact that the Russian people did not have a very high standard of living in the years before the First World War, production of both agricultural and industrial commodities was so much less in the first years of the Soviet regime that the standard of living declined even to lower depths.

The Tenth Congress of the Communist Party met in March 1921, Lenin made his followers face the bitter facts:

We are living-he said-in such conditions of improverishment and ruin, overstrain and exhaustion of the principal productive forces of the peasants and the workers, that for a time everything must be subordinated to this fundamental consideration-at all costs to increase the quantity of goods. * * * In our attempt to pass over to Communism, we had suffered by the spring of 1921, a more serious defeat that any previously inflicted on us by Kolchak, Denikin or Pilsudsky. Compulsory requisition in the villages and the direct Communist approach to the problems of reconstruction in towns-this was the policy which interferred with the growth of the productive capacity of the country and proved to be the main cause of a profound economic and political crisis which confronted us in the spring of 1921.

It was at this Congress that the first steps were taken toward the introduction of the New Economic Policy ( $N_{0} E_{0} P_{0}$ ). Lenin himself described this policy in one sentence in the same speech:

The New Economic Policy means the substitution of a food tax for requisitioning; it means a transition to the restoration of capitalism in no small degree.

The New Economic Policy restored market dealings up and down and through the various sectors of industry. Even though the NoE.P. was announced when industry was practically stagnant and agriculture was in the early stages of the famine of 1921-22, some revival occurred at once. Wherever there was still some industry and where famine had not struck, production picked up. Hope was revived.

Trade was stimulated. Small industries started up again。 9

HISTORICAL HIGHLIGHTS

The term communism was coined in the $1830^{\circ} s$ in the secret revolutionary societies of Paris. It originally meant the belief in and practice of common ownership, use and disposition of property. In that sense it stood for a protest against some existing social evils and injustices. It then represented an ancient religious Utopian ideal of a social system of: economic and social inequality and political oppression. But communism did not remain an eloquent protest and social ideal very long. Soon it acquired a systematic [^8]program organized as a world wide revolutionary movement.

Russian domestic history from 1856 to 1917 is a dreary story. During this period attempts were made to introduce Western-style economic, social and political reforms and harsh reaction against reforms. The Russian Tzars of the period (who since 1613 had been chosen from the Romanov family) varied a great deal in their attitudes toward reform. Most of them resisted reform. The eve of World War I saw some progress. In 1861 the agricultural workers who were virtual slaves had now been emancipated. Attempts to build up modern industry had been made in the $1880^{\circ} \mathrm{s}$.

Following a major uprising in 1905 a constitution was issued providing for an elected assembly called the Duma. However, even in 1914 the propertied classes were favored, so the Duma was far from being a truly representative assembly. Most of the power remained in the hands of the privileged.

Russian history points out that the 1917 replacement of the Romanov dynasty by the Provisional Government was known as the March Revolution. Before the 1917 revolution the communist movement consisted of scattered groups and parties dedicated to overthrow capitalism。 After Soviet Russia was established, Lenin was returned from exile to take personal leadership of the Bolsheviks, the most powerful of the socialist groups.

The German military high command was instrumental in effecting Lenin's return to Russia. They had two objectives in mind in connection with the move; They felt it would destroy the pro-allied Provincial Government and wcruld weaken the Russian military against Germany. They were right, it did.

Lenin intended for his party to be a "new type". He conceived it to be the vanguard of the working class. His idea was to overthrow capitalism and then to construct socialism. The Bolshevik Party was created as a revolutionary combat organization composed of professional revolutionists. These people devoted themselves to semi-military discipline and the revolutionary struggle to overthrow capitalism. After Russia seized power in 1917, the function of the Bolshevik party was altered. It now aimed at the organization, direction and administration of the state, the implementation of government policy, and the maintenance of power. Lenin demanded far-reaching changes when he returned, such as: the control of industry by the workers' committees, immediate seizure of land by the peasants, an inmediate end to war and the recognition of the soviets as the governing organs in place of the Provisional Government. "Peace, Bread and Freedom" and "All Power t:o the Soviets", were popular rallying cries of the Bolshevik revolutionaires in their attempt to replace the Provisional Government.

There were other socialist groups in the Soviet, however, Lenin soon meneuvered his party into a position of leadership in the Soviet. Lenin's followers succeeded in overthrowing the Provisional Government by the fall of 1917. The "October Revolution" marked the beginning of Bolshevik rule in Russia. In the following year the Bolsheviks became known as the Communist Party. The years following the revolution marked a period of great confusion and turmoil in Russia. There was humiliating peace with Germany, the removal of the capital from Petrograd to Moscow, the murder of Tzar Nichols II and his family, protracted civil war in almost all parts of the old Tzarist Empire, half-hearted antiBolshevik intervention of the British, French, Americans and Japanese, and war with Poland and Rumania.

By 1921, when the last enemies had been driven from Russia, the nation was in a shambles of war. Private incentive had been ruined. By 1922 famine raged, with tens of millions of people starving or on a semi-starvation diet. Some historians say that five million lost their lives. This was the beginning of communism。

Lenin struck back. Slave labor camps were increased, dreaded secret police compelled conformity, churches were closed. Those who opposed Bolsheviks were ruthlessly executed as enemies of the people.

The result was the N.E.P., New Economic Policy. Peasants were now allowed to keep their surpluses of grain after taxation. They were no longer confiscated. They could even dispose of their surpluses as they chose and private trade was allowed to develop. In the industrial field many businesses were returned to private owners.

To the surprise of Bolshevik leaders, N.E.P. proved a relative success. Both agricultural and industrial production increased. Lenin did not live to see the final results of N.E.P.

ORIGIN OF THE 5-YEAR PLANS
Many incidents led to the beginning of the 5-Year Plans. There was an increasing number of public enterprises, also the policy of direct control by workers was being followed by many factories. All of this led to the need of a high coordinating authority which would be divorced from actual administration. The State Economics Planning Commission, or Gosplan, was given this authority.

In February 1921, on the eve of the launching of the N.E.P., Gosplan was instructed to draw up a general plan for the national economy and to break it down into annual programs. It was the responsibility of Gosplan to formulate plans and programs for the control, expansion, and interrelation, of the eatire economic life of the nation, lncluding industry, agriculture finance, trade, and transport, waether nationalized, municipal, cooperative, or still privately owned and operated. It: developed its planning work into an Annual Plan and a 5-Year Plan and a more general plan indicating the course of development be* yond the 5 years. This has become the central planning agency of the Soviet economic system, without which the various individual plans and projects would come into conflict with one another. While Gosplan does not administer or operate any elements of the national economy, it records the progress of the plans, its successes or failuses in different sectors of industry and in different sections of the country, and works out modifications as experience dictates.

All through the period of the N.E.P., Gosplan was at work studying and engineering the economy as a whole. Areas of development and expansion were laid out in different industries and regions, and in agriculture, transportation, trade, and public construction. A basic decision was made to emphasize capital development for future growth in the broad outlines of a general economic plan, and there would have to be much tightening of belts to carry out this program.

In 1925, after a new stable currency had been introduced, Gosplan issued a report on the economic control figures of the U.S.S.R. for the year 1925-26. By that time the desperate need to increase food and raw materials for any broad program of Socialist construction seemed of the clearest urgency to the dominant leaders of the Soviet state. Increased raw material's were needed for the expansion of industry and for exports with which to pay for machinery and foreign supplies. 9

The 5-Year Plans of succeeding years very largely set up specific programs which determined the rate of progress for the economy of Soviet Russia. They provided for:

[^9]1. Collectivization of agriculture.
2. Rapid development of heavy industry.
3. Increase in basic materials.
4. Exploitation of vast eastern areas of the country.
5. Mechanization and electrification.
6. Improvements in the transportation.
7. Absorption of planned increases in urban population and of industrial employees.
8. Each industry had set goals of production.
9. Planned increase in productivity of labor.
10. Reduction in hours.
11. Increases in pay and the provision of social services.
12. Production costs to be checked.

Questions:

1. Tell about the work of the Gosplan. Why was it organized?
2. Did the First 5-Year Plan indicate that other 5Year Plans would follow?
3. When was the First 5-Year Plan drawn up?
4. What specific provisions were set up in each of the 5-Year Plans?
5. What were the goals of the 5 -Year Plans?

AMERICAN SOVIET RELATIONS

On March 6, 1856, Commodore Matthew C. Perry predicted a Cold War between Russia and the United States. He said:

It seems that the people of America will, in some form or other, extend their domination and their power until they shall have brought within their mighty embrace multitudes of the islands of the great Pacific.
And I think too that eastward and southward will her great rival in future aggrandizement stretch forth her power to the coasts of China and Siam; and thus the Saxon and the Cossacks (i.e., Russians) will meet once more, in strife or friendship on another field.

Will it be friendship? I fear not.
The antagonistic exponents of freedom and absolutism must then meet at last, and then will be fought that mighty battle on which the world will look with breathless interest.

On its issues will depend the freedom or the slavery of the world-despotism or fational liberty must be the fate of civilized man.

The story of these two nations and how they have developed into superpowers and how issues grew is fascinating. It is interesting to note that American expansion occurred in the Pacific, as Russian expansion occurred in bordering lands.

We usually identify Russian control in Eastern Europe as a result or aftermath of World War II; we should not forget that the Russians had long exerted control over parts of Eastern and Central Europe.

Assignment - Problems to Consider.

PRINCIPLES OF LENINISM

By 1921, Lenin was in firm control of Russia, but the expected world wide revolution failed to materialize. In order to appease discontent among the peasantry, Lenin instituted the New Economic Policy (N.E.P.) which consisted of incentives to produce grain by way of restoring some free enterprise on the farms. Meantime, Lenin died in January, 1924, and a power struggle ensued between Stalin, Trotsky, Tinoviev, Kamenev and Bukharin. By virtue of his control over party apparatus, Stalin emerged victorious. By 1928 he was in firm control and in that year he ended the No. $\mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{o}}$. and instituted the first 5-Year Plan.

Lenin was a master terrorist who marched to supremecy over the bodies of thousands of countrymen. His writings were the most widely read of any in modern history. Maxim Gorky said, "Lenin was a man who prevented people from living their own lives as no other man before him was able to do."

Lenin started with Marxism based on the promise that "the rich get richer and the poor get poorer." Karl Marx taught that the only way to eliminate inequality was through revolution. Everyone would receive a just return for his work under temporary "dictatorship of the proletariat", or working class. Finally a classless and stateless society would energe in which all would receive "according to his need."

Lenin ${ }^{0}$ s "dictatorship of the proletariat" became a dictatorship over the proletariat. The classless society became one in which the elite class of communist party members controlled everything in the country.

Marx had never thought out the composition of the Party and such details; Lenin did. Lenin set up some rules which were as follows:

The Party must be small.
The Party must be tightly controlled.
Party members must be deeply loyal.
Fanaticism, not members was the key. Members must live, eat, breathe and dream revolution. Discipline must be rigid. If an individual falters, oust him. Revolutions cannot be won by clean hands, or white shirts only by blood, sweat and burning torch.

Marx thought up or created these ideas, but it was Lenin who put them into organized action.

In 1903 the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party or (Russian Marxist Party) met in Brussels. A dispute arose. Should the Party membership be restricted or open to anybody? Lenin fought for restricted membership and won. His group was called the Bolsheviks
(the majority). The losers were called the Mensheviks (minority). Lenin insisted that members should be trained revolutionaries. To allow anybody, curiosity seekers, weaklings and half-hearted joiners to belong would reduce the party's discipline, its power and fanaticism. He felt that the masses could not be trusted to make a revolution. He often said they needed men willing to die because the Party told them to die. The principles of Lenin are in full effect throughout the communist world today.

Lenin was an able propagandist. He thought in terms of battle plans, tactics and strategy, not in theories or philosophical abstractions. He maintained a man was either your friend or enemy. Lenin worked day and night for seventeen years to perfect his plans for the revolution. His opportunity came in March 1917. Revolution erupted in Russia. The cheka (secret police) instituted a reign of terror. A wide search for enemies racked the country. Pravda, the Party newspaper, urged drastic measures. Marx had prophesied that the revolution would take place in a highly industrialized nation. Russia was industrially backward.

During the revolution most industry was nationalized. Trade and commerce were officially abolished. The government tried to distribute manufactured articles to the people. Food supplies were confiscated. Poor peasants were assembled in committees to spy on their richer neighbors who might be hiding grain. Class was set against class. This was an established tactic of communism. The nation was shattered by 1921 when the last enemies had been driven from Russia. Private incentive had been ruined, indistrial production was down and millions of people were starving and there was a great loss of life. This was Russia's introduction to Lenin's communism. The secret police compelled conformity; labor camps were increased and churches were closed. Anyone who opposed the Bolsheviks was executed.

Terror was not the answer. In March 1921, sailors of the Red Navy in Kronstadt, who were formerly Bolshevik supporters, rebelled. Lenin realized a change had to be made. The New Economic Policy (N.E.P.) was the result. It proved a success, as it gave the leaders a breathing spell they needed to consolidate gains. Both agriculture and industrial production increased. Lenin did not live to see the final results of the temporary N.E.P. Lenin's skill cannot be underestimated. Ruthless and iron-clad discipline surrounded his concept of Party supremecy. It was difficult for Western civilization to believe that men could operate under a state policy, where actions of brutality and terror were prevalent and human dignity disregarded, but this was the plan Lenin inherited and carried out.

Sayings of Lenin.
As long as capitalism and socialism exist, we cannot live in peace; in the end, one or the other will triumph --a funeral dirge will be sung either over the Soviet Republic or over World Capitalism.

Lenin used the word ruthless often which is a clue to his thinking.

There is still too little of that ruthlessness which is indispensable for the success of socialism.

These sayings reveal the Lenin who has always been hailed by the Moscow ruling heirarchy as the guiding genius of communism in Russia.

Lenin's Ten Commandments of Revolution:

1. Never reject terror on principle.
2. Salvation lies only along the road of international Socialist revolution.
3. There are no morals in politics: There is only expediency.
4. Religion is the opiate of the people.
5. Let me teach the children, and the seed I have sown will never be uprooted.
6. Truth does not count unless it serves an end.
7. Our tactic; absolute distrust.
8. Regard all persons without sentiment.
9. Promises are like piecrusts; made to be broken.
10. Scheme...zigzag...retreat...anything to hasten the coming to power of communism. 12

Write a brief sketch of Lenin's life. Who are some of Lenin's apostles? Why have so many people read Lenin's works?
Have a group construct a large map similar to the one on Page 5, Look Magazine, May 22, 1962 to show historical developments of Russia.

By 1926 the Soviet state, dominated by intellectual Marxian revolutionaries, settled down to save its home base, Russia. The theories of Karl Marx, which provided the core of the Soviet world outlook, consisted of two elements. One, the theory of progress toward higher forms of social organization. Collective forms of production constantly emphasized the collective aspects of the industrial economy. The other is the theory of revolution of a violent overthrow of the social and economic order, based on private ownership of the means of production.

Lenin had intended that his party would be a "new type". He conceived it to be the vanguard of the working class. Lenin passed away in January 21, 1924. Between 1924 and 1926, Stalin emerged as the undisputed leader of national communism. However, Lenin denounced Stalin shortly before he died, but too late to keep him from moving into his place. Stalin lacked the leadership of Lenin. He was more of a plodder. Once Stalin was well in control of the party, he adopted much of the program of his left wing critics and thus faced new opposition from leaders who were committed to a program of caution and slow reform. These leaders were purged, from positions of influence: This was the time when Stalin launched the program of rapid industrialization and the First 5-Year Plan. It was an ambitious and reckless program. Stalin himself later referred to the years of the First 5-Year Plan as another revolution.

The plan for industrialization disregarded economic balance, rationality or demands of the consumer. It was a desparate crash program; it brought untold human misery. The Russian population again suffered lean years with a drastic lowering of living standards. Every ounce of available energy, human as well as material, was pressed into service and pumped into investment. This introduced a new civil war against the peasantry in agriculture. Every year's harvest was sent to the hungry city dwellers. This was the only way to keep up industrialization. Private enterprise in farming was abolished. The peasant:s were forced into cooperation and collective farms. Here they were subject to controls. Here they used tractors and implements cowned by the government. Peasants' resistance to the attempt to "collectivize" them was bitter and persistent. The regime overcame the peasants through a virtual civil war in which thousands of peasants lost their lives, millions were left destitute. The agricultural economy of the Soviet Union suffered damages that were not mended until more than twenty years later. Right at this time a disastrous famine caused millions of Soviet citizens to die.

With industrialization came new radicalism in cultural and educational affairs. Soviet Russia moved further away from socialist goals and methods. The workers were totally subjected to discipline under a new managerial system. All agencies were now run by single managers with full authority and responsibility. Stalin was preparing for world conquest. Stalin became, in the Communists' eyes, a virtual god on earth. On March 5, 1953, Stalin died. The communist world went into mourning. His funeral was a state spectacle. His body was entombed in Moscow. Speeches told of his greatness. The whole world wondered what would come next.

At the top of the Communist pyramid is the Presidium. It has grown from the seeds planted by Lenin. It is a huge bureaucracy or body of officials. It now includes six million men and over a million women who carry out the orders of the Party dictators. They run the Soviet government, they control the Red Army, direct the secret policy, rule the labor camps, supervise education, plan production and consumption of goods for over two hundred million people. They manage the factories, mines, railroads and all of the collective farms.

This top executive committee of the Party called the Presidium decides what the Party and the Soviet government will do. In 1919 it was the Politburo or Polj.tical Bureau. In 1920 the Politburo included just five members; Lenin, Trotsky, Stalin and two other old Bolsheviks. Lenin was chairman. In 1924 the membership increased to seven. During Stalin's dictatorship it averaged about ten members. In 1952 it increased to twenty-five. When Stalin died in 1953 its membership was reduced to ten. In mid-1957 it numbered fifteen.

Even though the Soviet constitution says the Party is ruled by the Congress of the Communist Party, the Party Congress obeys the Presidium. Party rules and the Soviet Constitution are not what they seem to be. The Party Congress is directed to elect a central committee and this committee is supposed to elect the Presidium. However, a few closely united members of the Presidium have always run the Congress and have chosen the members of the Central Committee.

The Commist Party Congress met at least once a year under Lenin. The Party Congress met only once in about four years under Stalin.

Members of the Supreme Soviet are elected every four years on a basis of what the constitution calls "universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot". Every citizen who has reached the age of 18 is eligible to vote, irrespective of race, nationality, sex, religion, education, property status or past activities. The voter is presented with a single slate of candidates, one for each office.
W. W. Kulski, in his book, The Soviet Regime describes the 1952 Party Congress:

The Congress delegates were not elected directly by the rank and file members of the Party at the general meetings of the primary organizations (soviets). They were picked by the Party bureaucracy at regional conferences. . . The mode of electing delegates was determined by the Central Committee, which established in advance the agenda (program of discussions) that was subsequently unanimously adopted by the Congress itself. Local Party organizations were not asked to make suggestions about the agenda. Thus everything was staged in advance by the Central Committee, whose members supplied almost all of the Congress speakers. . . . The servility of Congress delegates to the leaders on whose good graces their daily bread depended was manifested from the open meeting. 14

What were the advantages of Russia's vast size during the Napoleonic Wars?

Nikita S. Khrushchev is an optimist. He has said that our grandchildren will be Communists. He has said that Western culture and civilization will be buried by Communist culture.

Mr. Khrushchev bases his optimism on what he regards as a realistic appraisal of the international situation. In his Foreign Affairs article in October 1959, he challenges the United States to look at the "real" facts, the "real situation". He bids us not "to go against reality, against life itself". The clear implication of these statements is that if we see the "realities" of international politics, we too will recognize that communism is the wave of the future.

This contemporary expression of classic Marxist determinism and optimism has a bite to it because of the momentous events that have taken place since the Soviet Union was established. In his Foreign Affairs article Mr. Khrushchev makes this disquieting claim:

At present, the Socialist (Communist) countries cover about one-fourth of the territory of the globe, have one-third of its population, and their indistrial output accounts for about one-third of the total world output.

In short, the world's No. 1 Communist believes that the balance of power has shifted decisively in his favor. In his power analysis, Khrushchev includes ideological and psychological factors as well as economic and military factors.

This supreme Communist confidence that the future belongs to them has ominous political implications for the free world, and especially for the United States. We can see our dilemma most sharply in Berlin. According to Khrushchev's statements recorded in this study, he feels certain that Soviet power is preponderant and, therefore, he has the capacity to impose his "solution" upon the Berlin problem. He says openly that he favors "compromise", and "coexistence", but between the lines it is all too clear that he wants these objectives only on his terms.

According to my reading of history, says Senator Hubert Humphrey, the Communists are not destined to rule the world. I believe that the future is not closed, but open. The future belongs to those who deserve to inherit it. I believe that the open society, that genuine representative government, will not perish if those who believe in government by the people and for the people will be willing to work and fight as hard as those who believe in governtaent by self-perpetuating elite. There is nothing automatic about the survival of democracy. As Edmund Burke said, Evil triumphs if good men fail to act. The values of free government and human dignity can survive only if we are willing to pay the price. And the price is high. 15

Even though Khrushchev proclaims a doctrine of peaceful coexistance he has actually adopted the basic doctrines laid down by Lenin and Stalin.

Lenin in his hostility to the non-communist world said:
We are living not merely in a state, but in a system of states; and it is inconceivable that the Soviet Republic should continue to exist for a long period side by side with imperialist states. Ultimately one or the other must conquer. Meanwhile a number of terrible clashes between the Soviet Republic and the Bourgeois is inevitable. ${ }^{16}$

After Stalin had fully consolidated his dictatorial power in 1928, he declared:
The Soviet Union harbors no illusion as to the possibility of durable peace... Wars of proletarian dictatorship against world capitalism are inevitable and revolutionary. 16

Khrushchev also believes in the triumph of Communism. In 1958 he said:
It is now becoming more and more clear that the end of the sway of capitalism is drawing near in other countries, too, and that capitalism is a system that has outlived its age and is bound to perish. The future is ours! The future is for Marxism--Leninism! The future is for Communism! ${ }^{16}$

And Khrushchev elaborates:
. . . The Leninist principle of the peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems has always been and remains the general line of our country's foreign policy.

It has been alleged that the Soviet Union advances the principle of peaceful coexistence out of tactical considerations, considerations of expediency. . Yet it is common knowledge that we have always, from the very first years of Soviet power, stood with equal firmness for peaceful coexistence. . .

In the countries where capitalism is still strong and has a huge military and police apparatus at its disposal, the reactionary forces will of course inevitably offer serious resistance. There the transition to socialism will be attended by a sharp class, revolutionary struggle. . .

Leninism teaches us that the ruling classes will not surrender their power voluntarily. And the greater or lesser degree of intensity which the struggle may assume, the use or non-use of violence in the transition to socialism, depends on the resistance of the exploiters. . 16

Khrushchev's Secret Speech of 1956:
In February of 1956, Khrushchev felt strong enough to destroy any of the existing Stalin philosophy. His whole speech was an effort to downgrade Stalin. He drew a picture of Stalin and presented him as a paranoid, megalomanic. He accused him of a series of criminal acts. The Communist world was shocked when it heard the violent attack. Stalin had been the godhead of the government for thirty years.
${ }^{16}$ Ibid. . pp. 16-18.

Khrushchev had a number of reasons for making this attack on Stalin. He wanted to destroy the power of the old Stalinists completely and he wanted to give the people and the new elite class of managers some assurance that the rule of terror was over. He also thought that he could shake up the whole structure of the party at home and abroad by this method.

Khrushchev wanted to create his own power regime. The downgrading of Stalin caused insecurity in the minds of party officials, but it raised the people's hopes and aspirations for a better life. ${ }^{16}$

The Council of Ministers is now headed by Nikita S. Khrushchev. By virtue of his official government he is the real executive head of government and is referred to as Premier Khrushchev.

There is constant danger in America since so many Americans believe every Soviet call for coexistence and the emotional schemes Khrushchev plans for disarmament. Some Americans are quick to believe that Commist leaders want to live in peace with us. From our past experiences we should know this is not true. They are aiming to dominate the world. We must not forget that the United States is their major target.

The Khrushchev policy includes:

1. To build up a strong Soviet military based on ballistic missiles.
2. Proposes to build a strong industry.
3. Supporting extreme nationalism in Asia, Africa and Latin America.
4. Giving economic and technical aid to Asia, Africa and Latin America.
5. Put his world-wide subversive apparatus in high gear.
${ }^{16}$ Ibid., pp. 16-18.

It consists of local Communist parties, Communist front organizations, Communist espionage and Red propoganda. This then is Khrushchev's program. These are the tactics he is using to work toward what he describes as the inevitable trend of history: The victory of Communism. 17

It is very difficult for us Americans to imagine what life in a Communist country is like. It is hard to believe that life in the Soviet Union, or China or one of the European satellites is as bad as the foes of Communism say it is.

The people of the Soviet Union have the same hopes, problems and fears as we have. It is the way Russia and communism treat their hopes, their problems and fears that makes them different. The love of a mother for her child is not confined to the non-communist world, but in Russia this family relationship is incidental to the whims of the government.

From the time of Stalin to the present day the history of the Soviet Union has been the story of a gigantic war of internal conquest. On one side were the few who ruled, on the other were the people of Russia. From the beginning of the First 5-Year Plan the tragic history of Russia had begun. The people of Russia have suffered human degradation and complete contempt for the moral and physical well being.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

We should guard against assuming that the harsh, inhuman methods of Stalin in forcing industrialization have left in the Soviet Union today a type of popular resentment which borders on revolt. There are several reasons why this assumption would appear to be incorrect.

First, Communist internal propaganda has sought to focus the popular gaze on the future and on the glories of building the Communist society. It has also played upon patriotic pride, especially during World War II and has stressed the themes of capitalistic encirclement and "overtake America". There can be little doubt that such "propaganda of the deed" as the Soviet successes in putting the first satellite in orbit around the earth or sending the first rocket to the moon also stimulate the patriotic pride of the Soviet people.

Second, since Stalin's death, much of Stalin's harshness has been denounced by Khrushchev. It is reported that many of the slave-labor camps of Stalin's day have been disbanded and the role of the political police has been curtailed. The Soviet people today thus might feel a greater degree of personal security than they did under Stalin. In this connection we should note that, although the Soviet people are deprived of the personal freedoms which Americans value so highly, historically most of these freedoms have never been experienced by more than a small minority of the Russian people

Third, although the average Soviet citizen may find life drab he also finds that he is making more money and receiving many more educational and health benefits than his elders did before the revolution.

Fourth, Khrushchev has changed some of the more objectionable features of life on the collective farms. He has also set up Regional Economic Councils for the purpose of "decentralizing" economic decision-making. Actually, as the Seven-Year Plan indicates, overall economic decisions are still made at the top, in Moscow. But most observers tend to agree that the Regional arrangement will give greater responsibilities to local managers which in turn may lead to greater efficiency in production. 11

Khrushchev makes many promises to the Soviet people. He has promised a 40 per cent real income increase between 1959 and 1965. He has also promised a 40 hour work week by 1962 and an effort to reduce the work week to 35 hours after 1964. The work week in Russia today is 46 hours.

Today it appears that the Soviet people are willing to go all out to build up the Soviet economy. There are those who think that Khrushchev has opened the way for consumer demand and public opinion to have a part in the life of the people. The structure and functions of the Soviet government today are essentially as they were under Stalin. Soviet leaders are now asking how much freedom the dictatorship can allow without weakening the Soviet system. It would not be out of question for Khrushchev to reinstate the Stalinist terror if he feels a need of it.

The Soviet policy in recent years has undergone some changes and the Stalinist regime has been publicly denounced. However, the brutal activities employed in 1956 in Hungary were much like the Stalinist measures.

Even the 1iterary people are curbed in Russia. In 1958, Boris Pasternak, a Russian writer, refused the Nobel Prize for Literature because of pressures and insults which he received from Soviet people. Boris Pasternak was an independent writer, poet, translator and novelist who wrote the novel Doctor Zhivago during the last Stalin years and the years following Stalin's death. The novel dealt with the Civil War era in Russia, the fighting, the horror and disorder. The author was objective in relating about the misery and want. He made a strong appeal for a return to Christian ethics. The Soviet publishers did not know whether they should publish the book and it was refused by various Soviet publishers. The novel was published in Italy in 1958 and translated into many languages. In October of 1958 the Swedish Academy awarded it the Nobel Prize for Literature. At first Pasternak was grateful, thankful, touched, proud, astonished and abashed. The Communist storm began. Pasternak was even asked to leave Russia. He was called a pig and a traitor. The Soviet Union of writers petitioned the government to strip Pasternak of his citizenship and expel him from the country.

Pasternak decided to denounce the Nobel Prize. He died May 30, 1960, after many heartaches and humiliating experiences. Thus we know the Soviet leadership will not tolerate writers who do not accept the Party line.

The Soviet people have set a goal, to catch up with the U.S.A. in production and even surpass it.

In October 1957 the world was stirred by the successful launching of the first Soviet earth satellite, the Sputnik. The success of the Soviet Sputnik made the achievements of the West look sma11. Russia felt it was catching up and overtaking America.

Russia's increased military power has been recognized, but the leaders of N.A.T.O. denied the superiority of Soviet military power as a total. They felt the Soviet advance was limited to intercontinental missiles, was temporary and would not last long. Many people do not believe all of the claims that Khrushchev makes regarding Russia's progress. Perhaps there has been progress but they still have a long way to go. The people are living in crowded conditions where decent privacy is next to impossible. Inadequate housing is mentioned in every report. A room for a whole family is standard in Western regions and barracks or crudely covered dugouts in the Siberian and eastern regions.

The inequalities among different classes contradicts many of Stalin's statements.

In 1932, William H. Chamberlin, an American journalist who represented the Christian Science Monitor in the U.S.S.R. counted seven different dining rooms in Magnitogorsk, the big iron and steel center in the Urals. The food served ranged in quality from plentiful, if heavy, food served to high plant officials and imported American engineers to subhuman diet allotted to the unfortunate Kulaks and political prisoners, of whom tens of thousands were employed on forced labor jobs. 18
W. L. White also reported this cost system in the dining rooms of a Soviet motor factory which he visited. Much is written about the rest homes for workers, but nothing is said about the selection. Walter Citrine in his book, I Search for Truth in Russia, says an estimated three percent of the industrial workers had the privileges of a rest home in 1932. 19

In the plant managed by Krovchenko at Nikopal near the Black Sea, where several of these resorts are located, only 57 out of 1,500 workers had been to a rest home during the year; however, all of the workers had deductions from their wages for this service. These are facts that the Russians try to keep from the public. The rest homes sound wonderful on paper; only investigations give the true picture.

[^10]Dr. Stefan T. Possony, Professor of International Politics in the Graduate School of Georgetown University and also Associate of the Foreign Policy Research lnstitute, University of Pennsylvania, summarized Khrushchev's speech of January 6, 1961, for the U. S. Senate Sub-committee to iavestigate the administration of the Internal Security Act. The entire report of questions and answers is well worth reading. However here are the highlights.

DR. POSSONY'S SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

I now want to summarize my interpretation of Khrushchev's speech:
(1) This speech, together with the declaration of the Communist Parties of November 1.960, has disclosed Communist strategy as it will be employed for the next 5 years or so. (2) The traditional goal of communism, the conquest of the entire world, is not only reaffirmed but is held far more strongly and hopefully than in the past. It is "unthinkable" that the Communists will abandon their goal of world domination regardless of the price they have to pay. They are willing to pay any price to attain their objective. (3) The Communists probably are honestly convinced that they are invincible (a) because of the alleged predetermination of history,
(b) because of their combined military-political strength,
(c) because of their anticipated military superiority, and (d) because of the anticipated demoralization of the free world.
(4) Communist strategy has become more sophisticated than it was under Stalin.
(5) The Communists believe that the final decision in the world struggle, and specifically the victory of world communism, will be attained in the present era of history. In their conception, this era seems to extend to 1975, approximately.
(6) Armed struggle is inevitable. Such specific forms of armed struggle, as liberation wars, uprisings, and "pressure from below" also are inevitable.
(7) A global thermonuclear war is not entirely inevitable. If the free world, and especially the strongest democratic countries like the United States capitulate, then such a war may be avoided. However, while preferable, such a development is unlikely.
(8) The Communist Parties in the free world and their sympathizers must do everything in their power to facilitate nuclear blackmail by the Soviet Union and to prevent military resistance by the free world.
(9) The Soviet Union and the Soviet bloc must not leave any stone unturned to increase their military power in order to fight the probable (albeit not inevitable) world war and to win a global thermonuclear conflict. (10) For the time being, such conflict must be avoided. The turning point in history will come when the Soviet Union overtakes the United States, some time between 1965 and 1970. Khrushchev talks as though he conceives this competition in terms of an "economic" production race. It is more likely that he is thinking about a race in military technology. Consequently, the great turning point in history will come when the Soviet Union, irrespective of per capita production in industrial goods, achieves technologically superior armaments and attains a military force which qualitatively and quantitatively, will be superior to the military forces of the United States. If necessary, this force will be employed in the second phase of the current era.
(11) In the first phase, the armed struggle will mostly take the form of liberation wars and uprisings, plus deterrence by nuclear blackmail, on the part of the Soviets, of any military initiatives undertaken by the free world.
(12) Also, in this first phase the struggle must be intensified, on the "active fronts in the underdeveloped areas." In particular, it must be pushed in Latin America.
(13) In this phase, strong efforts will be made to improve the effectiveness of uprisings. Henceforth uprisings will be planned as major military undertakings. The insurrectionists will be properly trained and be armed with the most modern equipment. They will be provided with strategic support and power by Soviet nuclear long range forces, under a coordinated strategy. International crises, such as threats of war and war alerts, may be exploited to launch insurrections.
(14) The achievement of a military, political, and psychological paralysis of the free world is a paramount objective of Soviet strategy.
(15) This objective can be attained by such means as peace propaganda, Parlovian conditioning, infiltration, threats, and diplomatic negotiations.
(16) Propaganda on disarmament, specifically nuclear disarmament and disarmament negotiations are an integral part of the Soviet strategy aimed at paralyzing the free world and strengthening the power of communism. (17) Soviet strategy is based, on the one hand, on achieving optimal military power and building and strengthening Communist political armies throughout the free world. On the other hand, Soviet strategy utilizes massive deception to bring about, through (a) the unilateral military weakening of the free world, (b) the moral paralysis of free world governments, and (c) the demoralization of public opinion, the capitulation of the United States. (18) Failing in this strategy, the Soviet intends to destroy the United States by nuclear weapons. I would like to conclude by voicing my conviction that however sophisticated this current Soviet strategy may be, it is not sophisticated enough to accomplish Communist victory. The hybrid of Khrushchev is reminiscent of Hitler and foreshadows his failure. I am fortified in this belief by my realization that the course of thistory, contrary to Mr. Khrushchev's assumption, is not foreordained. The cause of freedom in history often was considered lost but usually good sense prevailed after democratic hesitations, and one after the other, the main threats to freedom were defeated.
Still, I am concerned that the Kremlin may have become overconfident, apparently is overrating Soviet power, and is inclined to underrate Western power and resolution. There is no question but that free world policies are partially responsible for this dangerous frame of mind. Cockiness and cocksureness have been more frequent causes of war than a rational evaluation of risks, chances, and purposes. The errors of free world policies will not culminate in the destruction of freedom and of the democratic system of government. But if we condition the Soviet leaders to expect final victory, even by "easy delivery," many millions of citizens all over the free world will pay with their limbs and lives. To convince the Kremlin that we are not about to commit suicide, nor are going to tolerate our destruction, superior strength, sustained firmness, greater willingness to assume risks, and at long last greater comprehension of the real nature of the Communist threat, are mandatory. True to its traditions, the United States will prove worthy of its responsibilities. 20

Dr. Possony said he regarded Khrushchev's speech as one of the most outspoken and significant statements made by a leading Russian Communist in recent times.

Here we have our work charted for us. We must keep our country and our people strong. Every student in our American schools should be well versed in the importance of our American heritage.

With such a foundation students will be able to make right decisions and prove themselves worthy of the privileges which only American citizens enjoy today. They will also be prepared to counteract Communist doctrine effectively through the intellegent use of factual and authentic knowledge.

The average American does not realize that the Communist Party is constantly attempting to plant seeds of communism through all communicative media in the United States. They are trying to find ways to poison the channels of American public opinion. A portion of this tactic is successful because of ignorance about the conspiratorial organization controlled by a foreign power. With accurate knowledge of the Communist conspiracy, fewer Americans will fall victims to the wiles of Communism.

In the United States, the international Communist movement is represented by the Communist Party, U.S.A. As the history of the Communist movement in the United States proves, the Communist Party, U.S.A. has been inspired and completely controlled by the fountainhead of World Communism and the Soviet Union. Every phase of the Party's historical development has been determined, not by any factor innate to the United States, but rather by the urgent need of Communists seeking to extend their control.

The Communist Party in the United States was organized in 1919. From 1919 to 1929 this conspiratorial party experienced its birth pangs and growing pains. 21

The Party openly proclaimed its revolutionary goals and pursued them with acfich. Social unrest, internal dissension and strikes found the Comansts in the center of action.

The Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 was the inspiration for the Communist Party of this nation.

This is a new season, a new epoch, in the history of mankind. These words reflect the supreme confidence of the Communist Party, U.S.A., as it envisions "the inevit:able triumph of socialism'! 22 These Party leaders also underscore the fact that communism today poses a serious challenge to our nation's destiny. The followers of Marxism - Leninism are determined that their system of government will replace democracy. These conspirators will stop at nothing to further their evil aims.

Since the beginning of communism about one hundred years ago it has made great strides. In 1961 one-third of the world's population knew it's terror. One-fourth of the earth's surface was under its heavy yoke. There were $36,000,000$ Party members in 86 countries--including our own United States, all working for the triumph of communism. Communism is more than a political or economic doctrine. It penetrates all segments of society; religious, educational and social.

In our own country the Commnist Party, U.S.A. is an integral part of the entire communist conspiracy. Although they insist on calling it a "political party in American tradition," it is dedicated to this alien ideology which is diabolically opposed to our American system. Party members vehemently uphold the tenets of Marxism-Leninism. To them, the Communist philosophy is a "guide to action", 22 a doctrine which they believe will direct them toward the goal of communism in the United States.

Gus Hall, General Secretary of the Commist Party, U.S.A. set forth the role of the Party in the February 1961 issue of the Party's theoretical journal, Political Affairs. Hall gloats that "imperialism is rapidly disintegrating in the face of rising socialism, and reiterates that reactionary forces cannot halt the advance of Communism. Capitalism is a doomed system". 21

As Party leader in this country, Hall urges fanatical effort by Party members on a day to day basis. Full commitment of members is an essential ingredient of communism; the constant working day and night, year after year. Party members are urged to help ignite the revolution. He declares the Party cannot realize its goal if it merely engages in condemning capitalism.

The Communist Party, U. S. A. claims that it is now more virile and revolutionary than ever before. 21

According to Hall the Party is growing in depth and breadth in the United States.

The Communist plan is to maintain close ties with the masses and without letting their identity known keep contact with the people in the shops, in organizations, in all walks of life. It means working closely with "the proletariat" and "educating" it as to where its real interests lie.

The tactic of infiltration is most important. The placing of Communists in organizations; such as civic, religious and economic groups and also in labor unions, is an effective technique in spreading communism.

Publicly the Communists boast that their purpose in "working in" organizations is to fight for higher wages, more jobs, peace and civil rights. Actually, they use these issues merely as subterfuges to advance the Cause of Communism. Listen to the words of Hall:

The problem is not one of sending people into organizations. Many are already there. The central question is for us to help our members, our clubs, our leaders to carry on political activities where they are. 22

Most vital is the Party's program among young people. In one speech Hall said:

We must develop, train and draw in younger forces.
In the fall of 1961 a monthly publication called, New Horizons for Youth was launched. It is described as a "progressive" forum for discussing the issues confronting young people. Nowhere [^11]is it stated that the editor, Daniel Ruben, is none other than the National Youth Director of the Communist Party, U.S.A. This publication viciously criticizes this nation's institutions and parrots the Communist line.

The Communists have stepped up their activities with youths. The organization, which calls itself the Progressive Youth Organizing Committee, is fully supported by the Communists. Hypocrisy has seldom known higher limits of deceit.

The Communist Party, U.S.A. has been declared an agency of a foreign power (Russia) and all members are required under the Smith Act to register as foreign agents. No such registrations have been made and currently the Justice Department is pressing criminal charges against the party leadership for violation of the act. The New York Federal Grand Jury recently returned indictments against Hall and Company.

Some U.S.A. Party members have been first-generation Americans who found it difficult to become assimilated into American life. The Party has attracted the lonely, frustrated, unattractive and unpopular young people. However, the Party doesn't attract many neurotics.

Communist life is hard and disciplined; neurotics of any kind dislike discipline. Communists are highly distrustful of such people and, in general, keep them out of the Party by encouraging them as fellow travelers, a role in which they are extremely useful. ${ }^{23}$
They seldom become Communists, for they do not wish to share Communist discipline or hardships. But they run Party errands, give or raise money. They sometimes lend their houses for secret meeting places. They may receive secret mail for the Party. Often they prefer not to know the meaning of what they are doing. The thrill of doing it is its own reward. ${ }^{23}$

The Communist Party, U.S.A. is made up of more people from the middle class; however, there are some business men in the Party and there are even a few millionaires who give their money to the Party.

In his book, Where We Came Out, Granville Hicks, author and former teacher, has explained why a number of American intellectuals became Communists in the 1930's. The group for which he speaks was not composed of social misfits and failures. By and large, he says, they were men and women who were doing well in their professions and seemed as stable and as happy in their personal lives as the average non-communist . . . ${ }^{24}$

Hicks says, It was the switch in the Party line in 1935 that brought in many Communist sympathizers, including Mr. Hicks. In this fascinating story Mr. Hicks tells how he was tricked.
${ }^{23}$ Communism, Menace to Freedom, Articles Adapted from Readers Digest, 1962, Pleasantville, New York.
${ }^{24}$ Granville Hicks, Where We Carae Out, Viking Press, New York, 1954.

The great evil of Communism, says Hicks now, is not that it uses vicious persons, as it sometimes does, but that it corrupts good ones. . . Most of them fortunately, got out of the Party before they were wholly corrupted, but not all. . . . 24

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee has developed some excellent information in, A Handbook for Americans, in the hope of alerting the American people to the real nature of the enemy in our midst and the insidious character of the methods employed by the Communist Party, U.S.A. We must realize that we are dealing with a movement which is constantly fluid, constantly varied and elusive. We must constantly be alert and informed to combat such a force.

Every master of strateg $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{i}} \mathrm{h}$ a competitive contest will testify that the best defense is a well-planned vigorous offensive based on thorough knowledge of one's opponent. 25

We must take it upon ourselves to understand deeply the radical nature of communism. We must remember that we are dealing with a spirit that hates everything fundamentally Western. We must, therefore, cement more deeply Western unity; for it is the whole of civilization that is at stake.

We must work to win under conditions of peace, however, if we must go to war we must fight a decisive victory.

We must learn the apparent differences and contradictions between the diverse centers of communism.

We must never think of the people under Communist rule as being like their rulers. Even though some of the most rigid penalties against workers have been relaxed in Russia, the working man is one of the most down-trodden in history, living at a bare subsistence level, chained to a job which he may hate, he is at the mercy of a never-ending system of controls. Real wages have declined and the cost of living has increased, even when men work to the limit of their physical endurance they barely eke out an existence. The women too have been forced into the factories [^12]and sent to the farms. The state onf national nurseries take over the care of the thiee year old children to release mothers for work. In the nurseries the chlldren are taught the doctrines and accomplishments of communist leaders with pictures and stories. These people are truly slaves. Surely many of these people would escape if they could.

We must be strong, wise and firm in our leadership.
We must recognize the manner jin which Communists get others to do their dirty work.

We must assume the offensive against communism on every front.

We must forge ahead always. We must be able to anticipate the next communist move. "As the medical man must know the symptoms of an illness before he can diagnose it, the citizen must understand the nature of communism before he can combat it". 25 We should all be cognizant of the nature of the communist enemy and reveal it to every Anerican citizen.

Communism is the enemy of the intellectual, the true liberal, the Christian, the Jew, the Moslem - or anyone who believes in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Let us be the friend.

Educators must go beyond the dictionary definition. We must explore the evil which flows from the philosophy of communism and reveal the fate of our students;
Communism is fanatically opposed to re igion. Men and women in the field of religion must play a vital role to inform our youth about this.

Since the Party's greatest appeal everywhere is to young people we must give our youth the knowledge to develop wisdom and discernment essential if we are to deal effectively with the enemy.
J. Edgar Hoover says, We must fight communism sanely for the Communist Party today is waging an aggressive campaign against all sectors of American national life. 26

Always we must remember that Communists are atheists. They deny that God exists and disparage mortality based on religious principles. "Religion is the opium of the people", Karl Marx declared. "We remain the atheists that we have always been", echoed Nikita Khrushchev. The party takes every opportunity to criticize religion. The recent Soviet space flights are a good example.
"Yuri Gagarin (The Soviet Cosmonaut) really has given a headache to believers!" Izvestia, the Soviet newspaper commented in an article entitled, "What is God?"
"He flew right through the heavenly mansions and did not run [^13]into anyone: neither the Almighty, nor Archangel Gabriel, nor the Angels of heaven. It seems, then, that the sky is empty." ${ }^{26}$

The overwhelming majority of clergy, says J. Edgar Hoover are setting a wonderful example. The communist realizes that these men of God are their opponents. But even one clergyman who in anyway gives aid to the Communist movement is one too many. We must all work together to protect the nation we love.
J. Edgar Hoover also says it is not enough to call communism evil, or a threat. It is important that we know what this threat constitutes - why we describe communism as something totally undesirable. We must know it's true nature, it's appeal and it's tactics. We must also know how to combat this danger in an effective manner.

There are many things we Americans can do to combat communism. Let us review briefly:

We must be informed.
We must be aware of the strengt:hs of democracy.
We must be informed about American history, the heritage and traditions we believe in.

We must know the truth and our nations struggle for freedom.
Democratic heritage must come alive through example and our daily actions.

We must participate in community affairs.
We must exercise our right to vote.
${ }^{26}$ Ibid.

We must choose those who represent us with utmost care.
We must respect the rights of others to be individuals, for this is the essence of democracy.

We must allow truth, not prejudice, to sway our thinking.
We must be sure that our young people realize the advantages of freedom. The home, school and church should cooperate in this program.

We must teach each child to be a responsible citizen.
We must appreciate the privileges which come to us as a result of government in the home, school, community, state and nation.

We must appreciate the freedom of worship.
We must know the Pledge of Allegiance to our flag and live up to it.

We must know about the contributions made by our forefathers and respect the heritage which is ours.

We must understand our laws and obey them.
We must have knowledge and appreciation of our relations with our World Neighbors.

We must understand that our way of life appears as different to other nations as their way of life does to us.

We must learn to distinguish between facts, opinions and propaganda.
and finally;
Our responsibility, it seems to me, is to counter emotional outbursts with quiet, truth, amateurish approaches with professional presentations; and nonsense with facts. 27

Dr. James B. Conont in his book, Germany and Freedom, warns us
${ }^{27}$ The Responsibility of Schools for Instruction on Communism in the Public Schools, Comment of Rodger Swearingen, Director, Soviet-Asian Studies Center, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, p. 4. against impatience. Patience is a difficult quality for us Americans to acquire. It is, however, one of great importance in combating communism.

Teachers should seek materials from reference lists of national associations, state departments of education and reputable academic institutions and resist materials which have a distorted approach.

Intelligent use of factual and authentic knowledge about the aims, methods, strengths and weaknesses of communism is the most effective way to counteract it, says Dr. Richard I. Miller, Associate Director of N.E.A. Project on the Instructional Program of the Public Schools. ${ }^{28}$

Learning Experiences and Activities

Have students identify and label:
(a) Nations which are democracies.
(b) Nations that belong to the Communist bloc.

Have a panel discussion using the following topics:
(1) Trouble spots in the world today.
(2) Critical issues and the free world's problem.

Have an oral report on:
(1) Cold War.
(2) Areas of competition.
(3) Scientific developments in America and Russia.

Have Students Read and Report on:
"A President's Address That was Never Delivered", by Dwight D. Eisenhower, he planned to deliver this speech in Leningrad in May, 1960.
"The Meaning of Communism to Americans", by Mr. Richard Nixon. Here Mr. Nixon tells how to combat communism.
"Masters of Deceit", by J. Edgar Hoover.
Individual Students may prepare papers on selected topics such as:
The Soviet Party since 1917.
How Communism affects Americans.
How to fight Communism.
Plan a round table discussion in which individuals contrast communism with democracy.

Permit students to write an evaluation of the unit. Request suggestions for improving the unit.

Teachers may evaluate the growth of the students in the development of attitudes, appreciations and understandings.

Teacher evaluates his teaching by asking:

1. Does the student demonstrate respect for the dignity and worth of every individual?
2. Does the student have the proper knowledge about the United States of America?
3. Does the student appreciate the American way of 1ife and the American heritage?
4. Does the student use good judgment in making decisions?
5. Is the student capable of critical thinking?
6. Does the student show a willingness to defend democracy?
7. Does the student understand the nature and purpose of communism?
8. Is the student equipped to withstand the brainwashing technique of the Communists?
9. Does the student know the evils of communism?
10. Has this unit helped to make the student a force that will inspire others to appreciate the American heritage of democracy?

*Bohlman, Edna McCaull. Democracy and Its Competitors. Columbus, Ohio: Charles E. Merrill, 1960. 32 pp. 40c.

This booklet gives a concise, clearly-written comparison between democracy and communism with substantial facts for defending the democratic system.
*Caldwe11, John C. Communism in Our World. New York: John Day, 1956. 126 pp. $2.75.

The author speaks from an extensive experience with communism throughout the world and especially in the Far East and Korea. He says: "I have not attempted to go deeply into communist theory with its devious twists and turns..Rather, I have tried to answer in simple language questions: What is communism? How did it begin? What is it like in actual operation? Why is it bad? What are we doing to protect ourselves?"
*Colegrove, Kenneth. Democracy Versus Communism. Princeton, N. J.: D. Van Nostrand, 1957. 424 pp. Text ed. $3.96.

A direct look at the realities of life under communism and under democracy and at the underlying principles of these two ideologies that are competing for men's allegiance today.
*Cronyn, George W. A Primer on Communism: 200 Questions and Answers. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1960. 192 pp. $2.95.

Questions were selected as typical ones most frequently asked on the subject. Presented in simple language, the material is designed to provide rudimentary knowledge of the subject while avoiding theoretical discussions of communist ideology.

Draper, Theodore. American Communism and Soviet Russia. New York: The Viking Press, 1960. 558 pp. $8.50.

Deals with the formative years of the communist party in the United States and the relation of American communism to Soviet Russia. Shows how the COMINTERN helped financially and directly to influence decisions of the local party.

Fearey, Robert A. The U. S. Versus the U.S.S.R.: Ideologies in Conflict. Washington, D. Co: Public Affairs Press, 1959。 $48 \mathrm{pp} . $ 1.00$.

This monograph suggests that the contest between communism and Western civilization has deeper roots and will be decided on more fundamental issues than such matters as treaty alignments, industrial production rates, trade and aid programs, numbers of military divisions, and power and accuracy of missiles.

Garthoff, Raymond L. Soviet Strategy in the Nuclear Age. New York: Frederick A. Praeger, 1958. 283 pp. $5.00.

Includes a discussion of military organization, military posture, air power, sea power, land power and missile strength. Also, an analysis of strategy for 1970 and beyond.

Gunther, John. Inside Russia Today. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1958. $550 \mathrm{pp} . $ 5.95$.

The author says: "What I have tried to do most of all, with what measure of success I do not know, is give a picture of this cumbrous, slippery giant, with its evolving strains and issues--to try, perhaps vainly, to convey to the reader something of what it is like, its essential quality and atmosphere since Stalin's death. Also, I have included (a) some brief historical passages, because an indispensable key to what is going on in Russia is its continuity with the past; (b) an informal Who's Who of Russian leaders, especially those about whom information is otherwise scant; and (c) descriptive material about major Soviet sights and cities."

POSTAL BILLS REAN HIGHER TAXES

(Newspaper clipping):

It is a piece of legislative irony that while members of both parties in Congress are gravely concerned vith measures to relieve the taxpayer, both houses, of Congress have passed bills which in effect impose additional taxation. It is irony but ve doubt that American taxpayers will find it funny.

The paradox lies in postal rate increase bills pàssed by the $O_{i}^{s}$Senate, and the House: The bills are now in conference. The proposed increase in first class mail rates, for 4 to 5 cents, in the Senate bilí, would cost the American peopie $if million a year. It is estimated the total increases in the two bills would amount to a staggering $$ 700$ million a year on users of the mails. sis. cession. This a strange way to relieve either the taxpayer or the reincreases, which go all the way down the line.

For the ijirst time in American history; for example, the postal rate bills, would differentiate between reading and advertising matter. in mevispapers, and magazines, placing a higher tax on the latter. Since advertising is the most important-and valid--method of stimulating consumer interest, it does not require a crystal ball to fóresee the crippling and in some instances disastrous effect this would have on businessest that depend completely on mass advertising.

We do not want to give the impression that Congress is deliberately practicing deception by voicing concern over taxation on the one hand and proposing more on the other. The fact is the postal bills were passed before the recession became serious.

There is a practical way out of this:paradox. The bills are in

The present (Postal) Fraud Law was written in 1874 and needs rewniting. Under the guise of the fraudulent use of the mails the Post Office Department has been suppressing health books (and others). The Post Office is a Constitutional Department. It is subject to the Free Prés Amendènt to the constitution. The powers of Fraud Orders should be noved to the Dept. of Justice and all cases should be handled exactily as other criminal cases are handled, and tried in Federal Courts with Juries.

Health books which do not conform to "medical "concènsus of opin-. ion" can, therefore, be banned from the mails at the whim of the AMA through the Department of Public Health, Education and Velfare, which operates through the Solicitor's Office of the Post Office Department.

Varren and his Associate Justices handed down two "Deopisions" - the "Jencks" and the "Watkins" Decisions . . .Those two "Decisions" shatter. the FBI as". a barrier to the security of our nation . . . they freed convicted traitors. . - they muzzle our Congressional Committees . . they nullify all our protective laws against the Communist Conspiracy... .they open wide the FBI files to all the shysters who defend the Feds and rem negade American traitors!

Those three Decisions, if allowed to stand, will completely destroy all of our defenses - they clear the way for the destruction of our Country and the conquest and enslavement of our peopie. by the Communist Conspiracy!

Under our laws, giving aid and comfort to an Enemy in time of war is TREASON: Communism is a known mortal Enemy of the United States and the American people, Call it "cold" or call it "hot", we are at total war with that Enemy. Those three "Decisions" unquestionably give aid and comfort to that Enemy. By that token, they are acts of TREASON:

A soldier, be he a General or a GI, who would commit similar acts of aid and comiort to the Enemy, would promptly be Court Martialed; and, if found guilty, shot as a traitor.

A Supreme Court Justice is no more immune for acts of aid and comfort to the Enemy than a General - or a Julius Rosenberg. For him there is also a form of Court Martial, to wit: IMPEACHENT PROCEEDINGS. Fow their acts, Chief Justice Vlarren and all the Justices who concurred in those "Decisions" must be haled before Congress, and, if found guilty, they should not only be impeached, but should get the same kind of punishment that a Court martial would mete out to a General who would betray his army on the field of battle - or that was meted out to the Rosenbergs!

Only Congress has the power to place a Supreme Court Justice on trial - via the impeachment process.

Every member in both Houses of Congress has an obligation and a sworn duty to protect and defend the United Stetes, the Constitution, the American people.

Hence, this "s an urgent appeal by the Arnerican people to all members in both Houses of Congress to fulfill their oaths - to summon forthwith for proper trial ali those Justices who collaborated in those three treason-packed "Decisions:"

CAIL FOR 'SURVIVAL COMMISSION:

Country in Desperate Peril'; 'Repubiicrat' Party of Treason Can't Save US

- 'RIGHTh hereby calīs for Congross to set upea noñpartisan isuRVIVĂL COAMISSION" to be "omposed of respécted patriots whose urgent job $1 t$ will be to fully investigaté the reasons why the United States is trailing Russiarin certan technological, núciear, aeronautical and missile fields.

For óver two years RIGHT, has bèen tirelessly pointing to evidence that Russia was ahead of the United States in many respećts. Few

-     - listened. Then came the two Spurniks and for the first time since the war of 1812 the American people began to fél a sense of physical insecurity and fear of an overseas Power.

There is only one conceivable explanation of how Soviet Russia Gained her lead. This is because of the policies of giveaway, sellout anti-anti-Communsm and downright treason of the "two" parties.

Now, seif-seeking, unprincipled politioians of "bothir parties seek to blame the other party for the situation and to whitewash thér own filth-covered party.

Havent tho American pople hed enoughofthis subvesive immoral treachery? Is it not time for honest men"to"clean our the" scoundrels of "bothl parties who are responsible for the predicament? Do the American people wish to sưgvive?
In actual sober fact there ere not two parties in America. There

The oniy way that the American peopo can sate themselvas at this late date is to force their congressmeñan Senators to set up a nonpartisan "SURVIVAI COMMISSION" Fith enough power to fully investigate the entire. Executi ve and Judicap departments and ferret out all rotten, perverted or treasonous personnel. The SURVIVAI COMASSION must be composed of men of the same stature as those lonely heroes who have fought a losing battle for the last 25 years against the international socialistienemies of the American people . They cannot be pussy-footers and must not be beholden to either of the "two" parties.

When thinking of the patriots who are qualified to lead or staff the SURVIVAL CCMISSION, many names comes to mind. A few of them are Brytön Barron, adm. John G. Crommelin, Gen. P. A. delValle, Gen. Bonner Fellers', John T. FIynn; Naj' George Racey Jordan; Charles Iind bergh, Gen. Dởglas Machrthur, Dean Clarence Manion, Gen. George Vant Horn Moseley, John OIDonell, Westbrook Pegler., Dan Smoot, Gent. George E. Stratemeyer, Burton K. Wheeler and Gen. Robert E: Wood:

There are many others. Here are some who would be eminently quaified to staff the SURVIVAL COMMISSION j'f they would. break completely with their present political party or otherwise show that they are not beholden in any way to any government. infiuence': Richard Arens, Reṕ Martin Dies, Sen. Jomes O. Eastland, Col: William.F. Heimlich, J. Edgar Hoover, iSen. Villiam E. Jenner, Sen. George W. Malone; Judge Robert Morris':and Rep. Francis E. Nalter.

These are the men rho have been unashamedly right in the past and today, are more right then ever. These are the men who have been fillified, purged, silenced and all but murdered by the Invisible. Government, which controls the Republicrat Party of Treason, the newspapers, radio and all means of communication. These are the men who can save America if the people want to be saved.

The SURVIVAL COMASSION is merely a vigorous restatement of Joe. McCarthy's own wishe's which he expressed to the Senate April 25, 1956:

- . " suggest ve set up a" comaittee, to investigate" the missile program and to keep a vigilant eye on its progress. If the program is not on an allout basis, find out why if we are falling behind the Soviet Union in the development of the weapon that might permit communism to conquer us, then we must find out who is responsible and what has motivated who are responsible.

With all the earnestness.it can muster, RIGHT urges all patriots and patriotic groups to demand that Congress establish this SURVIVAL COMISSION. Nothing less can hope to dig the facts out-and with the facts, the crawling things who even now are betraying their country'.

This is the opportunity: that partiots have been searching for for years. With the question of national survival now plainly staring us all in the face, "both" rotten old parties can be blown to bits by the: impact of facts and truth, honestly and fully presented. As the terrible' story of America's plight begins to sink into the beludaled, surubbe brain of the average American they will become more fright-. esid and willing to listen to resson:

In the names of Joe McCarthy, Senators milCarran and Welker, James Forrestal, General. Patton and all the ohher great patriots who have laid , down theire lives for their country in its battle against the forces of evil and darkness, RIGHT prays that patriots all over America will berable to rouse the American people and once and for all

NOTHING MYSTERIOUSS
Votining uncertain
Juvenile delinquents just don't happen。 The production of the annual crop of youthful criminals is carefully planned and cleverly explained in the lectures of Psychopolitics as taught in the Lenin Instj, tute in hoscow. The lecturers tell the students who aspire to graduating as Freuaiian Psychiatrists that "Under the saccharine guise of assistimg youth, rigorus child labour laws prevent children from earning money and Foree them to depend on, grudging parents 0who are olvays in economic stress: Thus the child can be driven in its teens into fevolt. Delinquency will then ensue il:

Yóu must labour until every doctor and psychiatrist is either a psycho-politician or an unwitting assistant to our aims. You must labour until we have domination over the minds and bodiés of every important person in your nation " ihe lecturer al so informs his class that bÿ using such methods the nationat pride and religious affilations of juveniles can be destroyed so that loyalty to God and their flag no longer exist. He assures his pupils: "If we can éffectively kill national pride and patriotism in ONE generation ve, will have won the country".

The students are told the role of the psychopolitical operator. enables him to adivse all manner of destructive measures. He can jnstruot the fndividual child how to repulse parental control in the home and he can; in an optimum situation, instruct the parents * of" the entire nation how to handle children with the results that the childaren run wildly about vith no responsibility for their nation .or thémselves.

The lectures emphesize that strong ethical leaders of youthful groups must be inveigled careíuliy into criminal channels änd then controlled by blackmail or other means. In the case of a youthful leader who cannot be led from the straight and narrow path, he is to be "framed" in order to bring him into the hands of the juvenile authorities in the hope that he can be brought under the care of a psychopolitical operator employed as a child advisor, then, in the security of the jail, and protected by the process of law, the psychopolitical operator can ástroy the sanity of the juvenile.'Particularly brilliant scholars, athletes, and group youth leaders must. be handed in éther one of thése two ways the Psychopolitical student is told ${ }^{7}$.

This grim prospect for America was given ito us in strictest confidence by two outstanding experts, con unjist tactics of subversion and whose nemes I may not reveai. They are firmly convinced that the Nation is doomedi; that nothing, really effective is being done or can be done to arrest the progress of the great betrayal:

Thank Heáven not all people have given up. A few brave souls in America are trying to arouse the Country from its sleep of death. Magazines like the "American Mercury" and the "U. S: News and. Vorld Report." Columnists like Sokolsky, Lawrence and Budenz. Radio commentators, such as Wincheli, Fulton Lewis, Jr o and John T. Flynn.

I have before me an interesting letter firom one such lecturer not perhaps so well-known, a lady who has consistently spoken against the Communist menace, who has been hounded and persécuted and finally forced to sell her home and move out of her home State.

Hear what she has to say on this subject: "I believe the same diabolical plans will be duplicated in America, for the men who are dedicated to the worship of lucifer are bound to crucify the followers of Christ They are a bunch of sanctimonious, holier-than-thou hypocrites. "Watch them crucify McGarthy'.
"Yes, we do need many prayers'.' 'Büt let me ask you this' Do you think the general run of Catholics thave any inkling of the dangers. all around them? Is it not a fact that people do not pray for help unless they believe they need it?
"Despite all of Bishop Sheen "s telecasts; the Fatima Crusade, the Rosary Crusade, etc.; I do not find Catholics in general recognizing that there are serious dangers to their souls, their homes' their families, their way of life. When I try to draw their attention to what I know, they look at me with a blank, dubious stare. Human being do not come to their senses untim they suffer themselves\% So I suppose we are going to have to suffer before there is an awakening."

I have heard Bishop Cuthbert O'Gara discuss this subject at length. He is distressed and deeply disturbed over the failure of paople in this country to recognize the danger of the Communist threat. Añ́d Bishóp 0'Gára "knóws álil about Communism from first-hand expérience. For he spent 24 months in solitary confinement in China in an old hut loca'tad between a plgsty and a latrine.

A recent interview he grented the Catholic press in Pittsburgh should do much to awaken those who stijli favor appeasement of Red Chine.
"The people of the United States" he stated, "do not appreciate the magnitude of the defeat the West has suffered since 1945.
"It is incredible that such a smali group of pro..Communist pseudointellectuals should have effected in so short a time one of the greatest turn-overs in the hisṭory of mankind."
-Quotes Bis shop. $0^{\prime}$ Gara-
Bishop $0^{\prime}$ Gara said that this defeat ound not be blamed on stupidity but had been deliberately and cold'-bloodedy engineered.
"No group of Americans," he said, "could be that stupid. The deliberate throwing away of victory after forld lar II is confirmed by the. whole list of 'stupiditiẹs' since "YJ day. And these stupidịties are still going on. Someone is still directing the sell-ợty."

Apropos of what would happen in America should the Reds take over, I have before me at the moment a document that affords fruit for meditation: It is a list of 192 priests, some of phom I knew personally, who have been murdered in Chine and the list is admittedly incomplete. Read for yourself the nature of the treatment meted out to those martyred servants of God and then ask yourself if our fight today is not against Principalities and the Powers of Darkness.

Father Charles Osnagui; buried alive, February, 1942; Father Humbert Verdini, burned with some 30 christians, July, 1942; Sister Anne Chang; dragged to death, Harch 1948; Father Joseph Chang, dragged, beaten, shot, October, 1947; Archbishop Cyril Jarỵe, 0. F. M., died in jail, March, 1952; Father Francis Hsieo, died after tortures, Good Friday, 1950; Father Seraphin Shih (and many of his fellow Trappists), head: crushed between stones.

And so, the story goes for all of the 192 who were done to death.
All this at the hands of the Red Chinese murderers who still hold some 900 Americans in their filithy dungeions and who, if our nitwit liberals have the final sayso;: will be permitted to shoot their bloody way into the. Unịted Nations.

Ṭruly--whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mád.
-Apathy the Obstacle-
An important objective of communist propaganda has been to keep the American people uninformed about and apathetio to the extent and progress of Comminist infilitration into. American government and life. When those who have studied the strategy and tactics of Communism and who recognize it for the menace that it is attempt to combat it the biggest obstacle they face is an uninformeà and apathetic people. ## CLERGYIEN EROMOTC COMMUNISM VIA "FRONYS"

The communist conspiracy has been highly successful in using clergymen in their front groups. "Herbert Philbrick said, "The front is an effective dual=purpose device-mit, pushes communist influence outward, andit draws mébership in " Pushing communst influence outward is far more important than the fow members pulled into the . .o party through fronts.

The front technique, as invented by Lenin and the consprators, has had 50, years experience to perfectit. The front organizations: are just as essential a part of the communist conspiracy as the communist press, their training schools, end espionage ceils: Ali ar.e. directed by a central high command and are coordinate to achieve the overthrow of our government by force and violence. It is a deliberate tactic of the conspiracy to conceal the complete integration of the communist-front apparatus with the whole communist conspiracy. Deceitfulness is the essence of, the front organization. ANYONE who supports a communist-front organization 1 S supporting the communi st conspiracy and helping to destroy the American republic.

Testinying before the House committee on Apropriations on December 9 ;' 1953 , J. Edgar Hoover said, One of the principal mediums for the attanment of the goal of the communst Party is through Comunist-front organizations.. .o. The fronts are. being utijizea. in an ever increasing degree... they are excelient sourcés of revenue for raising funds. for the party":

Before the creation of front orgenizations, the number of minis(ters who carried out the instructions of the communist Party or coliaborated with it vere smail. The first important communist front organization in the United States was the American League Against Var and Fascism orgenized in 1933 and headed by Prof. Harry. F. Ward of Union Theological Sominary. Earl Browder was vice chaisman and there were: several ministers and rabbis on the National Executive Comittoe.

The House Un-American Activities Comintee said of thistront organization, "An examination of the program of the American League will show that the organization was nothing more or less than a bold advocate of treasonti: the League had branches in most large communities andicities ali over the country and most branch leaders were members of the clergy. As a result the program was widely circulated throughout church orgänizátion.

Since this first important communist front success, American clergyen have continued to collaborate with the communist conspiracy in their diabolical front organizations. Many large and influential fronts have been headed by clergymen.

A recent communist front in which Protestant clergymen make up by far the largest single group of supporters is the "National Committee to Wim Amnesty for the Smith Act Victims." orgenized in 1953. Its chairman is Edwárd. K. Barsky and the treasurer is Carl Marzanio. Both have served prisón terms-one for contempt of Congress and the other for perjury Purpose of the organization is to win amine ty for communist leadeŕs convictéd of conpiring to overthrow our Eovernment by force and violence The Daily ظorker :of July 5; 1953, boast'ed that "religious leaders have been more receptive to the emnesty, appeal than leaders of any other single. groupy. The printed mater of the: orgonization show the nafifes of 191 . Protestant clergymen from 42 states and the next largest group are educators of whom there are 83 listed.

On Janüary $30-31,1953{ }^{\circ}$, the Emergency Civil tibertiés committe held meotings in the First Presbyterian Church in New York City. A: group of liberals, headed by Prof. George Counts, branded the comijttee as a communist front well in advance of the affair. of the 41 sponsors of this pro-communist conference, 17 were Protestant clergymen who made up; by far, the largest singlè group of supporters. Three of the sponsoris resigned over the communist issue but Dr: John A. Mackay; moderator of the General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church, stubbornly stuck on.

To Dr. Mackay these communist froñts are good causes and he has announced his intention to continue joining such groups. This is not guilt by association but guilt by willful collaboration with a treasonable underground apparatus. Dr. Mackay has also publịshed his support of American recognition of Red China and its admission to the United Nations. Dr. Mackay continues to get away with these infamous activitiès merely bécaúse most Presbyterians do not realize what is happening end do not understand our, ensmies.

Eight of the translators of the new Revised Standard Version of the Bible have communist front affiliations and they have been active in some of the most dangerous of the fronts. One of the translators, Dr. Walter Russell Bowie of Union Theological Seminary, has been named on 25 communist or communist front organizations.

These samples hardly scratch the surface of communist front activities among clergymen. Generally you will find the same clergymen who collaborate wi.th the communist front organizations leading the drives against congressional committees exposing communists, for an appeasing foreign policy, and for a collectivist type government which they now. call "the responsible society". You will not hear any noise from these same ministers protesting vicious falsehoods about Congressional investigators or demanding release of American boys. from Communist dungeons.

INPEACH MARREN

Myron Co. Fagan, a great American patriot, is satisfied that there are men serving on the United States Supreme. Court playing prominent parts in shaping the destiny of our nation, who ought not be there. He writes convincingly in a little book just published under the title, IMFEACH SUPREWE COURT JUSTICES.

Chief Justice Farl Vlarren is portraved as one of the most dengerous men in public life today. Mr. Fagan wishes to see him retired to private life.

Nr. Fagan feels that the common man should be aroused to what he believes to be "a clear and present danger." Thoughts like the following ceme to the mind of this reviewer while reading his dynamic discussion of the high court
---The penalty, good men pay for indifference to government is tio be ruled by evil men. All that good poople have to do for the triumph of evil is nothing. Bad men are elected to public office by good.

Vir Fagan agrees with Attorney General Louis C. Wyman of New Hampshire who faddressing the 1957 convention of the National Association of Attorney Generals at Sun Valley, Idaho, charged that, "decisions by the Supreme Court have set the United States back 25 years in its effort to controlu Communism." He showed exactly how the tribunal had aided and abetted the Communist cause under Warren's management. .

Planned Events III = November 1956
In recent issues we have been reviewing those individual tickings of the clock of history that so many of us tend to forgot in the clatter "óf. here-and-now. Some readers have asked if we aré tirying to prove something." The answer is emphatically "No:" Oniy history will prove whether our nation ignored the warning signals. so vital to its survival. We can mérely supply the incontestable evidence. And that is all we häve been doing: presenting seemingly unrelated events in many fields rhich confirm the enormity ond complexity of the insidious pattern of the years gone by--events yhich, al though famitiar to a few of us, often were lost in memory.

As the Mercury has been reminding its readers over the past few months memory is one of our most follible faculties Events that shaped history a handful of years ago are lost in a fuzziness of time: for many of us. Yet, for each event in history, time is an essential dimension: Without such a dimension, things can seem a tangle of threads. With such a dimension, history again becomes a full-bodied fabric, a tapestry of design, sweep and color. To test whether it is a tangle or a tapestry.

WHAT IS THE BRETTON WOODS AGREEM

The Hon. John Francis Neylan in an analysis of the Bretton Woods soheme printed in full in the Congressional Record of April 4, 1945, painted cut:
( "The document embodies so many basic contradictions, and is so loaded with ambigutties it déies understanding as anything but an elaborate contrivance to give away American money ond fetter the United S'tates in the post-wan eray almost $1 i k e$ a conquered nation.

* "The real author of the Bretton Voods Agreement, with what he has termed its iepoch-making innovationsfior international plans?, i's Lord John Maynard Keynes, a director of thenBank of England, adviser to the British Exchequer, and the most prililant exponent of the project of substituting economic imperialism for political imperialism with London and other European capitals as the seatts of empire: "
"Lorid Keynès frankily stated" thaṭ his proposal might become tho pivot of the future economic government of the world.'

The day of imperialism is dead and gone, and the attempt to perpetuate in under a new guise is doomed to failure.
"The Bretton Woods Agreement does not contemplate a new world order based upon freedom and expanding development of all the human race. It is a document which seeks to create an economic strait jacket for the benefit of a continent which for centuries has drained the treasure of the rest of the world to finance its warsuand to support it in intervalis of peace .
"The United States seems to contain the only considerable body of persons who consider devotion to Country rather absurd; while Europe and the rest of the world seem orowded with fanatical nationalists who are experts in matters of international exchange and currencÿ.
"Already it is certain that the $12,000,000$ in the armed services $\overbrace{0}^{\infty}$ of the United States, fighting all over the world, are coming home to the grim reality of a martgage of more: than $\$ 300,000,000,000$. They will experiencedifficulty in understanding some of the adition al burdens being piled upon them while they will be facing the grim and heart-breaking dificulties of readjustment to the all-important. responaibility of supporting themselves and their children.

It wound seem equitable that these men should heve some voice in determining whether the resources vhich belong to them and their children are to be squandered to enable old political imperialisms to transmute themselves into economic empires and perpetuate their dominion over hundreds of milijons of human beings and vast territories they could neither protect nor liberate.
"The implications and"possibilities of the scheme areso tremendous as affecting the future welfare of the United States, it yould. seem no public servant with a respect for his trust would fail to scrutinize it with "anxious, concern;"

"Investigation of the diets of large groupsion peopie correl̃ated with laboratory studies end direct examjnation has led to the startling observation that the margin of safety against deficiency diseases is narrow rather than broad, that the presence of nutritional inadequacy is widespread. and not limited to the lower economic group. Dr. Pusey, we doubt if you realize that your University through Dr. Stare and his 'so-called' "Nutrition Department" has been used as a base of operations for the destruction of our two most cherished possessions, nemely:
(a) Our basic Freedoms of Speech and Press, and
(b) Our National Health.

As proof of (a) we refer you to a speech by Arthur I. Connell, then the American Legion National Commander, January 28, 1954 before the Veterans Affairs Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives in which he deplored the existance of a code of cooperation' which provides that newspapers, radio and television stations shall olear 'all matters of health or medical news through established medical channels before proceeding to publication or broadcast?
The Code reads: "A list of current spokesmen of the State Medical Society shall be supplied to representatives of the press and radio (also television stations) and shall be kept up to date."

Commander Connell said, "This code is in reality a vontract which has hád the practical elfect.of suppressing presentetions to the publichot many facts in the controversyover medical care for Amer:ica's 21 million ex-service men and women." ## THE PEOPLE ARE NOT ATLOWED TO KNOW THE TRUTH

We do NOW agree with the statement in MoCall!s July 1955 article; "Are You Being Fooled by; the Food Quacks". which says "Refined and processed foods are a favorite target of the 'food specialist' who would have us believe these foods are not nutritious. Actually we get as much food value from refined foods which have been enriched as from naturel foods, and sometimes more."

We DO agree with the statement made by Dr. William Coda Martin of New York before the recent convention of the American Academy of Nutrition in which he said the "Americans are poorly nourished because the quality of food is depleted by refinement and processing which removes minerals and vitamins. The humblest Indians in South America suffer less from malnutrition than the average middle class family in the United" States." (Why are there so many hospitals, so many unfits rejected from the Army, so much Polió, Arthritis and Heart Disease?)

A 'nutritionist' from the American Baking Institute toldone group of teachers that if they had in their school libraries any of Adelle Oavis? books, they should lose no time in removing and destroying Lhem! The Special Interest Groups continue to run our country causing so much ill health. Adelle Davis, B. A., M. S. holds her degrees from the beṣt Universities in the country and proves by actual practice what her methods of diet will do for the human body. We highly recommend her books (used copies as listed below):

Harvey W. Wiley, M. Yet to-day (1958) Adolphus Hohensee is in prison for selling whole grain wheat (violation of the Food and Drug Act) and the owner of a very well known organization which sells vitamins on the house-to-house plan and claimed that practically all illness and diseases of mankind are due to improper nutrition was sentenced to a year in prison for violating the 'Food and Drug Act'. THE WILEY FOOD AND DRUG BILL-.-Congressman Williams of Mississippi has introduced HR 10404 deesigned to force the Food & Drug Hoodiums to observe the Wiley Food & Drug Act of 1906. When the bill was first passed, thé Vioe President of the US and a powerful Senâtor were in the food business. They effectively stopped its enforoement.

And its enförcement ever since has been stopped as to large food and drug producers', nowadays those owned or contriolled by the House of Rockefeller. CAPSULE NEWS has been the only newspaper tio expose this crime against the public, where the food and drug trusts are allowed by the US Food & Drug Admn to adulterate food with preservatives, colorants and prettyfiers that have never been tested for to-xicity---and some of which áre known canceṛ producers.

A Prediction: The Food & Drug Hoodlums will spearhead a drive by the Food Trust to prevent the bill ever getting to the floor of the House.

EMBALMED CELERY---Celery eaters who have been wondering why their supermarket celery tests "sweetish" and has no "life" any more have good cause to wonder. It seems that in order to make larger sales (by making celery keap longer), the Food trust has taken to dipping it in an embalming fluid, the trade name of which is formaldehyde.

Good green celery should have a slightly bitter taste bëcause of the organic iron in it., a mineral absolutely necessary for health and strength. Since this emblaming fluid kills the iron content, it makes celery about as uséful as ân embalmed body.

CAPSULE NEWS has systematically exposed the worst, of the 500 chemicals and poisons the Food Trust is putting in the food we buy at the supermarket and the restaurent. This is put in to preserve, prettyfy and other wise make it attractive to the buyer. These poisons are all put in foods in violation of the Food & Díug laws.

But the US Food & Drug Admn always looks the other way when the violators are what Teddy Rnosevelt used to call "malefactors of great wealth." The FraDA is quick to jump on the lititle violator. And if no law violation is committed at all, but a natural vitamin distributor whonaser own ge enogh to hurt the profits de the food and Foodidyesoare now widely used in bakery products, candy, soft drinks.j ont the skintof fruits and elsewhere. So too are a growing number of other food additives.

Dr. C. W. Heuper of the government's National Cancer Institute Joted that "an apprectable number of ohemicals has been shown to cause cancer in man" and warned that some of these are very similar to those introduced into our fód supply:

For example, he said, considerabie númber of dye workers producing a certain dye have come down wi.th cancer of the bladder. "Several certified food dyes contain this dye as part of their chemical molecule, he nded.

In addtiong said Dr: Hueper, three oertified food dyes have been shownto cause a cancer-type disesse in rats. Another such dye, fed to dogs, bróke down into a new ohomical which oáuses bláder cancer in dogs and man he declaréd.

Dr: Hueper noted that these facts don't prove the dyes cause cancer in man. Howeverg he stressed that there's a very large list of chemicaís includine some used as food adjutves, whose safety in relation to cancer just isnt known yet.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCATION CORRUTION AGAIN A O BETRAYS PUBLIC BY HAPPROVAL" OF WATER FUYORTDATTON

* The A, M. approval of mass poisoning by dump of fuoride (rat poison) into water supplies, oame as no surpise to those acquainted with the venality and corruption of its poititics. "An advertising quack abortionist, "pooc" George H. Simmns, "reorgenized" the Association, in ion wrote the "Code of Ethics" for it, and dominated it until he ded in 1937, as related in my book, Your. LIFE IS THELR TOY. He 'still dominates it in spirit through inis ar heir, Dr. Morris Fishbein, who admired him so greatly that hé dedicated his book on Quacks, and Fads to his master and mentor $r$, Quack Simmons: Since the Rockef eller-Hearst interests employed Dr, Fishbein to help pit over fluoridation in New York at the time, of the hearings on the sub'jét before the Board of E'stimates, wh an article in the New York Mirror, it was inevitable that his henchmen would approve it wi thout regard to the trutho or facts. But in view off the ugly record of the A.M. A. and its bo sses in betray-? ing public health in the past, the public wold do well to beware of their "approval".

Pol sonous Radium Drinking Water was appoved by the A.M. A. ior a oonsiderstion, in 1913 , at the same time as it rejected. cod liver oil ast, "worthless putrid oil". Its Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry urged its use on the medicel profession end on the publio as a "safe" remedy for a wide array of ailments, including arthritis. In the decade that followed, a multitude of victims were poisoned andekilied by radioactive poisoning that destroyed their bones and joints, caused by the A.M.A. "approved" remedy. It was. not until millionaire A. M. Byers was mur.dered by the poisonous. Radium Drinking Watter Yapproved by thei A.M. As and prescribed by his high-priced doctor, that public scandel and outcry forced the futhless A.M.A. politicians to withdraw their "approval" of the poisonied water and forego the revenue that they derived from advertising it to the victim public and the profession. This strikingly illustrates the danger of poisoning water with A.M.A. approval.

In the 1930's, queck specialist Dr: Morris Fishbein recommended to the profession and the public, through the columns of the Journel of the AGM.A. and through the: columns that he wrote, for popular consumption in the newspapers, poisonous dinitrophenol as a "safe reducing remedy"to After it had poisoned a multitude of viotims foolish enóugh to aocept this quackery, blindod numer-

CAN: FLOURIDATION OF: YOUR WATER

Water flouridation iwas forced on the inhabitents of "Grand Rapias, Michigan by the U. S. Public Health Service in 1945 and cancer mortalities have increased to fantastic proportions:
. It was proved years ago that: soidum fouridé wáter in very low concentrations promotes, catalyzes añ ecolerates cancery It was proved by the doctors at the College of Physionan and Surgeons with rats, ond this is a matter of record" (H: R. 2341 hearingis"page 110).

Dr. Howard Richardson; formerly Cancér Resèarch Administirator at the University of Oregon, showed in à réséarch paper that the flourine salts act as a catalyst in the cancer process and their combination with a carcinogenic agent (suchis X-Rays) producoss cancer.

Communist infiltration of the U. S. Public Health Service (which is promoting univexsal water fouridation) is só obvious that t has been mentionedinthe Congressional Recórd by Congressman Clare Hófiman of Mi chigan (June 1, 1954, pages A-4069-4070):

Senator McCarthy was getting very close to the U. S. Public Health Service subversive dentists when he began inquiring about the dent-: ist Peress, and this is, probably why he had to be stopped and im: mobilized at any cost.

The Communist master plan is to slowly DisIROY OUR MIIITARY MANPOWER, concentrating especially on our children, so that we will not be able to raise an army when the necessity arises. It must be done in such a way that a sufficient number of our population will already be doomed by incipient cancer before it beoomes obvious that the methods used are harmful.

If your city is now having flourides added to your water supply, or if your city government is considering such a move, you should investigate the situation. Write to your Congressman in. Washington to send you copies of the hearings on $H_{*}$ R 2341. Note especially pages $374-377$ and page 110 which indicate the relationship between flouridation and the increase in cancer type diseases.

AN EXPERT SPEAKS ON COMMUNISM

The Devastating Job Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has done on Comminism in his new book, "Masters of Deceit," is recommended: reading. He has thoroughly demolished the fiction that Communism is just another political philosophy that has to be tolerated end defended as a "right" in ea. free country.

Neariy 40 years of intensive study have convinced Mr. Hoover that the real and only purpose of Communism in America is to destroy human freedom, and. he proves the point to the complete satisfaction of áll who read his book with open minds, and with total ref̣utation of all who dispute its truth.

Tolerance of Communism, as Mr. Hoover says, it not a virtue but a folly. It is a philosophy that goes to fithe utter depths of depravityy, hate oṇd human venom."

Communists do not seek merely to change or remodel or reform the American form of government. Let Mr. Hoover describe their real intention.
"They would tear i.t to the ground, destroy all opposition, and then create $a$ new government, an American province in the Soviet world empire.."

On January 7 , 1958 . Thresented' an indictmént against these officials of partion pang in gigantio criminal-conspiracy to destrồ the Constitưtion by úsurping the power of the Conerés of the United States over the connage of money and the regulation of the value thereof, with guilty knowledge and open connivance of officals of the Executive, Legisliative and Judicial branches of government. No action has been taken by any of these responsible officials relative to my indictméti, this oriminal neglect of duty involving them ever more deeply in the web of this gigantic conspírà

This issue is urgent and remedial action mandatory. The swinding operations of the Federal Reserve Bank; acting aj"the instrument of sedition for the international money cartelists, are primarily responsible for the current depression, which has aliready brought disaster to milions, may cause the dêstitute to résort to yiolence with blood flowing in our streetts and threatens to destroy our Republic. In view of this urgency, and as a starting point for bringing economic order out of chaotic depression, I now demand, in the name of the $\frac{\text { Constitutioñ that a joint committo of Congress }}{\text { designate }}$, oe designated to investigate and publioize the full facts concerning the establishment and subsequent operation of the Federal Reserve Bank, with special reference to the following:
(1) Details of the conspiracy, in 1912, at Jekyll Island, Georgia, owned by Mr. J. P. Morgan, leading to the plan for the establishment of the Federal Reserve Bank.
(2) The complicity of Senator Aldrich and other political leaders in promoting the conspiracy through the Congress, and in stren-
(3) The names of all officials of the Feăeral Reserve-Board; and of branch banks since 1913.
(4) The names of ail stockholders of the bank since ig13, the resources (if any) contributed by each to the bank, and year by. year, the emount of profits paid to each... If the stöck was held in the name of a corporation, the names of principal of:ficials of such corporation.
(5) The nămes, specifically, of any and all public officials included on such list, with amounts of profits, year by year, received by each.
(6). The details..of operations of the bank, with special reference to the techniques established to require our taxpayers to pay interest, on our own bonds, to this corporation which performs no public service.
(7) The means used to cause a press, radio and TV black-out on all public discussion on this issue to prevent the truth concerning this grand conspiracy from becoming known to our citizens.
(8) The methods used by the ovners of the banks to capitalize on mass murder of internationai wars, on mass destitution during the current. and eariier depressions, and to ọonfisoate the resources of the individual and the nation.
(9) Proposals for vigorous action to bring the guilty before Federal Courts for triai and punishment.

Failure of the Congress to act on the above petition will necessitate vigorous action by other means. I do not propose to be thwarted in my determination to. fulfill my oath to defend the Constitution of the United States, particularly by lawless public servants who have taken a like oath. Crimes have been committed. Any member of Congress who fails to act to expose the orimes and to punish the guilty becomes, himself, guility of compounding a felony and mustt be punished. I am asking my frịend́s to countersign this petition, on separate communications.

THE GREATEST STEAL IN AMERICAN HISTORY

(Editor's Note: - This extension of Congressman Shoemaker's remarks is taken from Congressional Record of May 1, 1934.)

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHOEMAKER: Nir Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record at this point, and to include therein a little statement by the President of the United Sthates of about 100-wórds.

The SPEAKER: "Is there any objection to the request of the gentlemán from Minnesota? been cooperating whin Mo Mason, intermedary officer; Progressive Party, Congressionalablock Washington, D Co, developing, the facts in the greatest stegl ever permited by a legisiative body in American History\% If refer to the passage of the law which extended the rights of the Federal Reserve banks to borrow money on United Stetes Secuitios. The ereat unansverable question is Why, do we keep on in this camouglage and financial policy of issuing, tax-exempt interest-bearing securities when we know the law perimit:s the collossal steal I wish too cellisattention to here?
$\therefore$ The Federal Reserve Banks now have about three billions of Ünited States funds, dravinginterest from $27 / 8$ to . 4 per cent.

This old liew provides that upon the tender of the Feareral Reserve Bank, a private corporation; to the Federal Reserve agent, a: United States Government Official, of certain collateral and the coost of printing the bills - which is now 0.007 cent each - the Government shall coin and pay the Federal Reserve bank currency equal, to the collateral tendered.
$\cdots$ Ann the benefits, such anterest and premins, go to the " bank and not to the government. The collateral is stored in the safety deposit vault of the bank itself.

This bill specified that United States securities - bonds - may be used for a limited number of yearse

It has been found that seven-tenths of a cent per bill the cost of an average $$ 1,000$ purchase is anywhere erom 26 cents to, 40 oents, according to the denomination ordered. A $$ 5$ bill and a $$ 10$ bill cost exactly, the same, wizt $$ 0 ; 007 \%$. In. the calculation I am making here I shall figure on the basis of 30 cents per thousand dollars being the cost of the 111 s .

Prosident Roosovelt whestitofiogt nine bilions in bonds.
Here is the possible workout:

FIRST OOPERATION

Foderal Reserve Bank tenders the Unit'od States Government $$ 1,000,000,000$ of present-owned bonds and $$ 300,000$ in currency and asks for a billion of new eurrency\%.

The Government deposits the bond in the box at the bank. These bonds still pay interest to the bank The $$ 300,000$ which pays for the cost of the printing goes to the United States Treasury in Washington. .. The Treasury deliversito the bank $$ 1,000,000,000$ in new currency.

The bank tăkes the biilion and deturns it to the government for a billion of new bond drawing $27 / 8$ per cent interest - Secretary. Morganthau's "bargain $x$ ate" announced in the papers.

The Government delivers the bonds to the bank. The bank now has a.new billion. This new billion takes the place of the billion put up as collateral in the course of this first operation. Thus the bank has spent only $$ 300,000$ (the cost of printing the bilis) " and their intierest on the new billion of bonds during the fir st year first year, and $$ 28,750,000$ each sucoeeding year until the bonds are päid. When one remembers that Civily War Bonds are still outstanding - perhaps forming part of the billión of bonds tendered by the bank in this operation - one gathers an idea of the immensity of the steal.

SECOND OPERAIION
-The bank tenders the new billion of bonds to the Government and $$ 300,000$ is currency for a billion in new money. The Government deposits the bonds still drawing interest in the bank, in the banks own vault and send's the $$ 300,000$ to the "Treasury to cover the cost of printing.

The Government delivers to the bank one billion in new currency.
The bank returns the billion to the Government for a bilion of bonds. The Government delivers the bonds and the bank-now have two billions of bonds, with an annual interest of $$ 57,500,000$ for an outlay of $$ 600,000$.

THITRD OPERATION
The bank tenders $$ 300,000$ and the billion of bonds from Operation Two to the Government for a billion of new currency.

The Government delyvers the money.
Thẽ bank returns the money for a billion of bonds.
The Government delivers the bonds and the banks now has three billions of bonds at interest; at an investment of $$ 900,000$ and an annual: Interest income of $$ 86 ; 250,000$. You will notice thät the interest is greater than the new investment by nearly ten times.

FOURTH OPERATION
Jüst-the same as the preceeding. The investment is inoreased to $$ 1,200,000$ and the annual interiest is $$ 115,000,000$.

FIFTH OPERATION
$\because$ Sàme as preceeding. The investment is now $\$ 1,500,000$ and the annual interest has slipped up to $\$ 143,750,000$.

SIXTH OPERATION

In other words, the farmer dpays 150 times as much in one year as the banker pars during the life of the currency, and the laborer peys 200 times as much din one year as the banker pays during ther 1 fi er of the currency.

The Traziex $\frac{T}{2}$ emke Binl would make the farmer pay only 50 times as much as the bankers ore 0.0.5 por cent.

A further point: We have seen the President's plans referred to as of socialintic.origin and tendency... In. théquéstion of bonds which are bondagein. Norman Thomas, Socialistic Party candidate for the presidency even called on the President and urged him to issue twelve billions of relief bonds insteadiof five billions then proposed. Senators Cutting and La Follette worked for days to get Roosevelt to issue more trelief, bonds more bondager mut the President bravely (?) held down to only nine billions for the robbers, making a small daily dole for the impoverished bankers of $$ 708,904.11$.

Other profits, probably greater than the interest on the bonds tabulated above are possible by the ability of the bankers to loan that credit money at high interest rates Ten torifteen billions or more could easily be juggled in a credit structure. Then, there is the possibility of the bankers never havincsto repay the deposit it-

The history of the Civil War, Cleveland Panic, and Panama Canal Bonds now duetto'the refunding, dnown asitconsolst "is that they have already cost the Government infinterest more than their face the value. "THE LOWER HOUSE of COngress has given its approval to a measure designed to prevent the unwarranted and unnecessary suppression of information by officials of the Federal Government and the Senate would be well advised to give the bill iinal passage.

The facts are that a 168 year old statute has been increasingly misused in recent years to cover up bureaucratic mistakes, that officials with a passion for making public business their own personal affair have wielded a dangerous power, and thát the American people. have been deprived of thelr besic right to full information about their own government.

There is nothing in the proposed legislation to weaken security safeguards.
$\therefore$ There is adequate provision in the measure for keeping unauthorized persons out of government files, and records winere indiscriminate invasion might do irreparable injury.

But it would put an end to the stupid business of incompetent and even corrupt of ficials assuming the power to say what the people shail bé tọld and what they shall not be told.

The power to suppress information makes the bureaucrat the master, of the people, and the people the servants of the office-holders.

Bad government flourishes in an atmosphere of suppression and concealment. The public interest is best served when the Nation knows the whole story and not jus't the half-truth's about the conduct of national affairs."

WAKI UP, AMERICANS

By Otto Garr Tague

In yesterday!s column I quoted two sentences which I believe express the most alarming unAmerican principle and purpose I ever have seen put into words : . . Study them . . Burn them into your memory . . . 'I repeat them:'

WThey said that during and after World War II, the majority of its of ficers had wộkd with the of fice of Strategic Services, the State Department and the European Ficonomics Administration under directives which oalled for an alteration of the social structure of the United states so as to make co-existence with the Soviet Union possible." "When it was suggested that the public be made aware of these objectives, ". ., their answer was a horrified 'No! Such a move would be unthinkable?!"
"n That is the statement of Norman Dodd, a very reputable econo"mist, who was research director of the Reece Committee which was investigating, tax-free foundations . . He was referring to what was said by the officers of one of the largest of these foundations.

- Apparently, somebody higher up' had issued a directive to modify the social structure of our country in order to accommodate it to co-existence with the Soviets . . Without letting our people know what they were up to and presumably, as of ficers of the taxfree foundation they felt impeiled to continue that polioy with the millions of funds at their disposal . . Millions made possible by the social structure they were to sabotage!

Now, go back to Yalta . . Follow through with Potsdam . . . Then the surrender in Korea... The treatment oif MáoArthur ... The compromise since made with the Soviets in the International Labor Organization and elsewhere . . The failure to support the Hungarian people in their rebellion : Thé billion given to Tito, po lañ and other Cömmunist regimes ...The treatment accorded McCarthy and the Reece Comitites. The Supreme Court decisions freeing Communistsiand crippling the Federal Bureau of Investigation!

- And you come up with the darndest mess of coincidents you ever tried to unravel.. . Or are they 00-inoidents? $-\infty$ $\therefore \quad \cdots$

THE POWER OF IETTER WRITTNG RECOGNIZED BY PRESS
"The people of the Republio possess "the greatest power of influence of any people anywhere, namely: the privilege of writing letters expressing theix opinions to their elected representativesg and to the editors of newspapers.

We have always maintained that both representatives in Government and editors of newspapers highly regard the letter writer who has the courage to express his opinion of approval or opposition. The "Letters To The Editor" department is the most intimate contact newspapers have, with their readers.

The following item in Roy Erwin!s Column, Editor and Publisher, November 5, 1956, page four confirms this belief:
"Letters to Ed Are NEWS
A reader earnestly inquired of the Washington Daily News why it públished letersmto-themeditor inasmuch as the public forum column "doesn? $t_{\text {n }}$ necessarily represent a crossesection of public opinion and some writers are bigoted and narrowminded." He wanted to know how lotters are seleoted for publication.

We, select them precisely on that basis -- as news."

Mr. Erwin gave a more detailed evidence of the pow wer of letter writing in a full page feature story under title:

COMONISA

"In June, 1957, Nikita Khrushohev, Soviet Cormunist Party boss, was interviermed before a nation-wide American television audience. With calm assurance, ho stated:

1. : I oan prophesy that your grandchildren in America wili live under Socia lism. And please do not be afraid of that: Your grandehildien will . . . not understand how their grandparents did not unders'tand the progressive nature of a Socialist society."

William Z. Foster, long time National Chairman of the Communist Party of the United States, also reflected the hope that this Nation will one day become communist when he stated in 1949, in dedicating his book, "The Twilight of World Capitais $\sin ^{\prime \prime}$ :
 States."

These words of Russia's top party boss and one of the highest ranking Communists in the United States reveal the nature of the enemy we faces: To make the United States a Comimist Nation is the ambition of every party member, regardless of position or ranke:.

He works constantly to maker this dream a reality, to steal your rights, liberties and property."

The tragedy of communism is not simply that it murders, but it transforms murder into a moral and righteous act. When a person does evil and he is conscious he is doing ovil? you have a basis of approach; but when evil becomes good you have no starting pointy you have nothing, about which to argue. The great evil rests in the philosophaconsic concepts of communism whon it ret jects God, when it materializes and bestializes, man, and when it denies the inherent dignity and yailue of human personality and individuality o Upon that ruthless, amoraly matériaintio basis att builds an edifice which destroys evermore

Dr. Schwarz. Exactly. This is the paradox. Here are our very precious; cherished liberties that did not come about by accident, that are the envy and adm miration of the rest of the world; here is a group of people. The Commuists, opendy dedicated to their total destruction and. yet these commnists are able to take advantage of these very ilberties and to hide behind these liberties for:their purposes of destruction and to recruit as their "runners of interferencell well meaning American citizens. This is the paradox that confronts us The problem is, and I know this is'a problem that confronts your committee ali the time, how can we rout them out, expose and disarm them without doing damage to the constitutional system and liberty under Iaw'which are so oherished 'in Amerm ica? I believe it can be done, it must be done; and, it is being dones.

When'we want people of the world to resist the Commnist idea and to embrace the idea "ff freedom, we think that if we give them material benefits this will. automatically come to pass, and so the idea is to give economic aid and military "assistance in the expectation that commenism will lose its appeal and freedom will triumph.

The foundation is wrong.. Katerialistic measures do not control the minds and the hearts of the people. This must be done in a more ditect fashion. We need a scientific approach that will utilize the moral, cultural, and spiritual values in each of these countries, We need a loving, friendly, comoperative spirit and a direct approach to their minds and hearts to mobilize them against comimuism.
$\because \quad$ Mr, Weil. What Must be done if we are to survive?
Dr. Schwarz. Wie must face honestly the gravitiv of the situation. Wie must give it priority in our thinking and in our actions. We must build a strong base of freedom-loving people anticulate in their faith; in their love of country, in their love of God, in their love of home, and in their love of lavy and we must rally the spiritual forces in the heart of man and recruit dedicated personnel to raise barriers against communism in every area of the world.

The fundamental foundation of opposition to comimism is an informed public opinion and a dedicated public character: On these alone the necessary legislative, administrative, judicial, military, and economic and educational programs may be buill.
. We have to set to work urgently building the foundation for Comunist defeat. Most of our present programs, such as the military program and economic program; are temporary measures which may hold back the flood for a short period and give us a little more time to find a permanent solution.

We live in a world of FRAUD. To hide that fact, the masses are kept in darkness, and "Better Schools Build Better Oomanitiest, is one of the tricks, used for that. purpose.

One of the worst and most. dangerbus frauds is medical art, and so deciared by leading "doctors from Hippocrates" to Alexis"carrel

Then he steppedup from the physical to"theanstral plane, and wrote a series of amazing works based on themostylisdom of the Ancient, Masters in which he a in interpreted puzzling symbolstand parables of theobibles ins:

He showed that the Book with Seven Seals mentioned in the Bible, is man's ETher Lamb which looked like it had been sacrificed o(Rev. $5: 6$ ) was the trembling Neophyte; prepared for the ordeals of initiation tintwhich would be taught how to ascend to the Plane of Seership by activating those Seven Bate tories and awakening the dormant Sixth and Seventh Sense Powers.

The Great Red Dragon, mentioned in the Bible, is, a symbol of Carnal Aust in the Blood (Rev, 12).

The "greatest shock came when this doctor revealed that the Silver Cord, mentioned but once in the Bible (Exc ley 12:6), is a cosmic beam of Astral Light which penetrates the skit at the ronticuus Frontaids then transoms into nertabers in the brainy and become the Spinal Cord from which nerves extend terrestrial plane.

Even modern science declares that minho a nerve system theorems no nimall" (Wilder, Hist. of Med. p. 287).

The Ancient Astrologers taught that as Astral. Radiationtstrikes the earth ts aura, an Aeriferous Substance is created that surrounds the earth, extending some 6,000 miles into space and containing the Virility of all Life.
"This was the Astral World of the Ancient Masters. It Later was fanged to (the "Spiritual World of Christianity" when the Masters were assassinated and their scriptures 'were stolemand:distonted.
According'to 'the; Astrologers; the Astral World is the Creative; Realm from which " prongs, all living things on' earth , The Sun is' the Generator and if the Sun shouldifet and:neyer rise again, the earth would become as barren as a stone gand devoid of ali, Life. 'Therefore' as Life goes with the: Sung so Life comes, with the Sun.

In the case of Man, an Astral Beam, containing the Seed or Ego, dips down from the Creative Realm and forms "aphsicalibodyjin which dwells the Flame Divine or Celestial Man, who retums in the "born again" process to the Astral World. "

This is the Cosmic Cycle of: Creation in which all Entities travel.

This doctor based his treatment of the sick on the "Cosmic itu of "Creation; and that method will not change until the law changes. The hogwash and hokum about "medical progress" is pure propaganda published to deceive the masses.

This doctor tested his method for years in practice, losing nöt oñe patienti。" Host of them were physical wrecks, coming to him only as a last resort after being cast off by other doctors as incurable:

Iñ treating these cases this doctor applied the triadical phases of Creative Processés as fóllows:

1. Man can live for weeks without eating, but he stops living as soon as he 'totops breathing. To: preserve health, the air must be in motion and free of pollution." Stagnant air in homes, hospitals, bedrooms, medical offices, eto.
 in circulation with electric fans.
2. Water is next. The greater part of blood and body consists of water To promote health all water entering the body must be pure and free of all pollutants (purifiers) used by health boards to breed bad health and provide business for doctors. So, his patients got pure rain water that had not touched the ground:
3. Greatest freedom of function is next, and secured by fasting, taking no food but 'air and water, the two foremost foods for man.

Under this natural regime the patients recovered as if by magic. Here is more evidence to prove medical art is a fraud.

ONE DISEASE - ONE TREATKENT
This doctor!s work proved that dīsease is an imaginary entity existing only in the doctor's mind. The world's great doctors have declared that there is no diseasel. There are Good Health and Bad Health oniy.

The symptoms of Bad Health doctors are trained to study, group together and give them empty namas (diagnosis) which mean nothing, and term them diseases that may kill the patient if not treated and "lured".

As there is no disease, then disease never killed any one. When the rem medies kill the patient, the doctors quite logically hide the fact by falsely putting the blame on "disease":.

In 1835 Dr. Samuel Diokson, of Eginburgh, published a work in which he asserted that all diseases "are one and the same". (Wilder's Hist. of Med. 1901, p. 357).

That simple truth swept into oblivion as frivolous and absurd the whole : "E complicated and inconsistent classification of diseases, with their multifarious names and stüpid distinctions', exposing as false a scheme of plunder and murder supported by centuries of false teaching, by which a profession of supposedly : honorãble men has created a false psychology' of disease' that :sends thousands to eaíly grazós each year while yielding great profits to its exponents.

This "Communisti" Manual of Instructions for Psychopolitical Warfare" has been briefed or condensed into a pamphlet, "Brainwashing." Here is set forth the complete program for the psychopolitical conquest of the United States. You will at once recognize this as the MENTAL HEALTH program, already far adyanced in our nation at the local, state and federal levels, and in citizen groups. You can see how our great nation is being conquered, just as the Comunists boásit, without the "firing of a single shot."

The following are exact quotations from the pamphlet "Brainwashing."

CHAPTER I.
Psychopolitics is the art and science of asserting and maintaining dominion over the thoughts and loyalties of individuals, officers, bureaus, and mass, and the the thoughts and loyalties of individuals, officers, bureaus, and masses and the $\%$ effecting of the conquest of enemy nations through MENTAL HEALING."

-. Such success as the Income Tax Law, had it" been followed thoroughly, could. have brought the United States and not Russia into the world scene, as the first Communist nation.: :
Communism could best succeed if at the side of every rich or influential man there could be placed; a psychopolitical operator, an undoubted authority in the field of "mental healing" who could then. upset the economic policies of the country and. when the time comes to do away forever with the rich or influential man . . ad․ minister the proper drug. or treatment to bring about his complete demise in an in. stitution as a patientror dead as a suicide:
The Capitalist does not know the definition of war: He thinks of war as attack' with force performed, by soldiers and machines $: 0$ The Capitalist has never won a war in truth. The pșychopolitician is having little trouble winning this one .

When the loyalty of an individual cannot be swerved. it is usually best. . to: see to it that he disposes of himself by suicide or by bringing about his demise in . such.a way as to resemble suicide.
It is a firm principle of Psychopolitics that the person to be destroyed must be involved at first or second hand in the stigma of insanity. ...
- . One of the first and foremost missions of the psychopolitician is to make an attack upon Communism and insanity synonymous. IT SHOULD BECCRE THE DEFINITION OF INSANITY, OF THE PARANOID VARIETY, THAT HA PARANOID BELIEVES HE IS BEING ATTACKED BY COMMuNISTS". Under the saccharine guise of assistance to them, rigorous child labor laws are the best means to deny the child any right in the society. SCHEME TU PERVERT PUBLIC EDUCATIUN

- UNESCO!s scheme to pervert public education appears in a series of nine volumes, titled "Toward World Understanding, " which presume to instiruct kindergarten and elementary grade teachers in the fine art of preparing our youngsters for the day when their first loyalty will be to a vorld govemment.g of which the United States will form but an administrative part. The booklets bear the following individual numbers and titles:
I. Some Suggestions on Teaching About the U. N. and Its Specialized Agencies.
II. The Education and Training of Teachers.
III. A Selected Bibliography.
IV. The U. N. and World Citizenship.
V. In the Classroom With Children Under 13 years of age.
VI. The Influence of Home and Community on Children Under liz years of age. VII. Some Suggestions on the Teaching of Geography.
VIII. A Teachers: Guide to the Declaration of Human Rights.
IX. Some Suggestions on the Teaching of World History.

COLIMBIA HOTBED CF BRITISH FABIANISLA
These booklets are cheaply priced for maximum distribution and are printed by Columbia University Press, New York. This seems appropriate, considering. the role Columbī's Teachers College has long played in developing new methods for radicalizing and internationalizing public education in this country. The insitution has become weill-known as a hotbed of British Fabianism, that peculiar type of creeping socialism which sired the present Labor Government which has reduced England to a fourth-rate power and a star boarder in the Europenan section of America's world charity ward.

TEACH DISLOYALTY TO CHILDREN
UNESCOis booklets read like the propâganda put out by United Vorld Federalists, Inc., which has been denied tax exemption because of its opecifically political nature. They begin by advancing the totally un-American doctrine that the prime function of pubijc education in the United States mast be that of capturing.the minds of our children, at the earliest possible age, for the cause of political vorld government. The teacher is urged to devote every clássroom minute to this end, and every subject taught must serve, or be revised in such a manner that it is made to serve, thits same céntral objective.

The progran is quite specific. The teacher is to begin by eliminating any and all words, phrasés' descriptions, pictures, maps, classroom material or teaching methods of a sort causing his pupils to feel or express a particuiar love Sor, or loyalty to, the United States of America. Children exhibiting. sưch prejudice as a result of prior home influencess-UNESCO calls it the outgrowth of the narrow family spirit-are to be dealti an abundant measure of counter propaganda at the earliest possible age. Booklet $V$, on page 9, advises the teacher. that:

- "The kindergarten or infant school has a significant part to play in the child's, education. Not only can it correct many of the errors of home training, but it can also prepare the child for membership, at about the age of seven, in a group of his own age and habits-methe first of many such social identifications that he must achieve on hits way to membership in the worla society."

ECISONING THE MINDS OF TEACHERS
Following this same line of attack upon patriotism and its parental encouragement, the same booklet, on pages $58-60$, goes on to further poison the minds of our teachers by adding:

10 nor sha wo have pointed out it is freouenty the family that infectothe chita a'the exteme nationajism. The school should therefore use the means described eariler to combat family attitudes that favor jingoism. Education for woridnindedness is not a problem that the school, can solye within its own walls or with its present position teachers does not in general, permithemonteryene in the

DANAGERS IN FLUORIDATING PUBLIC WATER SYSTENES.
Charles A. Brusch, ì M, D. Medical Director Brusch Medical C̣enter - Cambridge 39, Massachusetts

The issue today is whether or not we have the right to add artificial fluoride one part per milition (p. p. m. ) to our public water supplies, for the sole purpose of helping to delay the decay of teeth in children up to and inclading twelve years of age. This proposed treatment of an individual condition, which is not a comminicable disease, brings up many problems of a moral, legal, economic and scientific nature.

If we familiarize ourselves with some of the facts involved, it will perhaps be easier to understand just what these problems are.

God, our Creator, gave us not only a material body but also a soul and a free will to control the same. It is man's free will that gains for him the finalienable right to choose to say or not to say, to do or not to do, those things that will either benefit or harm him.

An outstanding theologian at the Catholic University of America here in Washington has written, in an article entitled "FOR TOOTH'S SAKE," in essence, that "civil officials who wish to use fluoridation must have sufficient proof to prom vide moral certainty that it will not be harmful."

Leeders of the Christian Science Church and many other outstanding religious groups also believe that the individual has the right to choose for himself in this matter.

The civil rights of man are protected by the articles of federal and state Constitutions. These have long prohibited the contamination or pollution of our food and water supplies with harmful substances, and about fifty years ago the Pure Food and Drug Act was enacted to set up further protection from such dangercus practices,

There have been two congressional hearings on fluoridation within the past • few years and a great number of reports have been published in the Congressional. Record. One of these was the famous Delaney hearing and the other was the Weir. Bill discussion. After lengthy testimony by outstanding witnesses on both sides, the finding in the Delaney hearing was: "Go show with fluoridation."

Economically fluoridation is very expensive. Only about onententh of $1 \%$ of our water supply is used for drinking purposes, to that the fluoridation of $99.9 \%$ of our water supplies would be a sheer waste. 1.7 grams of pure sodium fluoride added to 2 gallions of water would give 1 teaspoonful of 1 mg . of fluoride a day for two years at one cent a year. This dosage is equal to 1 p. p.m. fluoride. Also, since it is very difficult to distill the fluoride out of water, fluoridation seriousiy interferes with the production of such cormodities as drugs, canned goods, beers, tonics, bátteries, etc. Some manufacturers have been obliged - to install expensive equipment to defluoridate their water supply. This has been done with some baby foods, to make them safe for consumption.

Yet again, fluoridation has created a problem for the raisers of animals and livestock; particularly cattle. It has been reported that the breeding of expensive chinchilias has been seriously affected.

It now becomes necessary to enter the realm of chemistry - more specifically that branch of the science lnown as biochemistry in order to examine the composition of the human body and the effect upon it of certain chemical compounds known as fluorides.

About five hundred years ago, the greatest and most versatile genius of the Renaissance, Leonardo da Vinci, wrote that "Man is composed of air and fire and water." Modern scientific research has proved that da'Vincil's hypothesis was correct and that many elements - carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, phosphorus, sulphur, etc. - in various combinations enter into the composition of man's body, thus binding him up indissolubly into the natural universe.

All the elementsin nature, aione or combined, have certain chemical actions regulated by volumég concentration, temperature and pressure. All have certain atomic weights, so that they may be differentiated one from the other.

By their nature elements are of three types - essential, inert or harmful.
The ésentitial ellements, súch as' foods, water, etc., are useful and physiollgically necessary for the growth and repair of tissues. The inert elements fill no apprent need and ocur mostly ás contaminats in food or water The harmful elements, such ás mercury, ansenic and lead combine tht he body-celos and intere fere'with their physiological functions' being classified as toxins or poisons To this class also belông sodium fluoride, although it is now said to beneces sary tor essential.

Fluorine is the most active member of the halogen group chemicalsg occurring in nature in three forms mas, I tquid and olid. In the human body, fluorine is a variant factor and is ingested in water, air or fords. The halogens as a clast are"saltformers and fluorine has an affinity for oalcium wherever it occurs, whetheriñthe soij, in plants or in man. Together they form the chemieat compound, knowias calçiun flưoride

$\therefore$ An example of acute poisoning ocured in an institutional kitcheng where sodium fluoride was mistaken for powdered milk in the preparation of scrambled eggs. out of a group of 263 persons, 47 fatatities were reported It is, a $k$ nown fact that the mortality of flutide poisoning is very higho - We are here rather interested in the slow chronictye of poisoning ocurring after ingestion of small anounts over a long period of time Soditim fluoride blocks in the body much Iake such contaminants às arsenic or leadd

The Healy Blood Allergen Diagnostic Kethod was used. In this. test, the blood in gel-media is tested directly with sodium fluoride pion motand the preparation of specimens calls:for 5 cc of venous blood from the antecubital vein and 5 cc . of tap water. As many as 120 basic factors are used; fincluding common. pathogenic bacteria, common pathogenic molds, indoor: and outdoor dusts, contacts, drugs and industrial substances ofsall kindsi. In this series of testss sodium fluoride was rated a "high sensitizer" or an allergen outside the basic or comon everyday factors:

SUMMARY

$\therefore$ Since the exact cause of tooth decay is not known nor can it be shown that fluoridated water will prevent it, and because we are already getting plenty of fiuorine through our foods and are practically surrounded by it, it is clear that we can have good teeth without fluoridation but not without plenty of essential. minerals (calcium and phosphorus), especially not without essential vitamins and a properly balanced dietary intake and of course not without well taught habits. of dental hygiene.

Because sodium fluoride is a protoplasmic poison that may accumulate in the body - especially in injured or weakened tissues - fluoridated water cannot be said to be harmless.

Tooth decäy is an individuàl condition and not a contagious or waterborne disease. Therefore sodium fluoride should not be put into the water supplies from which ali and sundry must drink. On the contrary, water should be kept as pure as possible, since it is the universal cell solvent so vital to human physicochemical relations.

Statistics available on decrease in tooth decay are not reliable because they fail to take into consideration that:

Water ìntake varies with each indivìdual. (Thus an athlete or manuál laborèr will drink more water than an office worker, )

Fluoride intake varies with diet.
. No comparative studies have been made in this regard.

- No consideration is taken of the chemical composition of water.

Migrations of the population have not been considered.

- If there is a decrease in decayed teeth; an increase in good teeth should appear.

How inconclusive statistics can be was strikingly demonstrated recently in New York Staté. Dr. Forest of the University of the State of New York reported: an increase of $331 / 3 \%$ in damaged or destroyed teeth in the fluoridated city of Newburgh over the unfluoridated city of Kingston. Later a Dr., Ast reported $50 \%$ more tooth decay in Kingston Newburgh.
; When we hear of fluoridation being put into effect ati Army and Air Force. bases here and abroad, we wonder why the public is never notified that the fluoride is a harmful substance and why it has so often been put secretly into water supplies throughout the country.

Are mass medication and experiment to be forced on the entire population from birth to death, whether they want it or not? Have we no longer the right to personal care by our own family physician or dentist? Is this right to be taken over by polife power?
Why is it that we hear only one side of the story from newspapers, radio, television and town meetings? Is thits to be the American way of Iife?

Organizations and groups everywhere have endorsed this measure whole heartodly with no considerationticits aystemicteffectsuctinust that this will onlighten other women's groups on plans to fluoridate the national water supplies and also see to it that women, and mothersteverywhore understand the dangers pertinent to the drinking of water, containing 1, p.pome sodium fluoride by themselves, their children and their childrents children. [^17]Those fäcts were taken from a bulletin received from the Florida Pure Water Association.

- The United Statés Constitution was established for six specific purposes.' Of these purposes, Congress has, by legislation, annulled, in whole or in part, these three purposes - establish Justice, promote the General Welfare and secure the Blessings of Liberty, "Laws have been passed by Congress enabling a comparatively small group, the bankers, to conspire to rob a large portion of the rest of the people. This certainly is not Justice. It is cruel exploitation. It does not promote welfare nor secure the blessings of liberty.

These purposes as given in the preamble of the Constitution and statements made by Banjamin Frankiin, Thomas Jefferson and many other patriots make it evident that they wanted us to have economic liberty as well as political liberty. They planned an American debt-free money system, but American and British financiers moved in on the first Congress and persuaded a majority of the members to commit treason to the people, disregard the Constitution and saddle us with the English banker controlled money" system. "Alexander Hamilton managed to get his bill; establishing a somcalled United States Bank and giving it the power to iss sue money, through Congress. Thomas Jefferson was bitterly opposed to the bill, called it unconstitutional and urged President Washington to veto it, but in the end Hamilton won out and Washington signed the bill. This was the first nullification, the first act to take sovereign power from the people and give it to the banks. Congress has followed this policy, maintained a debt-based money system which has piled up an unpayable national debt on which billions of dollars in interest mast be paid annually.
The banks not only control Congress, but they control practically all our educational agencies: The schools dare not teach the truth about how money is issued. The newspapers and magazines will not print a truthful description of our money system. of all the clergymen in the nation, only one man undertook to expose the evil in the system. He was silenced and made to recant.

The National Bank Act was very pleasing to American financiers, but it did not satisfy the European central banks. They wanted more central control. So they sent Paul Warburgh, a German banker; over here to advocate a centralized system. In 1910, Senator Nelson Aldrich, Warburgh and five or six other big New York bankers went on a secret trip to J. P. Morgan's hideout in Georgia and drew up the Aldrich banking and money plan. This plan, under the title "Federal Reserve Act," was enacted into law December 23, 1913. And as one writer said: "On that day the Constitution ceased completely to be the governing covenent of the American people, and our liberties were handed over to a small group of intërnational bankers,".

On May 18, 1920, the Federial Reserve Board and about fifty big bankers met. in Washington and agreed to bring on a big deflation by instructing the member ." banks to call in their loans and not grant new loans. This made money so scarce it forced prices of produots so low that borrowers were unable to pay their notes and the mortgage holders got their property at a fraction of its real value:"

One:million, five hundred farmers were bankrupted, leaving them destitute and without homes. "It reduced the value of farm products from thirteen billion five hundred million to five billion three hundred million. This 1920 deflation was really a part of the 1929 and 30's great depression.

In 1927, the heads of the three largest central banks in. Europe came over here and persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to lower the interest rate and take other steps to cheapen the cost of money. This increased the stock market boom. Then, in 1929, the Board reversed its policy and ran the interest rate up high. The resulting scarcity of money caused the stock market crash and the depression.

The Federal Reserve Board put us into the depression, but they, seemingly, could do nothing to get us out. Do they have any means of preventing a depression in case a combination of factors tend to bring it on? We are now said to have peace and prosperity, but out economy is stili bolstered by preparation for war. If we should get real peace - peace with disammant, 'and the millions of men in the Armed Forces and munition plants come home and look for work to produce consumer goods, then what? Especially do we need to consider that now when power machines are increasingly taking the place of man labor.

It should be possible to so balance production and consumption that an adequate supply of money in circulation can be maintained with causing inflation.

SAYS IINCOIN WAS SLATN IN BANKER'S PLOT

OTTAWA, May $2-$ (AP) --A claim that John Wilkes Booth was hired by "international bankers"l to assassinate Abraham Lincoln has been advanced by a Canadian lawyer-history student.

Testifying before a parliamentary banking committee here, Gerald G. McGeer of Vancouver went back to 1865 and said Booth was the tool of a bankers plot hatched in Canada to assassinate the American president because of his policy of greenback currency.
"They (the bankers) were the men interested in the establishment of the gold standard money system and the right of the bankers to manage the currency and credit of every nation in the world, " McGeer asserted.
"With Lincoln out of the way they were able to proceed with that plan and did proceed with it in the United States. Within eight years after Iincoln's assassination silver was demonetiaed and the gold standard money system set up in the United States."

THE HAZZARD CIR̈CULAR

The following is the well known "Hazzard Circular," sent out from Iondon to fmerican bankers during the Civil War period:
"Slavery is likely to be abolished by the Var Power, and all chattel slavery abolished.
"This, I and my European friends: are in favor of, for slavery is but the owning of labor and carries whth it the care of the laborers; while the European plañ, led on by England, is that capital shall control labor by controlling wages. "The great debt which capitalist's will see to it is made out of the war must: be used as a means to control the volume of money.
"To accomplish this; bonds must be used as a banking basis. We are now waiting for the Secretary of the Treasury to make his recommendation to Congress.
"It will not do. to allow the Greenbacks (U. S. Treasuryy Notes) to circulate as money for any length of time for we cannot control that..
"But we can control the bonds and through them the bank issues.".

SEGREGATIONTAND THE SOUTH

 ed membershilpanduguests iof the irenownediCommonweal thy Olub of Cali-

I have been invited to speak on "Segregation and the south, il Gandui thave"been request'ed too da in twentyeseven minutes that whioh cannot adequately be done in severalnhours.

In : I will "do mybest to presentsthe oase for the south and in know you will giveme.a' fair, hearing: I shallotryitove objeotive, but if I fail in this regard, I assure you that $I$ can and will be truthful.

I earnestly hope that no one will be offended. I shali, remember that I am your guest, but let me assure you, I will not sacri-

Integration is defined by Webster: "To bring together the parte -scof:: to give the sum totalo of; $V$ or sto pass from e o omplex and unstable state to one relatively, simple and stable, It means therefore, a blending or flowing together.
 Segregationis odefined byowebster or no separate ors set apart from the others or from therrest; oto isolate,"

Itris essential that rourealize that in then twelve Southern States, segregation means something quite different from what it tove ser In the South; segregation in something more than raj, definition In a dictionary. It is something more than securing the Negrois block vote. Segregation in the South'is a way...of Iife.e tIty is. the means whereby we live in sooial peace, order and seourity.

It is the guarantee whereby our wives and ohildren are affords"ed.the" commonyecency and protection which iszessentialijf any har-" monious relationship is to exist between two different races. Sem gregation exists not merely becauserwe prefer ju but because we t must maintain it. Self preservation, the first law of infe requires tress. It is the first oommandment and not the last.

Ninety-eight per cent of both races prefer segregation. Integration is urged by the NAACP, a few Southern mulatoes, Northern communist-front organizations and leftwing labor groups who would use the unsuspecting Negro as their tool. It does not work any -seonomic chardship nor deprive the Negronof any of hisyonstitutional rights.

Negroes Not Hated

I want you to distinctiy understand that the south does not hate therNegro. I dare say ryou know Iittle, if anything about the true Southern Negroot Amongs the finest oharacters I have ever nnown Thereris areat deal of genune affoction and understanding between the races of We,havo lived harmonjously together with a minimum of violence and bloodsed. We have nurtured the Negro, taught him, provided for him, educeted him and ondeavored to make of him a worthwhile citizen'.

The Negro has made great strides and the southern white han is largely responsible for these advancements. In Nississippi, and other Southern States, Negroes who, have desired to do so have become well educated and wealthy Millionaires are included in this group.

This group has among its numbers doctors lawyers, teachers, business men, insurance, executives, merchants and plantation owners. There is no field of economic endeavor which has been barred to the Negro.

It is only in the social sphere that the barrier is raised.
There are many reasons why the Şoutherner must refuse to permit integration with the Negro in the social planes of our life. Time will not permit analysis of ali of thém, but the basic ones can be enumerated.

- First, the high percentage of Negroes in the south is of gravest importance, and constitutés one reason:

The national average which the Negro bears to the white man in America is only 10 per cent. In Mississippi, however;"it"is 45:3 per cent, in Georgia and south Carolina it is 38.8. per cent. The great, state of california has but 4, 4, per cent "

The state of New York, that yearns so for the welfare of the Negro in Mississippi, has but 6:2.per cent; New Jersey 6.6. per cent; Pennsylvania. 6.1 per oent and oregon has but eighttenths of one one per cent. Niontana and Nevada have two-tenths of one per cent and south Dakota has one hundreath of one per cent, or 275 Negroes.

In the states of New York, ILInois, Peñsylvana and New Jersey, where so much turmoil and strife have arisen over the desegregation of the public schools where mass demonstrations of violence have taken place, just, as they, have in Tennessee and Arkansas, if these states had 45.3 per cent of their population Negro, I shudder to think what violent clashes would have taken place between the Negroes and the whites:

If, in San Francisco County, Californiä, as in many other counties in Mississippi and other Southern istates, the Negroes outnumbered the whites five and six to one, I wonder how. willing you would be to have complete educational and social integration.

There is, as every honest socialist knows, a distinct correlation between the degree of segregation of the races and the numerical strength of the Negro. The reason is obvious.

If in the South the Negro was permitted, as he is in some Northern States, to obtain the ballot by simply reaching 21 years of 'age, it woula mean that no qualified white man, in many qualified white man in many counties throughout the South could ever

- hola public offioe

It would also mean that in the haliss of congress, seats now held by competent white representatives would be held by ignorant, ancompetent Negrós.

The Negro I. Q.

- s? "White iregret that I must do sog I must nevertheless comment upon some of théntellétual and moral aspects of the reason why thésouth múst remán socially segregated.
- The average vocabulary of the Negro in the south consists of approximately 650 wórds: I hesitate to estimate the I. Q. of the average Negro of the South; since the Federal Government refused to give me the results of thé intelligence tests given in worla war II, and in thée Korean oónfict". The NAACP objected to thé furnishing of this information.
- I can, however, safely say that based upon the tests which are available from Worid War I, and from personal experience, there i's'a vast guif of difference between the I. Q: of the Negro of the South, as well, as in America, and the average white man.

Ittis because of an inherent deficirencyr in mental ability, of psyohological and"temperamental inadequacy: It' is because of indifference and natural ind olence on the part of the Negro.

All the races of the earth started out at approximately. the same time in Godis calendar, but of all the races that have been on this earth, the Negro race is the only race that lacked mental ability and the imagination to put jts dreams', hopes and thoughts in writing. The Negro is the only race that was unable to invent even picture writing.

An exhaustive study of the program and results of integration in the schools of Washington, D:C., which the NAACP and other leftwing groups fostering integration said would be a model for thé rest of the United states to follow, clearly rem veals thet the average white student who was integrated in the class room with the Nëgro has been retarded two to three years in his educational progress.
C. Therefore, it is not to the best interest of America that the white children, partioutarly in certaln congested sections, be rétarded thre years in their educational advancement.

Never forget that the left-wing socialist groups are forever grading awn, never grading up the intelligence; the industry and the genius of this countrys They wish to equalize, thereby reducing to a'low minimum the intelligence of America.
$\because 2 . *$ There is certainly ress than onecper oont of the white peo: ple of th'e South who would rever agree to marry a Negro. Misce-- generation, las largely: taken place; I, amegad to say, North of the Masonmixon line, Iand whatever laxity which has heretofore existed in Southerners permitting clandestine relations between (Negroes and whites inas alrmost entirely disappeared. The rule isently "do not xfear miscegenationd

Moral Reasons

The main objection to social integration of the races in our schools or'elisewheremby southerners is for moral reasons. ."- I again repeat, "there are"exceptions torthe rule, and among the finestricitizens I have known are numbered Negroes. : They arer ou "however; 'exceptions:

In a remarkable treatise, "Where Is The Reign of Tertor?" byt Representative John :Bell Wililams of Mississippis published -in the Congressional Record onischool integration in washington, "it is "sucinctly shown that, the white boyscand girlsiof washington were subjected to unspeakable vulgarity, immorality and" filth.

Ther truthis often brutaly but mustispeakity As revealed in this exhaustive study: objectively madeg the white children of washington, D: C. were retarded, two to.three. years in -their educational advancement.

The obscenity, vulgarity, immoraiity and brutalify which came about requires the constant maintenance of policemen in the halls endecorridors of manyr of the schools.
"Obscene pictures; and notes were piaced on the desks of white girls by Negroess The radiators stairs and halis were utipized asrest room urinals by Negroes. The carryng of concealed weapons; the vicious aggravated assaut ts the actual rape and attempted rape of white girls and even teachers are some of the results found in this model example of what integration in our -high schools can produce. ob

Make no mistake about this; the southern fathers and mothers are not going to permit their daughters to be humiliated or irm

They are not going to permit their daughters to have, to resist the lewd advances of Negro boys. Thoy are not going to permitt their sons and daughters to doersubjected to the tabysmal vulgarity of Negrol children who are urged to take every possible advantage of the white children.

Possibly, I cannot speak for the South, but wan speak for Mississippis cand I tell you this, we have already by constitutional amendment, authorized our* legislature as other southern states will do, to abolish the public schools if the Negro "and white children are ever integrated therein.

" Few isolláted fassauts with deadly weaponshavestaken piace iñ either white ór colored schoolisitn Mississippi. "ssuoh assaults are numerous in Washington, Chiciago, New Tork and othêr sities where the Negro and white children have been integrated.

* The District of Columbia has more Negro convicts than either Louisiana, or Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Florida, Texas, Kansas, or Märyland.

Experienced southern officials and honest sociologists with experience on the subject, point to the presence of segregation as one of the principal contributions to the low incidence of crime in the Southern states.
"They are firm in the conviction that segregation serves - as a restraint on the exeroise of imagined license, which the Negro confuses with libexty:"

WASHINGTCN:, D.C.

The ,most completely integrated city in America is our na-- tional capitol. Jet us see what integration has produced for the citizens of Washington where, since l940, the Negro populam tion has increased by 186,000 and the white population has increased by 9,000.

Since the last census of 1950 , it is estimated that Negroes compose almost 45 per cent of Washington's adult population, and 71 per cent of the pubiic school population. Yes, the Supreme Courtis order to stop discrimination and to embrace the Negro race was issued from a cilty which had already tried it with what result.

In 1.955, as disclosed by the Honorable Fuetts Haley of Texas, of every seven murders committed in wäshington, six were by Negroes. $0 \hat{x}$ every eight cases of rape, seven were committed by̆ Negroés.

Of every five burglaries, four were committed by Negroes. of every twenty juvenile crimés, nineteen were committed by Negroes. Of every forty-one cases of venereal diseases, forty "were Négroes.

Desegregation has come home to roost. It comes with ironic justice to roost in the city of the Supreme court ittself --ivashington, $D . C$.

- Segregation is but one distinguishing characteristic of the South. It has other attributes.

The south is the citadel of conservatism. It is a bastion for constitutional government. For years Mississippi and the entire South have been gravely concerned over the socialist trend of our Federal Government.

The South has constantily disapproved the prodigal give-away program to the Communist and socialist countries abroad. It resented the oompeting by the Federal Government with private industry. It deplored the tolerance shown the communist and leftwing groups in America:

None of these stimuly howevery wére sufficient to "precipitatéa geñine "gráss roots" mo vement but Mississippi south Carolina and Louisiana did boldly ory protest inili948; whenthese $\therefore$ States walked out of the National Demooratio Convention in philadelphiă "organizedthe statést Rights parityrnominated and

The conservative constitutional people of the united states had an opporuńty then to vóte for two men who wererbitterly opposed to the gradual socialization of Amerioa and:thesdestruction of the sovereign rights and powers of the fortymeight: states by a totalitarian inclined Federal Government. our stand provoked only ridicule and abuse.

It was only when the supreme court of the United states, on. May 17, 1954, handed down the infamous Blaok Monday deoision that the people of the south realizea that: the rrase wasi"oast," that the rubion had been orossed, and that they had nowalter=nátive exept to organize ompletely and resistcther ulitimate résult of that illégà soojologiól cána unconstitutional ader oision.

There are in Mississippi 362 Councils with approximately 185,000 members . Throughout the South, thiere arermore than 300,000 Council members. Each Councililisicompletely:;autonomoungand has obtained from the state a Charter:

Primarily, the Councils are dedicated to the preservation of segregation and the sovereign rights of the states of this Union. They are opposed to the communizing and socializing of our labor organizations, churches and schools.

The Citizenst Councils are deťermined to do everything within their power to prevent the broadening of the powers of the execútive branch of our Government, and the usurpation by the judiciary of powers vested solely in Congress.

They are determined to resist the enormous and unwarranted pressure which is brought to bear on both major political parties and on ail branches of our Government by the left-wing minority groups.

The Councils will resist to the bitter end the proposed welfare state and its destruction of the obligations and liberties of the citizens of this country. Above all, the councils are dedicated to non-violence and have prevented lynchings and mob action in the South.

The Councils firmly believe that within the confines of the true constitution of this Government and within the constitutions of the respective states, an orderly, peaceful and legal means oxist whereby these objectives can be secured and maintained.

The NAACP:
Though there are many facets to the movement to completely integrate the Negro in the South, the basic cause we know is of world wide Communist origin and design.

In 1910 four white persons and one Negro founded the NAnOP in New York City. They were Wm. M: Walling, a Russian-trained " revolutionary; Mary Ovington White, and Oswald Garrison Villard, a socialist and descendent of a Civil War Abolitionist; Dr. Henry Moskowitz; and W: E. B. DuBois, its present Negro'Monorary Chairman" with not less than 72 citations of Communist, Communistfront and subversive activities entered against his name.

The president, executive secretary, special counsel and chairman of the board of directors of the NAACP; eleven of its twenty-eight vice presidents, it's treasurer, twenty-eight of its forty-seven directors - and mány other associates are cited in the files of the Un-American Activities Committee or designated by the Attorney General as affiliated with or participating in Communist, Communist-front, fellów-traveling, or subversive organizations.

We realize that the drive for complete integration of the races in the South is but a small segment in the over-all plan to first socialize and then communize America.

Positive proof of this can be found in the Communist Party's National platform adopted on May 25, 1928; which included every demand for Negroes which is now found in TARGET FOR 1963; a, pamphlet published by the NAACP in 1956, giving its program and objectives.e.

Negro Legislatöors

What woula happen the oountry the twenty four southen United Statos Senators were replaced by ignorant Negro and Cominuntist labor leaders\%

I cannot help but wonder how the rights of Californians and the people of all the states would fare if the seats of the United States Senate which:have been filled by men such as Cor-' dell Hull, James F : Byrnes, Walter George, Harry Byrd, Bankhead, $\because$ Thurmond, c⿴lliender;, Lyndon\%Johnson and James Eastiland. Were usurped. by Communist Negroes nor labor leaders.

What would happen to this country if the hundred odd Southern members rof the House of Representatives of Congress were replaced by Angelo Herndons and Reverend Kings.

It is a, fact that commist sympathizers and let wing: organizers; founded the NAACP anduargely control, it. As CN has shown before, the supreme Court has no power to make any of these "decisions" which are nothing more than new laws and amendments to the Constitution. The Constitution merely created süpreme sourt and an unnomed number hof wesser courts.

Theyput it up to the congress to oname the 1esser courts "and gitve powers to the USSC. Congress hes never given "the. "high" court, which is now pretty low in public esteem and justifiably so, any power except to review decisions of lower courts which contest the Gonstitutionality of tacts of Congress.

Many of the laws passed by'thes supreme Court have been subversive, to say the least. One ties the hands of all police

AT LAST, "A FEDERAL JUDGE WHO HAS READ THE CONSTTITUTION:
Federal Juage Lemly of Arkansas has taken his place alongside Tederall Judge Atwell of Texas as two Federal Judges who know the Constitution'. There may:be others but they have been afraid to oome out and say so.

Now that the laws of Arkansas and the oonstitution of the United States have been reactivated in Little Rock, the question is "Where do we go from here?"
eThe Negro Ku'Klux Kion has announced that it will immediateI'y appeal to the níne inteliectual baboons in Washington who. "ripped the US Constitution to shreds in the first place. :Since the "high" court is on a binge of destroying the American way of life; and aiding in the projected soviet "take-over" of America, it won't be surpitising if they throw another monkey wrench in the máchinery of race relations:

Governor Faubus of "Arkansas hit. the nail on the head when he said, of Judge Lemlyts legal decision:
"The Negro citizens of our community would do well to accept today's ruling, which will do much to re-establish the normal friendly relations which prevailed here before. However, this is not a final settlement of the problem.
"Had my:plea (either in wittie Rock or in Newport, R.I.) been héeded 'by:Mr. Eisenhower,' nitre fionths of turmoil end tenstion would have been 'avoi'ded, as well' as the saving of more . than $$ 5$ million of public funds."
$\therefore \quad \because$ Judge Lemly was told that the net result of the illegal actions of the Supreme Court and President was at least 40 fires in the high school locker rooms, suspension of some white students, expulsion of a negro girl and general disrespect for laws that would Iet a court in washington flout both the US Constitution and the laws of Arkansas.

And the Soith isnit the only part of the countiry the USSC has messed up, insofar as: race relations are concerned. Pennsylvania has its local segregation laws and in one instance (Levittown) it flared into the apen. 'In Philadelphia the "old town" is declared the black belt. White property. owners and real estate men will not sell or rent to Negroes in the newer sections of town.

KREBIOZEN REPORT

HON. ROLAND V. IIBONATTI
Of Illinois
Monday, June 2, 1958
Mr. IIBONATI. - Mr . Speaker, on the 29th day of May, A.D. 1958, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page A4957, there appeared a plea by Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, distingaished professor of - physiology at the University of Illinois, ULetts Give Krebiozen a Fair Chance." He based his plea on the results obtained in - the treatment of terminal cases for the last 5 years. The A. M. A., through its officials has sub rosa opposed any program concerning the scientitic evaluation of Krebiozen by a blind type of ćlinical test and, have, through the nefaryious practices of one of their number, lied and falsified recoras of the findings. This evidence was brought out by the testimony in the hearings conducted by a committee and commission appointed by the General Assembly of the State of Ililinois, inquiring into the conspiracy to suppress the freedom of research at the University of Illinois, on which commisstion I serfed as vié ohairman.

The conspiracy still goes' on and in front and behind the scenes lurk the malevolent and relentless purusing power of some of the officials of the American Medical Association. And like all vicious forays staged by organizations against the reputations of honest men, it failed. Büt thé do scare the editors of various medical'journals to not publish Dr. Andrew Ivy's rem ports on Krebiozen, aftêr tentatively accopting the same for publication. What a slimy deal for professional meñ who represent a profession blessed by God and venerated by man. Surely,

Some day, in the not too distant future, an investigation Oy the congress would ace tify these interferences with the jeubligisxicht to benefioial medicines, both in experimental use and curative research tests.

The Krebiozen story unfolds again with the meeting recently held in Lebanomispa. important report as to the biological activity of Krebiozen and its effeot on terminal patients. The soience editor of the Chicago American, who has been in the forefront of the Krebiozen issue throughout the assembly investigation in IIlinois, and who covered the subject matter with a scientific understanding and treatment that kept the lay mind interested and onthralled in the most important medical problem of our day, submitted theafoliowngirieportinther article of the discussion at Lebanon, Pa., as follows:

The compulsions within the man who spoke these words are the same which have caused him to hold fast to principle. to remain incorruptible under the unremitting pressures of the ruling olique of the worldis most powerful medical organization - and" one "n' which he "oocupied "a top "spot until he refused to beoome party to a ompromose of moral and ethiolalissues --: the American Medical Association.

Author, of the statement is Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, worldfamous physiologist, dootor of mèdicine, scienitist. A man who has earred the respect and admiration of his professional colleagues, and who deserves eternal gratitude of the unknown mililions.

He is the man, chosen in 1947 as representative of world medicine at the Nuremberg Trials of doctors indicted for oruel and inhumen treatrient of prisoners of war on the protext that medical knowledge would be furthered. His role at the trials: to lay down the code under which nations will be guided. in the füture as relating to medical-ethical, scientific, and medicallegal conduct. (It is well to remember; as you read this story that this is the stature of the man Ivy; whom certain men within his professión have sought to brand as ia fraud , ia quack; a cheap opportunist.

This is the man who was awarded in 1953 the Pope Pius XIII citation for great services to humanity - a nominee of the most Rev: Bernard J. Sheil; D. D.., Auxiliary Bishop, Chicago, founder of the Catholic Youth Organization. Dr. Ivy happens to be a Methodist.

This is the man who was presented with a Presidential Citation for his contribution to the war'effort at the close of World War $2 ;$ the man who holds degrees of medical doctor, doctor of philosophy, doctor of sofience as well as several honorary law degrees. He has taught more than 5;000 students; had an active part in preparation of more than 1,300 medical projeots written for scientifio journals; comauthored a olassic volume on peptic ulcer; disoovered most of the bodyts hormones; orusaded"against thé quota sy"stem (limiting the 'number of medical problems confronting the human being when he attempts to reach the stars; pushed for broader education or mediecs.

He's a life member of the American College of Physicians; held membership on 10 researoh cominltees; as director, organized the: Naval Medical Research Institute in Bethesda, Md., during the seo cnd World War; is past president of American castro Enterologico Association; former cháriman of the section on Pathology and Physiology of American Medjoal Association; former member of the Council on Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation of the $A$. NUN'S HOMHMADE BREAD MAY BE MIRACLE

* TO BUILD NEN HOSPITALS

(By Hubbard Keavý)
HENDERSON, NEV* --Amid plenty, Ail Freeman wäs literaliy starving. He couldntt retáin a bite of food in the Rose de Lima Hospitas, -here in an oxygen tent to olear up an ailment in his lung dating baok to his combat service in italy in World War II.
'Then a nün fed him a piece of buttered and toasted bread.
Freeman lived on this bread for 5 days, saying with the gratitude of a man freed from great hunger, "This müst havie been made by an angel."

He missed the wonderful-tasting bread when he got home and often went back to the hospital to get a loaf. The Sisters of St. Dominic couldn't sell the bread, but Freeman, like 'many other ex-patients who had tasted the bread while they were ill, left a generous donation at the lititle chapel fireeman, a publicist, represents the sands Hotel in nearby Lasi Vegas and had been trying for a year to raise funds for the badly needed extra beds at Rose de Lima.

He thought up the idea of putting the bread on the commerclal market with a royalty coutribution going to build up Rose: de Lima Hospital and then to build other hospitals all over the country. The bread seemed unusually good to him--but to make sure, Freeman sent hundreds of loaves out to people all over the oountry asking for their frank opinion.

When the sampling was done, Freeman knew he had something special in the way of bread. Peopie wrote that they had never tasted bread so delioious in all their lives, that it was even better than their own homemade bread.

The recipe used by Sister Angelita was 100 years old, first used by her grandmother in her native Germany. The trick was to get a commercial baker to make the bread as good as Sister Angelita.

The Sands Hotel got behind the projeot, with its president, Jaok Entratter personally heading the work, and finally 700 loaves were produced commercially at a cost of $20 each. And Freeman knew he had started something when; during the first week the bread was on sale in Las Vegas, 5,000 loaves were snapped up. As 3 cents a loaf royalty, that meant $$ 150$ for Rose de Lima.

Entratter set up a charitable Angelita Bread Foundation, with a trustee board composed of a Lutheran, a Mormon, a Caitholic, a Protestant, and a Jew. The goal--to market the bread nationally, to build Rose de Lima Hospital, then to build, hos-

- In the liast week of 1955, Kommunist magazine mentioned Hawaif $\therefore$ "and American irun Samoai as"examples of capitalist noponialism". The Iremlin announced that these areas must be lijberated by + "revolutionary action." From evidence which the Press has blacked out fromour American people, i.t seems the communist Cónsplíátórs áe well on their way towards miberatingit Hawait.

In this driver for Hawaily the conspirators want Hawaij to become a state, probably so they can send their senatorsiandy representatives to Washington and for other reasons. The Senate Interior Cominittee in its report of Juner 21 , 1949 warned us: "Statehood for Háwaii is aupimary objective of communist polioy in the Territory. The I.I. W. U. and the Communist Party say frankly that they could control a clear majority of the delegates who would write the new State Constitution."

Considering all these facts, could admission of Hawaii as our 50th State possibly be in the interests of America?"

ADDRESS. BY GENERAL BONNER FELLERS
BEFORE WWALIFOXNIA "CATTLEMENS' ASSOCIATION

Fresno, 'Cain'íorhia December 6, 1957

"National Defense"

I'can't help but be impressed with the problem"of water in California about which I know nothing. But here you are, taxpayers, facing a problem and sitting down and solving it. I am sure you are going to solve it correctly. And I only wish that the American people could solve their problems on a national level in the same sensible manner. But, we can't do that becausé, for some reason that I am unable to find out there has been an unseen hand which guides our every destiny on the national level on international problems and which does not represent the will of the American people.

In order to díscuss National Dèfênse intelligently, 'I believe it is, necepssary to delye somewhat into the past and show how time after time major decisions" have been made which strengthened Russia and weakened us. And until we understand that this has gone on in the past -and it cannot be challenged-- it is impossible to envisage the danger we face in the future. If I may, I want to start with Worla War I'l and give you only three illustrations. I could name half a dózen decisions that were made which weakened us and'strengthened russia and they came from the irery highest ievel?

In the first. place, you don't have to be a graduate of the National War Colle ge to know, that you don't want to fight on two fronts if you-get into a, war. "Hitier ayoịded it initially He first struck Poland intending to go on into Russia. But when he went into Poland, England and France, in keeping with their treaties, declared war on Germany. Hitler was forced to turn his forces around and strike France and England. - To avoid war on two fronts, Hitier made a deal of neutral. ity yith Russia.

Stalin sensing that Hitler could not be trusted, made a fiveyear neutrality pact, with Japan so that if Hitler were to attack Russia the Red army would have toc' fight on 'one front only.

But not so ${ }^{\circ}$ with the United States: We gladly accepted war on two fronts immediately...so e eager were our Ieaders to join in the war against Hitler. We were forced to abandon our forces in the Pacific and turn our back on the Jápanesé who had steruck us. This is how eager we were to enter a war which we should have and could have avoided. Hitler and Stalin were careful to avoíd a. war on two fronts. We rashly accepted this tremendous handicap. Our ailies in Europe were not in danger when Japan struck u's at Pearl Harbor. As you know, by the 7th of December, Hitler had gone deep into Russia: Hitler's attack against England from the air had failed. France was occupied. The only one who was in danger was Stalin. The two greatesi Dictators in History were fighting each other in a death struggle. But MacArthur was attacked in the pacific, Honolulu was attacked, and yet we abandoned the East and went blithely on into a war in Europe.

Page - 204 of TRUTH PACKAGE (revised edition) -

That decision, of coursésavad Russia and inde Asia the Red menace that she is today. If we had styayed out of the war , in Europe, Stalin and Hitler would have bliad eqch ofther white Thent struggle would have ended in a draw and neither nation would have been a denger to the free world today.

Now what is it that caused us to do that? There was a major decis. ion greatly favoring Russia, favoring her so she is the menace she is today. And it was appallingly cositiy to us.e;

- There fis af second IIlustration fin 1941 we had developed the consolidated Bomber Had we used this bomber, based in rurkey to cut

- Stalin to foilow up the German army beáse the Germans had to use 57 divisions to meet our invasion. "And this brought 'Stailin"deepinto Europe. Central Europe is now under Red domination. The Reds captured Berin when our forces were eat oft Berlin! That is another in-6xcusable docision rgeatly favoring Russia a tan enormous expense to us.

Stalin would not permit Prince Konoye to fly to Moscow and asked questions about what Russia would get out of it if peace were made. This biokering went on until Potsdem on the 27th of July. When Truman met Stalin there for the first time, Stalin told President Truman that the Japanese were seeking surrender terms. It was unpardonable for Stalin not to heve told our people immediately•so we could have made peace. I was incensed at the Russian attitude, but when I got baok to the United States, I had a friend in the State Department who told me that Washington knew from the 14 th of February that Japan was endeavoring to surrender. Why didn!t we make peace then? I don't know, there again was a major decision made very much to the benefit of Russia and very much to weaken us in blood, in treasure and in our position in the world, and especially in the Pacific.

When Mr. Hoover of your wonderful state arrived in Tokyo on the 7th of May, 1946 I was assigned to be his aide and help him to get information for his food mission. Mr. Hoover said that he knew Suzuki but that he was too busy on his food mission to call on him. Mr. Hoover asked me to call and advise Suzuki that he (Mr. Hoover) felt that the Suzuki appointment as Prime Minister was a signal that the Emperor was seeking surrender terms. I called on Suzuki and very exoitediy this grand octogenarian explained that it was a signal for surrender and thet he never knew why the United States did not follow up on the signal.

While in Tokyo, Mr. Hoover told me this: On the 24th day of May, 1945 after Germany surrendered, he was called to the White House. (Incidentally that was the first time he had been invited to the White House since he was President.) Mr. Truman had oalled him on this food mission. When they had finished talking of the food mission, lif. Hoover told Mr. Truman that he would like to disouss Japan. Mr. Hoove: then explained that Japan was ripe for surrender. The fact that Suzuki, the Paoifist, was now Prime ininister, meant that the Emperor wovic surrender. Mr. Honver suggested that if $\operatorname{lir}$. Truman would make a short wave broadcast to the people of Japan and tell them that unconditional surrender applied to the Militarists only, that they would have their Emperor and that they could be free again under a liberal government.

Mr. Hoover said that Mr. Truman, fascinated, tossed him a pad and asked him to write the terms that he should have in his broadoast. Mir. Hoover wrote the terms but Mr. Truman never made the broadcast. And I asked, "why didn't he?" I don't have Mr. Hoover's permission to toll you what he said. But I will tell you what I think was the reason for Mr. Truman not making the broadoast. My reason is that the Russian influence in the state Department was so strong that the war was deliberately prolonged until August so'that Russia oould come into the war. She was in the war only six days, as you know, and this geve her a hand in the peace of the pacific.

Now what did that do to us besides inflicting something like 100,00 oasualties which we suffered after a pease might have been offeoted? Aside from that we lost Chiang Kai-shek, the Christian ruler of China. He may have had his faults and they, were well publioized, but he was definitely our ally and he is today. The Japanese intended to make a race war but of World War 11, they came over here and tried to align the colerod people against the white people in this country and they failed in that. It was incomprehensible to the Japanese why the Filipinais liked America better than the Japanese. We were kind to the page - 206

World Govarnment?

Clever people have two reasons for everything they do. A good rem eison and then the real reason.

I am going to apply this yardstiok to our present day situation: the good reason is we want everybody on our side, it is herd instinct to have people with us. Because we are liable to get into a war and need help and we don't like to stand alone. It is muoh better to have friends. All this is truemthis is the good reason of our defense progrem today, the NATO concept of collective security for our National Defense.

But the real reason for our global alliances is: Worla Government. We are moving fast into Forld Government. We are not told this because people don't want it. Our leaders hold that we are too dumb to be

Well, with my limited staff we started play in detective
For the wheat in a loaf of bread the farmer gets $2 \lambda \phi_{0}$ But you pay 24\%.
So you are both being robbed by somebody.

federal taxes, plue state taxes in every state through which the shipment passed.
In this cast there were three.
Jumping jehosaphat!
I thought"taxes just soaked the rich!
This is soaking anybody who buys a loaf of bread.
And when I backtracked on those other ingredients, I foundthe sugar refiner paid eight federal taxes and six Louisiana state taxes.

The railroad that handled the sugar paid taxes.

The shortening manufacturer and the yeast factory and the producer of the milk : solids...

Cach was keeping for' hinself sucha minute profit that the totalcost of the ingredionts häd added only two peninies:

But the taxes had pyramided tomore then twice that:
I am an amateur detective. But I did the best in could. And when finally ro-. traced the lyaf of bread back to the grocer's ehelf... I underatood why that price tag is more, than ten times what the wheat farmer getis.

Because there are 151 separate taxes on that loaf of bread!.
You and have been complaining, however feebly; about the whack the income tax takea out of our weekly paycheck...

While we were watching our wallet pocket...
The hiddentax has been emptying our coin purse!
And again and againand agian. $\begin{aligned} & \text { After all, we've consoled ourselves, the tax man gets only } 20 \% \text { of my incomes. It's }\end{aligned}$ worth that to live in Amorica.

But that's a lie and a delusion. .

* And then there,are allthe taxes the dealer pays', taxes on income, property, taxes when you transfer the titie, when you pay the state tax.
So when you pay $$ 2,000$ for a car...more than onewfourth of that price is just taxes.
You've been figuring the cor poration tax would cost only the big corporations,
But look what happened. They added.it to the price of the car.
We pay it!
The grocer, the trucker, the banker, themiller, they don't pay their taxes. We de! When we buy that loaf of bread.

People pay taxes!'
Railroads don't pay taxes. Corporations don't pay taxes. Juat peöple pay taxes. All the rest. of those fellowe add their taxes onto the stuff they sell us: Oniy poople pay taxos.

But overy time our government spende a"billion...jt taxes the "average American family another 25 dollars:
only people pay.
How much different it might have been. oif our government had said it that other way.

That "every American femily is asked to ohip in $2 Now!
I'm going to remember that. Every time the Vashingtonor the State a penders speak of spending another billion for something or other, I'm going to remember it's 25 of my dollars they're spending.

Fifty years ago, the money pover of the Northeast was firmy protectionist. It wanted to build a trade mall around this country. Today this same money power mants the walls leveled. Protection is obtained by vast government opending for defense and foreignaid and by investment overiseas.
Sen. Goldwater declined to name the kingmakers at this time. But ther io no questionas to who these kingmakers are. They, are men such as Gove Nels on Rockepell er of New York; John J. McCloy; former U. S. high comissioner in Gormany and now chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, and John Hay lifitioy, U.S Ambassador to England andowner, of The Nev York Herald Tribune.

Thesemenand the element they represent ordan the internationalism "the Modern Republicans.

Unlike Sen. Goldwater and the conservatives of the South and West, they prefer to float on the tide of socialism, not to resist it at every step, The real victims of sacialism are theAmerican middle clase and the smalland medium size American cor porations. The hughindustrial concerns can make adjustments to Deajer programs that the emaller firms cannot make. AEFAIRS OF STATE by Henry C. MaoAr thur from the Mountain Democrat, Placerville, Calif.
(CNS) - Apparently California ian't the only state in the Union which sometimes has trouble in protecting the peoplet a right to knori" "

The Novada State Journel, morning nerspaper in Reno, reported in án editorial 0last week that Nevadále legislators are conaidering a bill, which has been given a "do pass" recommendation by its assembly ways and means committee, allowing only the posting, insteadof the publication, of a list of state claime.

"The fect of the matter is, the editorial saye, "that nerspapermen everywhere are bothered when official representativeaof the state sfart passing legislation to hide the state's business from the public.
"HHZN THE CLATSS list appearsin the Carsoncity paper, it is scrutinized by Capitol $0_{\text {ity }}$ residentamand by newsmen and others inhoreceive the paper inallpartsoff the state. If sole notificationis by posting inthe capitol buidding, it will get practically no sacrutiny at all.

- "The present law wasn't passed: for the beneflt of a nemspaper. It ras enacted to make certain the general public had access. to a bit of its om business. Practícailly shutting off from public vier the listsof claims paid is an example of the constant $c$ chipping array of the right of the aitizenry to know what itsofficials are doing, and hori they are spending public fünds.

THS EDITCRILL also pointed out that generally. when newspapers criticize measures which cause ferrer legal advertisements to be published, thet the papers have uiterior motives in protecting their revenue sources. Only one nevspaper in Nevada. prints. the listinquestion, andithe editorial says ${ }_{\text {fir thermore, }}$ the Carsoncity paper mill hardy be forced to discontinus opers tions for lack of this business."

Legaladvertising in, alnost naju, newapaper forms only à very smali percentage of the totaladvertising space sold. Consequently, it is not the loss of a small amount of legal advertising which perturbs the newspaper, b, but the constant drive, in: California at least, by civill sarvice bux eaucrats, to undermine the right of the . public to knotr what's going onin goverrment.

AND NEITHER is the situationconfined to Californja and its siater state, Novada. One readsof attempts inainostiall the statesof the union at varicus-tim esof of forts. onthe part of government officiale to close up the files :

"This Monthis policy Development Topic"
WHAT IS LIB安宜TY WORTH TOXOU?
$\because$ Imagine if you will that one morning you are awakened before dawn. Uniformed men order you and your family off of your farm at guntpoint. Truck have come, they are loeding up all your real property -- your farm equipment, farm animals your household appointments down to the last pot and pan and article of clothing except for what yoú:=and your family are wearing.

You ask what is going to be done with your property. The answer you receive is "The Gopernment needs it."
:. Tou and your feminy are herded to join other famplies in the community, then marched perhaps 30 miles to what wilil be your new home. During the long tortadus march, you try to help the littie ones the old ones, as best you can.

At first glance, your new home looks like. an army camp. Immedfately you axe separated from your family - the men are housed in one set of barracks, the women in another, the children in still another.

From sheer exhaustion you fall asieep only to be awakened at 4:30 and ordered to the parade grounds where you will do calesthenics for an hour or so. A meager breakfast will be served to you right on the parade grounds -- youril have 15 minutes to eat. it.: Then you will be marched off to whàtever assignment has been made for your battal-. ion: At noon, lunch will be brought to you on the job. Youlli again have a 15 -minute break to eat it. Then back to work until $7: 30$ that night when youll be marched back to camp for dinner, back to work until:midnight when you'll finaliy be allowed to drop into bed.

The next day's routine will be the same as will the day after, the week after, the month after; the year after. However, you will be paid -- $1. 20 per month

You cannot quit this job. If you try you'll be shot without aitrial. There is no one to whom you can appeal.

You cannot visit your children. You will only see your spouse for a few minutes every two weeks.

Sounds like a nightmare? Itts a factual description of the conditions under which $99 \%$ of the farmers in Red China are living. Every freedom, even human dignity has been subjugated to the government...to Communism, sooialism, whatever you wish to call it.

Gertainly there's not one of us who wants to live under this type of society. But are we doing anything to preserve the freedom; we do have here in America?

to be respected as human beings: We want to earn the kind of income which will give"us the higher standard of living we allihope for.

We want to earn this income honestly--in a manner that will re-

Otain for us the respect and admiration of our friends. But from experience, we know we can achieve this in the future only if we rely on: the same basic source of our prosperity that we have in the past.

What has, been responsible for our progress? It hasnit come from natural resources alone; or else India and Russia would have surm passes us long ago. It didn ${ }^{\circ} \mathrm{t}$ come solely; from álarge population, or China would be wealthy beyond beljef: It didn!t come from government, otherwise any nation would be our matoh. And it didn't come from political parties-otherwise France with her two dozen or more could roll in wealth.

The proof seems clear. Although many factors played an important role in our progress, the greatest reason is this: Americans have been free-free to dream, free to plan, free to work, free to invest, to spend, to save; free to make the most of their opportunities, free to use the forces of nature. Americans have been free to release their energy, their, creative power, their desire to be satisfied. 1

How much is this freedom worth to us today? 'As farmers wie know we cannot continue to reap :a harvest without working, the land, improving it and reseeding it. We canit.sit back and do nothing and expect to reap the benefits of freedom planted and worked for by our forem fathers. We have the power to govern ourselves. The penalty for failing to accept our responsibilities in governing ourselves is to be ruled by inferiors.

Weire not trying to be pessimistic. All weire trying to do is point out that we have the most ideal form of society ever realized on earth. Let's not lose it by complacency, by not facing facts, by shirking our responsibilities.

Here are some duestion"s that need your answers:
To what extent are you letting your farm, your school, your county, your business community, your courts, even your legislature be rự from Washington?

Are you contributing to a more centralized government by letting your representatives in Congress vote bigger and bigger appropriations? Plan moxe and more programs? Give the government more and more authority? Let it employ more and more people? Send cheoks to larger numbers of people and propose more (compensatory payments, etc.)?

What does the trend towards big government mean to you and your family? To your income? To your church?

Do you feel states' rights:are important? Is the federal government preempting rights belonging to the states when it gives away money for education, highways, water projects? , When it setis minimum wage and hour laws?.

An Instrument of Communist Global Conquest

The attached report was filed with the Committee on the Judiciary of the OU. S. Senate during the 85th Congress, Second Session, by one Col. Tom Hutton of the SPX Research Ássociates.

DOCOMENT

Editor's Note: The report which we reprint here was filed with the Committee on the Judiciary of the U. S. Senate during the 85th Session of Congress by Colonel Tom Hutton of the SPX Research Associates.

Appendix IV (Report of SPX Associates) was originally published as a 16 -page supplement to the hearings on Senate Bill 2646, pertaining to the "Limitation of Appellate Jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court."

Colonel Tom Hutton, of the SPX Research Associates, who presented the Report to the Senate Committee, contacted the United States Printing Office to obtain quotations for more copies. Under date of April 3, 1958, the Superintendent of Documents advised that the estimated cost would be $$ 144.81$ for the first 500 and $$ 4.12$ for each additional 100 copies." After an attack on the document by Senators Hennings and Watkins (suggesting suppression) the following advice and quotation was received from the Superintendent of Documents, under date of April 24, which reads, in pertinent part, as follows:
"Since our letter of April 23 we have been advised that, in the event a reprint is made, all of Part 2 of the Hearings, including Appendix IV, should be printed and bound as a single unit, and that neither volume should•be priced or sold separately.
"It would, therefore, be necessary that any reprint ordered from this Office be made in accordance with this instruction. We could reprint Part 2 of the Hearings, with Appendix IV included as an integral part, at an estimated cost of $$ 3,808.86$ for the first 500 and $$ 135.49$ for each additional 100 copies."

> "Burial" in a voluminous report, for all practical purposes, becomes "suppression." Could there be certain persons high in government who do not wish to face facts?

I. INTRODUCTION

The United States Supreme Court as an instrument. of the Commmist global conquest is a concept abhorrent to loyal Americans.
Yet the situation, the documented record, and the Supreme Court's peculiar constitutional capabilities made this study inevitable in the earliest days of paralysis as principle of Soviet global warfare. Primary phases of the study were undertaken 12 years before the introduction of Senate bill 2646.
Since 1945 standing and special committees of both Houses of the Congress have adduced an overwhelming bulk of evidential material describing:
(a) How departments of the executive branch in this and other free governments have been, are, and may be employed, however unwittingly, for intermediate objectives of the Communist global conquest.
(b) How even the process of the legislative branch in free governments may be used to paralyze persons, agencies, and operations threatening Communist objectives.
(c) How international communism, in coordinated global pressure patterns, attains its objectives through the very agencies and institutions of free govermments marked for destruction, if, as, and/or when the Communist global eonquest should become fait accompli.
As shown in subsequent sections of this study, it would be dangerous to assume that the United States Supreme Court is more immune to the pressures and techniques of the new warfare than are the executive and legislative branches of the American Government.
The situation and record suggest the opposite.

II. SCOPE

This study is concerned with the application of paralysis as a principle of Soviet global warfare; within the American governmental structure, through the Chited States Supreme Court.
We shall leave questions of law to the lawyers and constitutional matters to the constitutional experts. This study deals with the role of the Supreme Court in the war we are losing: It is predicated on documented facts, not all of them palatable.
For the purpose of this study, the loyalty; patriotism, and good intent of the members of the Court, as measured by their own standards of mental integrity, and within their individual intellectual limitations, are assumed. But:

Cumulative record of the Communist global conquest through paralysis demonstrates that the one realistic standard for measuring activities related to the destruction of free governments by international communism is the so-called Stalin standard, enunciated by Premier Joseph Stalin at Moscow, February 9,1946 , in his discussion of the forces in the "new war":
"The only difference between them is. that some belong to the party, others do not. But that is a' formal difference. The important thing is that both are furthering the same common cause" (H. Doc. 619, 80th Cong., 2d sess., p. 178).

III. QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED

In the interests of brevity this study seeks documented answers to these questions:

1. Does the global record of the Communist conquest by paralysis suggest the United States Su preme Court, by reason of function and character, as a likely fulcrum for pressure operations to paralyze anti-Communist forces in the American Government?

Supreme Court, Instrument of Communism 0

2. Do Supreme Court patterns fall within the established pressure patterns of the Communist global conquest by paralysis?
3. Do pronouncements of the United States Su preme Court reflect awareness of the nature, record, and techniques of the Communist global conquest?
4. Do recent decisions of the Court follow preestablished Communist line and contentions?
5. Have decisions of the Supreme Court assumed a pattern of aid and comfort for the enemy?
6. What is the practical effect of the Court's pattern of decision on the American will to resist?

For effective answers to these questions let us first consider: ( $a$ ) the global situation, (b) the enemy, (c) paralysis as the essential element of Communist global conquest, $(d)$ the standard pressure areas of paralysis as a principle of global warfare, and (e) enemy objectives - all with relation to the security and integrity of the American Government, and the effects of recent Supreme Court decisions thereon.

IV. SITUATION

For 15 years the free world has watched, helplessly, a costly global demonstration of the Clausewitz conclusion in chapter 2, book II of Vom Kriege: "The conduct of war has *  no fixed limitations in any recognized direction."

For 15 years we have ignored the basic truth of Sun Tzu's 2,000-year-old warning: "Supreme excellence consists in breaking the enemy's resistance without fighting."

That is what our global enemy has been doing to ús.

Cumulative situation maps of those 15 years show that, as of this date, Communist imperialism, variously camouflaged-

1. Has conquered more than a quarter of the earth's surface:
2. Has enslaved nearly half the planet's peoples.
3. Has taken over more lands, peoples, developed and undeveloped resources than all the conquerors of history combined.
4. Has done all these things without losses in land, sea, or air.
5. Still retains insidious offensive in unconventional warfare against which the free world, lacking concept in'vital government areas, has no adequate plan or effective method of defense.
6. Threatens, interdicts, or flanks vital communications lines and economic arteries of the free world.

This situation, unparalleled in military history, is not a product of conventional warfare.
It results from unopposed enemy activation. and application of paralysis as the 10th principle of warfare.

For convenience we call it SPX - Soviet principle 10.

Paralysis is the essential element of the Comnunist global conquest.

In service and out, our research unit has been documenting and analyzing the application of SPX as a principle of warfare since we observed its first activation in China, in 1943.

V. THE ENEMY

- War's first axiom is "Know your enemy."

Our enemy is not Germany or Japan. He is not the British, or the frontier Indians - or even the South, as one might suspect from current massive pressure operations on the American people through the courts, the press, TV, and radio.
(The enemy is imperialist communism -.in what(ever form.
That is by his own say-so; by his record; by plain logic; by his very nature and the nature of his objective.

His own ranking agents like Col Yladimir Petrov have spelled out the enemy's attitude:
"The Soviet Union, alone of the Great Powers, regards itself as being in a continuous state of covert warfare with the whole world outside the borders of the Communist empire."

Corroboration comes from thousands of pages of official investigations by the United States, Britain, Australia, and Canada in which the witnesses were former enemy officers.

Equally accurate is Gen. James A. Van Fleet's estimate of enemy objectives and operations:
"Soviet Russia intends to build oule world of Communist states through a worldwide program of unconventional warfare."
The enemy has been identified as such by Churchill, MacArthur, Wedemeyer, Clark, Stratemeyer, Almond, Cooke, Chennault.

The enemy, his strategy and his objectives, have been proclaimed and spelled out by Jenin, Stalin, İamilsk.. Bęeria, Kaganovich, Molotor, Shepilor. Sominor: Zaroubin. Bulganin, and Khrushoher.

This massive bulk of official evidential material. available to all, as opposed to the Court's recent record of pro-('ommunist decisions, raises an alarming possibility and suggests a vital avenue of inquiry, collateme to question :3 and question 5 as previonsly stated in serction III of this study:

In ignoring this mass of officially adduced fact. might the Court also be persuaded to ignore the basic haw of siurival be paralyzing specific legislation concorning its powers, or even paralying the national defense machinery which would be set in motion by a derclaration he ('ongress pursuant to article I.8.11 of the C'onstitution?

Wxamination of this question is commended to the (ongress, which alone has the constitutional power to inguire into it (art. HI.2.2).

li. HIS WAR

This total war we have been documenting for 15 rams roes far beyond the courept of Ladendorff's Totale Kriege.

It is not a cold wat.
(It is the hottest war in all human history - most dangerous.
"Cold war" is a dangerons amorphism:
As long as we carelessly accept and use enemy semanties, definitions, and trick labels like "cold nar," "peace," "peaceftul rocxistence," and "neutralism." we will continue to lose: he will contime to win.

His very revision of the ultimate objective tips the mitt on why warfare by paralysis has been suceess. ful. The ultimate objective of warfare is now the destruction of enemy will to resist in adrance of perceptible hostilities.'

By paralytic pressures exerted (a) through varions branches of the governments of erstwhile target free mations and (b) through the govermments of non(:ommunist nations friendly to them, he-has effected the total conquest of China, Tibet, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, IIungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, and East Germany.

By the same principle of warfare and the same standard pressure patterns he has effected practical partial conquest of Vietnam, Indonesia, Korea. Bgypt, and Syria.
The principle of paralysis, not to be confused with the tactic of interdiction, is the essential element of the Commonist global conquest.

As such it has produced a warfare more lethal than any the race has known.

VII. PARACYSIS

Like other principles of $\bar{f}$ warfare, paralysis is a condition.

It is achieved by pressure.

Enemy pressures are applied in $1: 3$ standard areas.
The 10th principle's primary capability is the transient, partial, or total paralysis of any agency, force, movement, individual, or govermment that threatens the Communist global conquest.

Paralysis may be intensified, relaxed, suspended; or renewed, as required, by isolated or coordinated pressure operations in any one or more of its standard pressine areas.

Paralysis is the most flexible of all the principles of war.

Unhampered by terrain or logistics, it achieves the essence of simplicity in all Commmist global operations

Its operations are the casiest and least expensive, whether on local. regional, or global fronts - strate. gic or tactical.

As General O'Daniel testified, concerning Kremlin's current campaign for control of our Pacifie frontier, global communism employs all the standard nine principles.

The documented official record of the past 15 years shows how paralysis expands and enhances the capabilities of the old nine. It insures the ultimate in economy of force, surprise, mass. cooperation, the initiative and movement.

In addition it has a special capability in the area of government far beyond the nine.
Without the catalyst of paralysis the old nine could be emploved only against an enemy.
Paralysis has the special capability of achieving Communist global objectives like the eonquest of China. American defeat in Korea. status quo of the slave states, control of the Sue\% Canal, encirclement of the Panama Canal, disruption of NATO, and rehabilitation of Communist shock forces in America he multiple pressures on and through the very agen(ies and institutions of free governments which are marked for destruction if, as, and when the Communist global conquest should become fait accompli.
Records of this and other free governments (particularly the records of the Anerican Congress as represented by various committees since the activation of paralysis as the essential element of "Communist global conquest) offer a mass of documented evidence on how this special capability has been employed:

1. Through free govermments to paralyze antiCommunist activities, operations, and positions of friendly governments (such as China).
2. Through one or more agencies of free government, to paralyze the anti-Communist activities of another agency of the same government, as in the current American area VII situation considered by Senate bill 2646.
3. Through an agency or agencies of free govern. ment to paralyze anti-Communist activity of individuals or forces of the same or Allied governments, as in the so-called Operation Abolition documented by the House lin-American Activities Committee publication under that title. August 11, 1957.

Detailed staff studies of pattern variations in specific cases of paralysis of agencies and/or individuals of free governments through agencies and/or individuals of free govermments are available to the Congress and/or its committees.

VIII, S'IANDARI PRESSURE AREAS

For 15 years of unchecked conquest, the enemy has used sprx with its special capability, in pressured operations through as well as operations against, in all of its standard pressure areas. Of these, six starred $\left({ }^{\circ}\right)$ are of special interest in this staff study.

It least 1 volume for each pressure area, and 5 for area Vll would be required to translate and document those operations sinee 1943.

The doc-mmented standard pressure areas are:
I. Agrieulture
II. Arts and culture
III. Science*

IV: Information media:*
Press
Radio Television-
Films Magazines Pamphlets Organs Advertising
V. Bducation ${ }^{*}$
VI. Finance

VII, Govermment:*

VIII. Economics; from plaming and production to market
IX. Labor ${ }^{\circ}$
X. Law*

YI. Medicine; all fields, including psychiatry.
XII. The Armed Forces

XIII. Religion

The United Nations is included in area VII.
Paralysis of MacArthur's forces in Korea, the Korean truce disaster of 1953 , and the 1956 paralysis of free world aid to Hungarian patriots furnish complete laboratory samples for study in this area. Record shows that, except through the Supreme Court, the special capabilities of paralysis, as essential element of the Communist global conquest, are nowhere more effective than in and through U. N.
(b) IV, V, and VIl pressure patterus around the Panama Canal:
(c) IV, V, and VIl patterus on Americam bases abroad;
(d) I, IV, VIII. and IX flanking in hadonesia, Africa:
(c) VII in the United States per se since April 1956. with particular reference to pressures on the legislative and executive areas, exerted through decisions of the ronited States Supreme Court.

IX. OBSTACLES TO COMMYNIST CONQLEST

From Lemin's Blueprint for World Domination to Khrushchev's blunt "We will bury von," the completion of the Commumist global conquest has been predicated on the fall of America, "last citadel of capitalism " * "like an overripe fruif," without shooting war. ${ }^{1}$

So the paralysis of the Americm Government (and the American will to resist), in indanee of perep. tible hostilities, is the specific ultimate objective of the Communist global conguest.

And since the vecord shows area VII (govermment: is, in all operations of the Commmist global conquest, the area of ultimate paralysis, so all the intermediate objectives in American area VII, which are steppingstones to that ultimate objective, have long: been given target priorities, as shown by congressional documentation. Communist publications and pronomicements.

Intermediate objectives in the American area of government have been pinpointed by Moscow-controlled Communist publications, by Communist leadership, and by Communist-front organizations in the Inited States. Some are variants or subvariants of standard global pressure patterns with Comintern roots and Manifesto authority, only to the extent that special barriers to the Communist global conquest, not least of which is belief in God, having been natural outgrowths of American ideals, American constitutional processes, and American standards.

To what extent the Laited States Supreme Court, through recent decisions, has (in whatsover degree of ignorance) àided enemy objectives may be gathered from perusal of the following list of docupented enemy objectives in American area VII.
No opinion is involved here. It is a matter of record.

X. INTERMEDIATE OBJECTIVES OF THE COMMUNIST GLOBAL CONQUEST IN AMERICAN AREA VII

Enemy's standing specific intermediate objectives in American area VII include:

1 Lenin's exact language: "First we will take eastern Europe, then the masses of Asia. Then we will surround America, the last citadel of capitalism. We shall not have to attack. She will fall into our lap like overripe fruit."

1. Dissension and public disorder arising out of superinduced racial conflicts.
?. Paralysis of States' autisubversive processes.
2. Pamansis of Federal antisubversive processes.
t. Rehabilitation of Communist and pro-Communist leadership and agencies in the United States.

万. Disereditation of Members of Congress and committees of ('ongress considered dangerous to Communist aims.
6. P'olitical, economic, and/or protessional destruction of effective opponents of commmism. in public. and/or private life.
7. Disereditation of the Federal Burean of Investigrition and its Director. J. Ddgar Moover.
8. Emasculation of immigration law provisions desirned to prevent infiltration, espionage, and sabotage.
9. " Eventual extinction of the fimestigative pow: ars of Congress in the field of subversive activities."
10. "('reation of a gencral climate of opinion aqainst the exposure and infestigation of subrerm sioni.' ${ }^{2}$
11. Inereased interchange betwern the United States and Soviet on Soviet terims, at Soviet pleasure.
12. Status (puo concessions from the Whited States concerning (communist slave satellites.
13. Soltoned American official attitude to facilitate reinfiltation and undisturbed subversion in all American pressure areas with special emphasis on meas III. IV', V. VII. IX. X. and XM.
14. Ahandomment of NATO. SEATO. and Baghdad relationships.
15. Ahandomment of American hases abroad and wihderaval of American forces to \%one of furerion:
16. American hands-ote poliey in the corrent so viet campaign in the Caribbean area to interdict and infermationalize the lanama Canal.
17. Package peace agrement with the United States, inchding "coexistence" and "disarmament," admission of Red China to the United Nations, abandomment of Nationalist China and the American Pacific frontier line.

With this frame of reference in mind, and with special relerence to the first 10 objectives, short-form answers to the questions propounded in section III of this study are almost self-evident.

XI. QLEESTION ONE

(kuestion. Does the global record of the Communist conumest by paralysis suggest the United States Supreme Court: by reason of function and character, a likely fulcrum for pressure operations to paralyze anti-Communist forces in the American Govermment? Answer. Affirmative.
(a). What Thomas Jefferson called: " the noiseless, and therefore unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court" fiti" the pattern of: "destruction of the enemy will tor resist in advance of per(rp)tible hostilities.
(b) So does the Court's peculiar paralytic capahility:

The power of the Cnited States Supreme Court to paralyer, at a stroke, the antisubversive statutes, processes, and forces of 42 individual States, Alaska, and Itawail, regardless of the constitutional reservations of State powers, and the expressed intent of Congress in the Smith Act, ${ }^{3}$ has been demonstrated by the virtual collapse of State antisubversion agencies since the April 9.19 ) 6 decision in Pennsylvania 1 . Nelsom (350 ['. S. 497).

The same peculiar capability applied against inrestigations by the Congress and prosecutions by the executive branch through the Jume 17, 1957, decision in linited staterr. Wrathins and related pro-Commumist decisions of the same date has paralyzed Federal agencies and processes on a mational scale, has increased ('ommmuist immmity for the indefinite fleture, and has freed for such action as mave be directad by the Sorict hirh command 50 somvicted, specialIs traned enemy fied officers. dedicated to the destruction of the Ameriem (iovermment of which the (court is a branch.
(e) Only the Supreme Court, by virtue of its peculiar dheracter: capabilities, and functions could have achieved such all overturn of govermment without riolence.

AII. QIDESTION TWO

Question. Do Supreme Conrt patterus coincide with. or follow, established pressure patterms of the ('ommunist global conquest hy paralysis?

Answer. Affirmative.

Documented comparisons include:
(a) Destruction of internal security from within (almost an invariable prerequisite) has marked pressure patterns of every government overthrown by the ('ommmuist global conquest in the past 15 years.

Of 10 cases bearing on internal security of the ("nited States reviewed by the Court in the past 19 months, all 10 have been decided against enforcement of internal security laws and/or administrative regulations. ${ }^{4}$
(b) The element of paralysis, as noted in previous sections, is a common denominator of both patterns.

^26 Factors of frequency and intensity in standard pressure areas of Communist global conquest are strongest in culture, science, information, education, Ogovernment, labor, law. and the armed forces prior to éonquest.

Patterns and records of the Court reflect intensity of Communist and pro-Communist pressure in all the vareas, since 1948, as noted in section XIV.
(d) The established Court pattern falls within the "use-the-courts, use-the-judges, use-the-Constitution" formula of Coummuist global conquest enunciated by Laurenti P. Bcria to American students at Lenin University. ${ }^{5}$
(e) Destruction of free governments at all levels is ain essential clement in the documented pattern of Commmist glohal conquest.

The peculiar Court pattern, crystallized by the Sloẹhower (V, VII), and the Nelson (VII) decisions, prompted Cormer Associate Justice William F. Byines to note:
$\because$ The Communists camnot destroy this Union of States as long as we have 48 State governments which first must be destroyed. However, if they can make it impossible for the States to protect themselves they will make easier the task of destroying the United States." ${ }^{6}$
(f) Even as the pattern of the Communist global conquest has no counterpart in military history, so the pattern of the Court since 1956 has no counterpart in the history of American jurisprudence.
Iin its abandonment of stare decisis, ${ }^{7}$ the Court has overruled 36 cases of its own body of case law. That is 7 more than the 29 previous decisions of the Supreine Court overruled in the 142 years from 1789 to $1932 .{ }^{8}$
(g) Voices and forces in American pressure areas II, IV. V, VII, IX,.X, XII, and XIII with well-documented records of defending pro-Communist individuals and objectives, and attacking anti-Communist forces and individuals, have conformed to their established patterns by vigorous defense of the Court's pro-Communist decisions.
(i) No pressure pattern of the Communist global conquest is more familiar than that of well-placed Communist and pro-Communist advisors to free governiment policýmakers'and áaénciés having, paralytic potentials ${ }^{99}$ :
Thevedtig, thens hat not surpring is the Courts acknowledgement of the inflence of notorious Swedish'Communist, Gunnar Myrdal, as ann ${ }^{\text {TB }}$ author:

XIII. QUESTION THREE

Question. Do pronouncements of the United States Supreme Court reflect awareness of the nature, record, and technicues of the Communist global concuest?

Answer. Negative.

Any other answer would carry the implication of conscious treason by the Court. Hence the assumption established in section II of this study must be maintáined, regardless.

In making the choice between treason and ignorance, it must be noted that the only factor more inassive than the apparent ignorance of the Court is the overwhelming mass of evidential information re the Communist global conquest and its threat to American survival adduced over the years by official agencies of the other two branches of the United States Government.

Among the imponderables involved in the preassumed answer to this question is a documented variation of a familiar pressure pattern equation of the Communist global conquest which in this instance reads:

And the equation could be continued indefinitely to cover, in detail, the pattern of the Communist global conquest.

There is no such thing as coincidence in the patterns of the Communist global conquest - except such coincidence of pattern with pattern.

If rational processes can reconcile the stature, dig: nity, and constitttionally assumed omniscient responsibility of the Court with the evident ignorance, flagrant misconception, and almost incredible unawareness reflected by its pro-Communist pattern beginning with the 1954 , decision on Brown v. Board of Education, then only, one conclusion remains to [^27]That incredible unawareness constitutes the most cogent reason for enactment of Senate bill 2646, which would remove the appellate jurisdiction of the Court from areas in which it has disqualified itself - areas where the survival of the United States is imperiled.

XIV. QUESTION FOUR

Question, Do recent decisions of the Supreme Court follow preestablished Communist lines and contentions?

Answée: Affirmative.

More than 10 years ago Alger Hiss, Lee Pressman, John Abt, and other identified Communist and proCommunist pressure technicians of the Communist global conquest in American area VII filed briefs with the Supreme Court as amici curiae in Shelley $v$. Kraemer ( 334 U.S. 1. 68, Sup. Ct. 836; 92 L. èd. 1.161, 3 A. L. R. 2 d 441$)^{12}$
The Court's decision, May 3, 1948, followed their views.

Those views reflected Cominunist agitation and pressure lines concerned with the American Negro which were embodied in Stalin's "Black Belt" program of 1928 and since that time maintained as Communist Party lines.

In that decision the Court usurped the power to amend the Constitution and to make law relating to matters reserved to the States.

IIow far official Communist contentions designed to paralyze anti-Communist efforts of the American legislative and executive branches predated Supreme Court decisions which have effected that paralysis may be noted in hearings of Senate and House committees from the days of the Dies committee down to the Watkins decision.

In this connection the testimony of the same Johm Alt before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Internal Security, May 26, 1953, is as interesting as the Daily Worker files on long-stending Communist contentions, now sustained by the Court. ${ }^{13}$

XV. QUESTION FIVE

Question. Have recent decisions of the Supreme Court assumed a pattern of aid and comfort to the enemy?

Answer. Affirmative.

(a) "Affirmative" is an understatement. "Cumulatively" would be more precise and still be an understatement. The Court's decisions have done more for enemy forces and objectives than might have been accomplished by any other agency or form of paralysis, short of the actual overthrow of the American Government. ${ }^{14}$
(b) Even before the Jencks and Watkins decisions, hysterically hailed by Communist press and leaders, the Georgia Legislature in formal resolution (H. R. 174-554d):

1. Identified the Communist global enemy;

2. Recognized the factual state of war;

3. Charged aid and comfort to the enemy by individual members of the Court in 13 specifications;
4. Demanded impeachment proceedings be insti-1 tuted and prosecuted by the Congress.
(c) Comparison of the first 10 objectives of the Communist global conquest within American area' VII, ${ }^{15}$ and the pro Communist decisions of the Court complètes the ansiver. ${ }^{16}$

XV̛. QÜESTION SIX

Question. What is the practical effect of the Court's pattern of decision on the American will to resist?
Answer. Doubtful.
(a) No complete answer is possible until S. 2646 is enacted into law - or is emasculated or defeated by the same enemy pressure patterns which have paralyzed the anti-Communist agencies of the United States Government and the individual States.
(b) Our $W^{2} \mathrm{R}$ charts maintained on a basis of 39 fixed factors over the past 15 years have relative value only. In some cases they do not reflect the effects of an enemy victory until long after the fact, as in the case of the Suez pressure coup of 1956, and the Little Rock invasion of 1957, only recently recognized by the public for what they were.

It is worth noting, however, that the downward $W^{2} \mathrm{R}$ trends reflective of pro-Communist Supreme Court decisions have consistently followed each major victory for the Communist global conquest in the United States Supreme Court.
(c) Final evaluation will depend on developments in pressure areas IV and X , as well as area VII-E, with reference to hearings, report, debate and vote on, and challenge to Senate bill 2646 . Groundwork for a pressure operation against the measure already has been noted by our monitors in area IV: TV, radio, press.
Our projections indicate intensive activity by Communist and pro-Communist pressure groups at local levels and some pressured effort to minimize hearings and related matters in general news coverage.

XVII. CONCLUSIONS

1. In the paralytic effect of its pro-Communist decisions, on State and Federal agencies of internal security, the United States Supreme Court is the most. powerful and potentially determinative, instrument of the Communist global conquest by paralysis.
2. Patterns of pressure related to its decisions, and the behavior of the Court, coincide with, and repeat, in minor variations, documented, globally successful

[^28]pressure patterns of paralysis as a principle of warfare, essential element of the Communist global conquest.
3. What 'Thomas Jefferson characterized as "the Onoiseless and therefore unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court" fits the Communist global concuest pattern of "destruction of the enemy will to resist in advance of perceptible hostilities."

As Jefferson wrote, prophetically, in his 1821 Autohiography:
"They are then, in fact, the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of the Govermment in which they have such an important freehold."
t. Since Lenin's Blueprint, enemy strategists have recognized ( $a$ ) that total world conquest is impossible without the destruction of the American Government and that (b) paralysis of State governments, by whatever means, is essential to disintegration of the Federal Goverument.
i.) In denying individual States the right of selfprotection against subversion, the Court has, in effect, attempted to mullify nature's first law - survival.
6. By its own documentary admission the Court has been influenced by notorious Communists and pro-Communists.
7. The Court has abandoned stare decisis. It has abandoned the fundamental concept of Roman, An-glo-Saxon, and American jurisprnaence defined by Cicero as: "Leges ommium salutem singulorum, saluti anteponunt (The laws place the safety of all betore the safety of individuals). ${ }^{17}$
8. In general the pressitre pattern exerted through the Supreme Court coincides with documented and familiar and wholly sucedssful pressure patterns and teelmiques of the Communist global conquest since the activitation of paralysis as a principle of warfare in that the Court-
(a) Paralyzes anti-Communist forces.
(b) Encourages dissension and public disorder arising out of racial conflict, with consequent loss of American global prestige.
(c) Rehabilitates convicted Communist pressure technicians and approves discredited Communist organizations and techmiques.
(d) Discredits congressional investigation committees dangerous to Communist aims.
( (e) Sanctions, a priori, concerted Communist attack on the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Director J. Edgar IIoover. ${ }^{18}$
(f) Promotes a climate of opinion against the exposure and investigation of subversion.
(g) In so doing, in whatever degree of ignorance, gives aid and comfort to the enemy.
(h) Persists in its furtherance of the Communist global conquest despite congressional, public, and professional protests.
(i) Is supported in its course by the same voices and forces which have established patterns of proCommunist agitation and support since the Scottsboro and Rosenberg cases.
(j) Follows the Manuilsky tactic: "The bourgeoisie will have to be put to sleep.' ${ }^{19}$
9. There is no such thing as coincidence in the Communist global conquest except the coincidence of pattern on pattern and technique on technique. In, 1945 Communists and pro-Communist writers, speakers, and pressure technicians were telling the people of the United States that the Chinese Reds were "harmless agrarian reformers." Now the Supreme Court is telling the people of America, with special reference to its decision in Connally et al, v. U.S., that the so-called Communist Party is a harmless political organization, although it designs the overthrow of the United States Government.

10. In view of -

(a) Its resistance to, and apparent ignorance of, the massive, officially documented volume of proof on the Communist global conquest, and operations, techniques, and self-proclaimed Communist designs against the United States; and
(b) Its persistence in aid and comfort to the enemy, the United States Supreme Court has disqualified itself for appellate jurisdiction in all areas concerned with American security and American survival.

In 1952, Dr. Ernest T. Krebs and his son announced the discovery of a chemical, Laetrile, that had been successfully used on certain incurable cancers. Today that drug is saving cancer victims in Europe and Asia. Yet here in the United States it "is available to only a few people." Why?

CANCER CURE

". . . At last there is one magazine in this country that isn't afraid to print the truth about the persecution of independent doctors and scientists by the wellentrenched organization men who are running medicine in this country. Jason Weal's article on the way they suppressed Dr. Koch's cancer treatment (December, The Plot to Suppress A Cure For Cancer) should wake America up to the fact the present situation in the big medical and research organizations is costing lives!

EDITOR'S NOTE: The experiences of Dr. Ernest T. Krebs and his son, Dr. Ernest T. Krebs, Jr., two doctors who developed the enzyme Chymotrypsin and the chemical Laetrile, have raised a life-and-death question in America today: Is there a group in our country that would put personal profit and gain over and above the discovery of an inexpensive, relatively quick cure for cancer? In this second of a series of articles, MAN'S ILLUSTRATED presents a searching inquiry which probes behind the mysterious, unpublicized circumstances that- have hampered independentthinking doctors and researchers in their quest for a cancer cure.
It is not our intention to "promote" these doctors or to recommend the use of their specific curative preparations. It is our intention, however, to supply our readers with information we feel is vital to their well-being and perhaps show the need for a fullscale investigation into the facts behind the shadowy cancer research situation.
"Jason Weal's articles on cancer are the best things in your book and 'The Strange Courtmartial of Dr. Krebs' in your last issue was one of the most shocking stories in the entire series.... But aren't you missing out on the biggest story of all-the one that gives the whole game away-the way they suppressed Krebiozen?"

"Let's Be Free Again!t

Why are we agreeing to a summit conference with the Soviet Union 2 Every American knows in his heart that no lasting good, no workable agreements, no benefits of any kind to our own country can come from such a meeting. Why then have we agreed?

It is odd, and frightening, to read the speeches and editorials through this once great nation accepting with resignation the "inevitable" necessity for a summit meeting. Our allies want such a meeting, we are told. The neutral nations want it. The Soviet Union wants it. The United Nations wants it. Everybody wants it but America. So, America must agree.

As the Wall Street Journal put it, much to our surprise, "So we reluctantly $\frac{1}{g o}$ to the summit. Things being as they are, it is probably a better course. But plainly; it is a chastening reminder that 'what we do next.' must be tempered, if not shaped, by foreign offices of other nations.
"The fact is that, whatever it may be, we are no longer master of our own foreign policy!"

As we go to the summit like good little boys that is the exact truth. We, the most powerrul, the richest, the most productive nation the world has over seen "are no longer master of our foreign policy." How the mighty have fallen! And we have fallen by our own hand.
But it is still possible to become our own masters again. It is O still possible to take the reins of our destiny out of the hands of others and grasp them in our own. It will take boldness and decision.

We must do two things. First we must withdraw from the United Nations which has hung a paper rope around our necks that has strangIed our freedom to act in our own interest. Second we must begin to run our own foreign policy show. Let us call our own conferences with those whose destiny is intertwined with our own. Let us make our own proposals and our own plans with friend and enemy alike. If we wish to settle our affairs with the Arabs let us talk to them face to face with the cards on the table. If we wish to settle affairs with any nation or group of nations let us take them one by one and deal with them: keeping in mind one single principle - what is best for the people of the United States?

We have tried the United Nations course and it has failed us ewery time, from Korea to Lebanon, We have tried "collective security." Yet today our security is less than it has been at any time in our history and those with whom we have shared collective security have failed us in every crisis from Korea to Suez. We have put the best interests of our people second to the interests of other peoples, pouring out our treasure and skill everywhere in the world and we have reaped only humiliation, insult, disrespect for our flag and our leaders.
It is time for us to cut ourselves loose from those who are the "masters of our foreign policy." It is time for America to issue another "Declaration of Independence" from the U. N. and from friends and foe alike. It is time to "put only Americans on guard" over America's future and America's present. It is time to acknowledge the plain truth that the policies we have followed year after year since World War 11 have produced nothing but gains for the Soviet Union and losses for the United States.

The United Nations is rapidly becoming the instrument of Soviet power right here inside our own borders. It is draining away our treasure and preventing us from acting in the interests of our own people. We should abandon it before it abandons us.

Our alliances have become millstones around our necks preventing us from doing what we know is best for our country and our allies. We should begin to disengage ourselves. Our beloved America, once the hope and inspiration of free men everywhere, is becoming the docile milch cow for two-thirds of the world, including even the communist enemies in Poland and Yugoslavia! We are being sucked dry and left weak by our foreign aid program. And the Beneficiaries of our largess are refusing to support us in any crisis, sneering at our vacillation and insulting our emissaries.

Cannot our United States shake itself loose from the coils of the United Nations intrigue and entangling alliances?

Can we not once again seek to become what we once were, the envy and inspiration of all men everywhere who love liberty and justice, honor and peace?

Cannot our leaders speak again in the thundering tones of past American heroes, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead, " or "Pedocaris alive or Rasuli dead!" or Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute!"

SOURCE OF TAXES . . .

COMPLAINING ABOUT TAXES? Taxes are the price we pay for thee'government we get. We can reduce taxes in exact proportion to the reduction we make in the non-essential and unauthorized functions of government.
what unauthorized functions of government? This first Fact Sheet contains the list of more than 700 federal corporate activities which exist without any pretense of constitutional authority. They have taken over 40 percent of the land area and 20 percent of the industrial capacity of the nation. To pay their losses and hidden costs they consume, directly and indirectly, more than one-half the total income of government.

THESE BUREAUCRATIC EMPIRES grow at such a pace that our staff and facilities have been unable to maintain a full record of their activities, but we believe the information sources shown qualify each for listing herein.
this list of Unauthorized activities is essential information if we are to effectively instruct our elected Federal and State Representatives in ways and means of cutting costs of government so that we may obtain Constitutional reduction in taxes and a return to basic Americanism.

SUBSEQUENT ISSUES OF FACT SHEETS will present the origin and history of various federal corporations, and a review of their activities. These documents will prove powerful implements in the hands of people determined to regain their economic liberty and rid themselves of inhuman tax burdens.

It took years of research to gather and cross index information on more than 700 federal corporate activities listed herein. This represents the first tangible effort to identify and evaluate methods and technics of the bureaucratic empires invading our private enterprise system.

Knowledge of these bureaucratic activities, their extent and their purposes, begins to equ with the capacity for meeting the most vital issue of our time. The real power, however, de us with the capacity for meeting the most vital issue of our time. The pends upon the thoroughness with which the information is circulated.

Each succeeding issue of FACT SHEET deals with a specific federal corporate activity. Volume one, initiated by this first FACT SHEET, will consist of 50 issues. Subscriptions starting with Volume 1, Number 1, includes a handsome ring binder to hold the entire series.

While this series of reference material will prove of enormous value to you individually, it will be equally effective as a reference point for business, commerce, industry and in schools, and libraries across the land.

Your help is needed to put this material into general circulation so that these truths may be known by all the American people.

These are direct losses to taxpayers identified in the first 12 periodic FACT SHEET reports:

What of the YOUNGER Generation?

Fact Sheer has enormous power to offset the fallacies of socialism because each issue following this general list of federal corporate activities contains a specific treatment of one organization in this list, effectively documented from official sources, and presenting an objective American point of view.

So successful has been the Fact Sheet technique that colleges and libraries have requested donation subscriptions. High schools, colleges and libraries thoughout this land are molding concepts of life, government and society for literally millions of young Americans.

If $y$ ou want these young minds to get solid facts in support of Americanism, order tax deductible gift subscriptions in blocks for our educational institutions.

HEALTH RESEARCH,
MOKELUMINE HILL,

To Whom It May Concern:

I, Oliver Kenneth Goff, was a member of the Communist Party and the Young Cominunist League, from May 2, 1936, to October 9, 1939. During this period of time, I operated under the alias of John Keats and the number 18-B-2. My testimony before the Government is incorporated in Volume 9 of the Un-American Activities Report for the year 1939.

While a member of the Communist Party, I attended Communist underground training schools outside the City of New York; in the Buses Hall, and 113 East Wells Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The East Wells Street School operated under the name of the Eugene Debs School. Here, under the tutoring of Eugene Dennis, M. Sparks, Morris Chills, Jack Kling and others, we were schooled in the art of revolutionary overthrow of the established Government.

We were trained on how to dismantle and assemble mimeograph machines, to use for propaganda purposes during the revolution; how to work on guide wires and fuel lines of airplanes so that they would either burst into flames or crash to the ground because of lack of control; how to work on ties and rails to wreck trains; and also the art of poisoning water supplies.

We discussed quite thoroughly the fluoridation of water supplies and how we were using it in Russia as a tranquilizer in the prison camps. The leaders of our school felt that if it couldibe induced into the American water supply, it would bring-about a spirit of lethargy, in the nation; where it would keep the general public docile during a steady encroachment of Communism. We also discussed the fact that keeping a store of deadly fluoride near the water reservoir would be advantageous during the time of the revolution, as it would give us opportunity to dump this poison into the water supply and either kill off the populace or threaten them with liquidation, so that they would surrender to obtain fresh water.

We discussed in these schools, the complete art of revolution: the seizure of the main utilities, such as light, power, gas, and water; but it was felt by the leadership, that if a program of fluoridating of the water could be carried out in the nation, it would go a long way toward, the advancement of the revolution.

The above statements are true.

FACTS ON FLUORIDATION

THE IEDICAL-DENTAL AD HOC COMAITTEE PUBLISHED, IN 1957, THIS STATEMENT ON FLUORIDATIOA
We, as members of the medical, dental, and related public health professions, are as concerned as anyone over the prevalence of tooth decay, and as anxious that it be prevented; but each of us, for some or all reasons set forth here, believes that fluoridation of public water supplies is not a proper means of attempting such prevention.
II. Positive proofs of the safety of fluoridation are required. None has been offered.
"2. The so-calied therapeutic concentration of fluoride, arbitrarily established as 1 ppm. , in drinking water, is in the toxic range.
13. Dental fluorosis (ugly discoloration of teeth), the first obvious symptom of* chronic fluoride toxicity in children, is an inevitable result of fluoridation, and the evidence reveals that large numbers of the population may be afflicted, and with varying degrees of damage.
"4. The determination of whether damage resulting from dental fluorosis is "objectionable"is a matter for the person whose teeth are affected, and not for the arbitary assertion of public officials.
in5. The conceivable role of fluoride as an insidious factor in chronic disease has been evaded by the proponents. A substantial amount of evidence indicates such a possibility. Properly planned long term studies are required to deteraine the possible comprehensive association of fluoride with chronic disease.
16. Fluoridation imposes an extraordinary risk on certain individuals who by reason $\square$ of occupation, environmental circumstances, state of health, dietary habits, etc., are already exposed to a relatively high intake of fluoride.
"7. Fluoridation is compulsory mass medication without precedent. Mass therapy cannot ignore the possibility of 'mass! side reactions.
$\therefore$ "İ. The function of a public water supply is to provide pure, safe water for everybody, not to serve as a vehicle for drugs.
"9. The role and efficiency of fluoride in dental carries reduction is a matter of active controversy; whatever the outcone, there are less hazardous and more efficient ways of obtaining such benefits as fluoride may offer than by putting it into the public water supply."

Despite tremendous pressure from commercial interests, dentists at the last two conventions of the American Dental Association, have publicly denounced improper diets and refined foods: as the real enemies of dental health. These eminent authorities state that the consumption of denatured foods is so great in America that dentists are unable to keep pace with the corresponding dental decay.

You can save your teeth through a well-balanced diet of fresh vital foods. For dental health avoid white sugar, white flour, chocolate, commercial candies, fried foods, sodà fountain concoctions, vinegar and refined pasteries.

WHY DID WILL KINDIG, FORMER LOS ANGELES CITY COUNCILMAN, WANT TO KNOW: WHAT IS LABOR AND THE POLITICAL PARTIES DOING ABOUT THIS GIVE AWAY? ? ?

When we spend $$ 80,000,000$ for a battleship, we issue bonds for the amount and deposit them with a bank, and get credit for that amount, and proceed to issue government checks for labor, and material which goes into construction. Suppose the bonds draw $21 / 2 \%$ interest and run for 40 years. By the time they are due, we will have paid the bankers $$ 80,000,000$ in interest, for which they have done nothing but make a bookkeeping entry.

So our battleship has really cost us $$ 160,000,000$, onehalf for the vessel and one-half as a present to the bankers. So it is with all public improvements which are financed by bonds. In a like manner, also, we will have to pay for our war twice.

And, remember, you are the victim. You have to dig up the payments for the interest on the bonds each year, by the taxes you pay on your income, gasoline, cigarettes, liquor, amusements, etc. You must like it or you would make some protest to the men who can change it, your Congressmen. For Congress could change this any day.

And that is not all of the Bankers' Magic. Read a most significant statement by Marriner Eccles, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, before a Senate Inves tigating Committee. He said, "When the banks take a -billion dollars of government bonds as they are offered, they credit the United States Treasury with a billion dollars, and charge their Government Bond Account with a billion dollars; or, they CREATE, by a bookkeeping entry, the money with which they buy the bonds!"

Also, The Carter H. Harrison Company, Investment Brokers, of Chicago, in urging their clients to buy bank stocks, say "It is essential only to realize that all banks CREATE out of nothing, the money they lend, even to the government."

They CREATE the money out of nothing. So the bonds do not cost them anything. When YOU buy bonds, you pay real money which you have earned and saved, and for which you have given Society some service. Just try to create some money yourself, to buy bonds with, and see how quickly you will land in jail.

It might be interesting, in passing, to note that the name "Federal Reserve Bank" and naming its head officer "Governor," was probably for the express purpose of fooling the people into believing that the Federal Reserve system is a branch of the government, instead of a purely private bank, from which the government receives no revenue, and in the management of which it has no voice.

In April 24, 1944, issue of TIME magazine, the statement is made that "All United States National Banks earned in $1943,22.9 \%$ on outstanding capital stock Part of the increase is due to the fact that the banks have invested in government securities." They use the word "invested." They do not reveal the fact that these banks got their bonds for nothing. Incidentally, even with their $22.9 \%$ earnings, they are so poor that they cannot pay us over three-quarters of one per cent on our deposits.

You can imagine with what glee the bankers read reports of Congress piling up constantly increasing amounts of appropriations which will have to be financed by bonds.
The banker can add to his bank's assets the total value of the bonds which cost his bank nothing, and compute his dividends accordingly.

You DONATE the bonds to the banker and then pay him interest on them besides.

What do you think of that for a "crack-pot" system? It is the best possible plan, specifically designed to make the rich, richer, and the poor, poorer.
We are proud of nur credit, and swell up with pride, when we read that a government bond issue had been "over-subscribed." But, naturally, the banks will oversubscribe every issue, since they get theirs for nothing. Naturally, too, the banks want more bonds issued-millions, billions-hundreds of billions. The war furnishes a good excuse for unlimited issues.
In 1863, Congress was cajoled, or threatened, or bribed, into passing the National Banking Act, by which the bankers were given this privilege, which is THE GREATEST SPECIAL PRIVILEGE ON EARTH. And Congress can change it at any time. And Congress will do so when enough of you voters demand that the present incumbents do it, or you elect someone else who will do the job.
Proponents of such a change cannot get it before the people through the ordinary channels, because there is not a daily newspaper in the country which dares to print the truth in the matter. They are scared to death of the bankers and the bankers' influence. Bankers can foreclose mortgages on publishers' homes and printing plants. They can refuse to extend loans. They can influence large mercantile firms and manufacturers to withdraw advertisements, and thus take away the support of the papers. Neither will the radios allow anything to go on the air which might offend the bankers, or expose their graft.

But you voters do hold the real power over Congress. Any Congressman who would receive a hundred letters a day on this subject from his voting constituents, would hurry to get in line, and help Congressman Jerry Voorhis in his plan to have the government buy out the Federal Reserve Bank, and issue our own currency in accord with the constitution (Art. I, Sec. 8, par. 5) Under the original charter provision of the Federal Reserve Bank, the government could do this for about $$ 140,000,00$, and take over all the assets of the system, amounting to some $$ 29,000,000,000$. This would mean that we would be getting about 200 for 1 , and it would be one time that a good business deal would be made by and for our government.

Every time you buy a gallon of gasoline or a package of cigarettes, and every time you go to a movie you have to include a tax which the Government has to take to be sure the Wall St. bankers get their interest. Any time you get tired of it, you can aid in stopping it by writing to your Congressman.

Now set pusy and write-to your Congressman about it, and do it quickly and do it often.

WHY? DO CONSTITUTIONATIOHALISTS WAHT TO KNOW? WHY?

WHY in presenting the foregoing thoughtful analysis of our banking and currency system by a real student of the money question, do Ye Editors of South Hayward News feel that such readers, while the irrefutable statements made therein are still fresh in their memories, should ask themselves these questions:

WHY should the American people support any proposal for a Constitutional or other amendment that would permit the holders of 50 billions in Government bonds, acquired through the manipulation of such patently unsavory processes as those described by Mr Kindig; to acquire the assets of some 700 Federal corporations which, according to the estimates of its sponsors, cost the American Taxpayers in excess of 200 billions of dollars?
WHY i: Shere something in the money question so vividly portrayed by Mr Kindig that prevents any true Constitutionalist from seeing through this patently unConstitutional phase of the money question?

WHY, assuming that the purchase of material resources which cost the American Taxpayers in excess of 200 billions of dollars by the holders of such allegedly fraudulently acquired 50 billions of Government bonds would result in savings sufficient to repeal the personal income tax, would such repeal not throw upon the shoulders of the owners of real property the burden of paying taxes sufficient to provide the funds required by their Government in the conduct of its affairs, even in times of war as in times of peace?
W HY would this not rapidly lead to the fulfillment of the Marxian tenet calling for the abolition of private property?

WHY would the consumation of such a gigantic fraud upon the unalienable Constitutional rights of We, the people sovereign have any bearing whatsoever on "the reestablishment" of the so-called "American theme of equal justice under the law", claimed by its sponsors? and WHY, and in what manner would the "reestablishment" of such" brand of "equal justice under the law" have any bearing whatsoever on the "restoration of international justice, confidence, honor, and integrity", as further claimed by certain advocates of such proposed remedies?

WHY are not such fallacious arguments not just so much "hog wash" to fool the unfortunate electors into supporting measures which would lead them into voluntarily surrendering their inalienable sovereignties and thereby forever estop them from taking means short of war to effectively liberate themselves from measures which subordinate the sovereign rights of American citizens to the will of an alien power?

WHY? in view of these imminent possibilities should the American people not view ${ }^{\circ}$ with "the greatest concern" all proposed Amendments to their Constitution which might or could deprive them of "that first right reserved to the people" to go to the polls and there initiate laws for the commonweal that their chosen Representatives to Federal, Stra and local Assemblies have failed to provide them?

WHY are there sophists?

WHY is it possible to fool all Constitutionalists part of the time, and some Constitutionalists all of the time, but not all Constitutionalists all of the time?

Greetings:

Inclusion of the word "religion" in the accompanying photostat copy of Assembly Bill, 594, now peniding before the California State Legislature under the mponsorship of Legislative Tycoons high in Democratic Party Councils, tears to shreds the masks of hypocracy that have cloaked sundry F.E.P.C. proposals as being something otherthan brazen attempts on the part of an alien minority to marshall its Marxian inspired "labor army" to "drag God from the skies", 2nd outlaw the Christian religion by making.it a civil and criminal offenge to read the Holy Bible, not only in the Public Schools, but in our Christian Church Assemblies as well, on the premise that such reading would "incite" race prejudice, and race prejudice discrimination in employment practices, to the everlasting detriment of our Western Christiap jilization, irrespective of race, color, ancestry, or national origin.

To avoid the terrible blood purge that this ill-considered proposal'foreshadows, we urge upon all into whose hands thene presents come to exert every effort at their command to stop this macaber march to perdition NOW before it becomes the law of the land.

If it is impossible for you who read those lines to take an active part in the effort now being made to do $s$, then you should help those who are in the thick of the fight by contributing of your material resources to the limit of your ability $s 0$ to do while you can yet do so voluntarily, and not at the point of a bayonette as you will in all probability be compelled to do if the forces back of this proposal are not stopped in their mad scramble for political power. ## THISISITI THAT GREATEVENT THAT CASTSITS SHADOW BEFORE

The one great event that is destined to split our citizenry, if not our entire Western Civilization, into waring camps predicated upon differences of race, color religion, ancestry, and national origins, as no other issue could, is the proposal advanced by Messis Unruh, Munnell, Bruce F Allen, Burton, Masterson, and Waldie, set out in full below, to bring about integration in California by making it a criminal and civil offense to deny admission to the Councils and Organizations of one group to that of another.

The reasons for this are quite simple and easy of understanding. Freedom has been defined as nothing more or less than the right of self-determination; slavery as the negation of that right.

Whereas this proposed bill denies to all citizens the right of self-determination (Freedom), it is not an effort on the part of one group to obtain Freedom from another. It is a gesture on the part of its proponents to enslave all citizens by denying them the right of self-determination (Freedom).

This is anything but an American proposal. America was meant to be essentially a land of Freedom. That we assert in our National songs; that is our National pride and glory. But we have wandered far afield from the teachings of our Revolutionary forebears. that cluster of fine minds that freed these United States of America from the tyrannical despotisms of International intrigue. Only the introduction of such bills tell us how far.
"To honor and preserve the memory and spirit of those who fought or labored to achieve and/or maintain the Independence (Freedom) of the United States of America" "that Governments of, by, and for the people might not perish from this earth" is the cardinal purpose of the First National Spirit of Freedom Crusade.

Vigilant Americans who value their Freedom (right of self-determination) will do we入 to look at all such efforts to enslave them with the greatest concern. This they can best do by getting BACK TO THE REPUBLIC OF THE FOUNDING FATHERS, and

WHY? DO COHSTITUTIONATIONALISTS WANT TO KNOW? WHY?

WHY? WILL THE CODDLING OF ALIEN SABOTEURS IN AMERICA NOT BRING ABOUT THE WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS IN PRECISELY THE SAME MANNER THAT THE CODDLING OF ALIEN SABOTEURS IN RUSSIA BROUGHT ABOUT THE WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF RUSSIAN CITIZENS (more than 13,000,000 of them) AS SHOWN IN THE ACCOMPANYING STREET SCENE IN RUSSIA DURING THE 1917 COMMUNIST REVOLUTION IN THAT UNFORTUNATE COUNTRY.

WHY? in other words, is not 'tolerance' the Devil's pass word?
WHY? if there is no cure for gullibility, and gullibility is the twin sister of tolerance, should we not agree with Schlafly when he said, in a speech before the Commonwealth Club, of San Francisco, last Dec 29, 1958, that

In the Cole case the Warren majority ruled that supporters of Communist causes could not be fired from non-sensitive Gov$*$ ernment jobs.
-In the case of John Stewart Service, the Warren majority ruled that a man who had clandestine meetings with a Soviet espionage agent, could not be fired from a sensitive State Department job, even by Dean. Acheson.
-The New York Times reported on July 11, 1958 that more than 300 Government employees, fired for being security risks, would have to be reinstated with back pay. Judge Robert Morris, for many years chief counsel for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, stated: 'Just imagine the damage that 300 security risks can work on the security of this country.'

WARREN MAJORITY

Paralyzod Enforcement

-In the Nelson case the Warren majority decided that Pennsylvania could not punish a Pennsylvania Communist, who had helped organize the theft of our military secrets, for violating Pennsylvania's laws against sedition, for the alleged reason that sedition was also punishable under the Federal Smith Act.
-This decision paralyzed enforcement of the sedition and subversion laws of 42 states, Alaska and Hawaii.
-In the cases involving Yates and the other California Communists the Warren majority held that the Smith Act could not be used to punish Communists teaching the violent overthrow of our Government 'with evil intent'; also that all organizing work for the Communist Party ceased in 1945, which gave the Communist recruiters the protection of the statute of limitation.
-This decision caused the release of more than 70 convicted Communists. In reluctantly freeing 11 of these convicted Communists Federal Judge Richard Chambers of your own Court of Appeals said that this Supreme Court decision 'leaves the Smith Act, as to any further prosecution under it, a virtual shambles.'

"Greatest Communist Victory"

"-J. Edgar Hoover testified that a top Com. munist described the Supreme Court's decision in the Yates case 'as the greatest victory the Communist Party in America has ever received.'
-In the Watkins, Flaxer, and Raley cases the Warren majority held that neither the House Un-American Activities Committee nor the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, nor the Un-American Activities Committee of Ohio, could ask witnesses, who did not take the Fifth Amendment, to tell about their Communist activities or to produce their Communist records.
$=$ In the Slochower and Sweezy cases the Warren majority decided that teachers in public schools could not be fired for taking the Fifth Amendment when asked about Communist activities, and that it was an infringement of academic freedom even to ask about their Communist activities. -In the Subversive Activities Control Board case the Warren majority refused to uphold the validity of the Internal Security Act of 1950 . As a result 500,000 pieces of foreign Communist propaganda are sent each month to American colleges.
-If the Warren majority had upheld the validity of the Internal Security Act all such propaganda would have to be stamped 'Disseminated by ——, a Communist organization.'

Passports for Loningrad School

-In the Weldon Dayton passport case the Warren majority ruled that the State Department had to issue a passport to a research physicist who, according to the New York times 'had been present several times when secret government documents had been microfilmed for transference to the Soviet Union by Julius Rosenberg and members of his spy ring,' and even though Dayton was going to work abroad with a Communist 'who recently renounced his American citizenship.'
-As a result 702 American Communists and pro-Communists demanded passports and 642 of them are now equipped with all the prestige conferred by a U.S.A. passport. -Security officers believe some of these men are going to attend the Leningrad Espionage School for graduate work in industrial and military spying, transmission of secret messages, and use of agitators. -In September 1958 the Army Chief of Research and Development, Lieutenant General Arthur Trudeau said that Soviet technical progress was due more to 'success in espionage and subversion than it is to their scientific apparatus.' He said 'we are a country that's highly penetrated.'
-Apropos of these decisions J. Edgar Hoover told the American Legion: To dismiss lightly the existence of the subversive threat in the United States is to deliberately commit national suicide.'
$=$ The predecessors of the Warren majority were extremely well informed on the workings of the Communist conspiracy and its clear and present danger.

Not a Political Party

-Chief Justice Vinson sustained the Smith Act ; in another case approved the statement of Justice Jackson that the Communist Party is not a political party but is a conspiratorial and revolutionary junta, organized to reach ends and to use methods which are incompatible with our constitutional system.'

Decistons Based on Assumed Facts, Not True

$=-$ Many decisions of the Warren majority are based on assumed facts which are really not true. Thus in the Watkins case Chief Justice Warren assumed that Royal Commissions did not require witnesses to answer questions and concluded therefore that the House Un-American Activities Committee should not.
-Had the Chief Justice read either of the two most important Royal Commission investigations, Gouzenko and Petrov, he would have learned that: (1) Royal Commissions do not recognize a privilege against self-incrimination; and (2) also unlike congressional committees, the Royal Commissions can arrest witness and hold them in jail until they answer all questions. -The 39 cases involving Communism which the Warren majority has decided ( 30 in favor of the position taken by the Communists) cite many books and articles. But not once has the Warren majority cited any of the more than 100 classic anti-Communist books and reports.
-Instead the Warren majority twice cited a British socialist as authority for depriving Congress of the power to investigate Communism.
-In one case the Warren majority cited with approval a book edited by a Swedish socialist and co-authored by persons affiliated with 422 Communist enterprises. This book refers to the American Constitution as 'nearly a plot against the American people.'
No Court, Informed on Communlsm - . .
-No court which was informed on Communism, or opposed to socialism, would have cited with approval this book. The Charles Evans Hughes court, the Harlan Stone court, and the Fred Vinson court never cited writings of socialists and Communists as guides for American law.
-Attempts were made in the last Congress: (1) To restore to Congressional Committees the same freedom to investigate Communists and pro-Communists that these Committees have always had to investigate businessmen and labor leaders; (2) To restore to the States the right to enforce their own anti-subversive laws; (3) To restore to the Executive Branch the right to dismiss security risks from both sensitive and nonsensitive Government jobs; and (4) To restore to the Executive the right to deny passports to members of the Communist conspiracy and their supporters.
-Some misguided people said these bills should be defeated because they w
'curb the Court.' -In the last 20 years Congress has on more than 10 occasions passed bills which curbed or overcame the effect of what the American people thought were bad Court decisions. Examples are the decision which ordered payment of portal to portal pay, the decisions which held that tidelands oil did not belong to the states.
-Another argument made against plugging the holes in our national security is that the Court is our national umpire.
-Suppose the umpire says that the home team has to tell the red team everything but that the red team doesn't have to tell the home team anything.
-Suppose the umpire says that the red players can infiltrate into the home team's huddle and even sneak men into every position on the home team except quarterback, which the umpire says is the only 'sensitive' position; and the umpire forbids the home team to remove these reds because they are not occupying 'sensitive positions.'
-We lawyers always defended the Hughes Court, the Stone Court, and the Vinson Court. We will defend the Warren majority as long as it confines itself to umpiring.
-When the Warren majority starts changing the rules of the game, when, as Federal Judge Learned Hand wrote, it has assuped the role of a third legislative cham then lawyers must defend the Constitut, because it provides that all legislative power shall be vested only on the Congress and in the state legislatures, and not in the courts.
We pray that the Warren majority will do its homework on Communism."

TOTAL U. S. DEBT ZOOMS TO RECORD $$ 770$ BILLION:
IS U. S. DOLLAR ON WAY OUT? FINANCIAL CRISIS LOOMS. The experts say the U. S. Government facing a financial crisis. We are supposed to be at the bottom of the barrel-no more hey, and no more money in sight unless we start the printing presses.

BILLIONS THROWN AWAY. SHALL WE CONTINUE TO SUPPORT THE WORLD?
"The American Eagle Cannot Continue To Fly On Two Left Wings" - Dean Manion
The total "aid" to date is 124 billion, 647 million, 310 thousand of our dollars. of this, only 49 billion was given during the war period to June 1945. Yugoslavia and Russia itself is included in this favored group of foreigh 'Aid'. Is this a way to fight Communism?

Many are buying and storing gold for the crash ahead! Remember the fantastic decline in value of the German mark after World War I and the Italian Lire after World War II. This is what happens to $a l l$ currency that is not backed by sound, adequate Gold reserves! Is. the U. S. dollar approaching this position doday? Gold is artificially pegged at $$ 35$ per oz. For many years, the price of gold no longer reflects the actual demand for this solid, historically sound, commodity in a pericd of unscund, unstable paper currency.

The Wall Street Journal describes the situation:
"Time has caught up with a prodigal country. For more than a decade this country has spent money like the proverbial drunken sailor.
"We have poured out billions to make life more pleasant for farmers, to pay handsome rewards to veterans, to give ourselves a luxury of houses and roads and any sort of 'welfare' that came happily to mind.
"We've poured billions of hard-earned money all over the globe. .
"And wetve done all this with a blatant disregard of the dficity, the billions accured our accounts."
Elmer C. Walzeŗ UPI Financial Editor says:
"The 'technical' problem that grabs the headlines-rising interest rates for borrowed money-is merely a warning sight of what lies beneath."
"FOREIGNERS COULD DRAIN FT. KNOX
"Foreigners hold about $18 billions of dollars and government securities. If they repatriated these holdings and turned them over to their governments for their own currencies, the governments could drain every ounce of gold we 'have.
"Also we are going into the hole each year to the tune of around $$ 5$ billion in our foreign operations."

"You're wasting your money. You might as well send it direct to us instead of the middleman, because we get most of it anyway.

Your agents give us the codebooks and then we send false information back to you through your code. Then we send cables asking for money and you send it to us."

Thus bragged Nikita Khuschev while in Los Angeles, according to Victor M. Carter, the city's official guide for the premier. Carter is president of Republic Studios. He was born at Rostov in Russia and came to this country in 1920. The above quoted remark was made of the American Central Intelligence Agency headed by Allen Dulles. Whon Allen Dulles met Khruschchev in Washington at the start of the tour, Khrushchev greeted him with similar Amarks about the CIA. "I know you", Khrushchev said on being introduced to Dulles. "II ad the same reports you do."

What The World Has Been Waiting For

THE SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE

The ONLY book ever presented on the subject. NOT a religion, merely the Science of Civilized Attitude and Attitude's Mysteries, seeking areas of Universal Human Agreement to replace Disagreement.
It is based upon the scientific definitions of attitude as selected from the most widely accepted, United State's American, college and university text-books.

THE SPIRIT BOOK CO. October 23-62.
BOX 611, SO. HOUSTON, TEXAS
Public Schools Superintendent
San Angelo, Texas.
Dear Sir:
The Spirit of Attitude concept ( as per the enclosed book) is a million times as useful to education and civilization as an intelligence expediter than a "standing" for imaginary ghosts. Teaching the basic and elementary facts about it to the school pupils, using its full name, will do as much to raise the mental and other standards of this nation as anything present circumstance have to offer.

Help break the existing sub-rosa collusion conspiracy against civilization. Don't remain accessories, accomplices or condoners to what might be destined to bring world disgrace or worse down upon us.
, I suggest you correlate these letters and the book, select the most desirable excerpts from them and have as much of it taught to the pupils as your conscience and sense of responsibility dictate.

Dons sell thismproject short Records will be kept showing your district has been presented with this opportunity. Many keenly intelligent minds will be evaluating this material and your responsibility as well.

Yours sincerely,

An exact duplicate of this letter has been sent by registered mail (8-30-62) to Anthony J. Celebrezze, U. S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Many other copies are being mailed to various State Boards of Education, School Superintendents and Principals, also the U. S. Attorney General. None of these officials should have blank or blind spots in their minds regarding the factual existence and educational value or importance of the Spirit of Attitude principle or concept.

By this letter each and all of them are charged with notice, for public record, that the U. S. Educational Secretary has received one. What he does regarding the subject matter will therèby also become a matter of record.

The Secretary and others are also being mailed an exposition book on the Spirit of Attitude for their further enlightenment. If, after a reasonable length of time, these officials do nothing constructive about this phase of public education, the opportunity to get the credit for doing so will be presented to foreign countries.

THE KEY FACTS to understanding the Attitude Spirit are these: The principle, with its inherent methodology, of maintaining attitudes toward life situations is a process that original life had to conceive and use in adjusting to its envir onment. Without this primordial method to guide them, the various forms of life could not have survived more than a mere accidental length of time. After life had developed beyond the point of chance and accident, moving into different situations, the dire necessity arose for attitude and mind to develop as the "sine qua nom of survival. Purposeful life could not continue to exist without this basic principle being "ever present" as the mind's most constant factor in times of needed guidance. Regardless of any specific attitude, in particular," the attitude constant was the general principle prevailing over all of them, as an attitude toward attitude.

Given an evoluting mind with such a basic constant, it was virtually predestined, by its näture, tháf this ideblogical principle would become ever more and mỗ introspectively conscious in that mind above all other consciousness. Due to the circumstances, people began to "feel" or "sense" the "presence" of that "guiding process". They developed a growing "sense" that "something illusive" existed and was causing its "effects" to be "felt" in many ways.

It continued to cause additional and more increasingly important effects or products as life advanced through the ages. Some of these more important "attitude-effect-products" are: mind, intelligence, sanity, language and its resultant communication, also cooperation. Love, Good-will, the Golden Rule, Conscience, etc. are all outgrowths of it. Even all the principles, precepts or articles in the Bill of Rights and our Constitution are, actually, attitudes to be observed, not only in letter but also in the spirit of our more complete attitudinal behavior, feeling, and thoughts toward them.

Before the human race developed its more highly specialized knowledge and oriented understanding, these results of attitude in operation were merely things of extremely peculiar character to the more primitive and ignorant people of long ago. Such things always were and will be, in their realistic and legitimately educational sense, purely natural attitude-effects.

Most large dictionaries list one definition of spirit as: "Peculiar character or quality, as indicated by tendencies or effects". These above mentioned "things" of peculiar character have always been "effects" of attitude in operation and, therefore, "SPIRITS OF ATTITUDE" in accord with the dictionary definition. Regardless of their "peculiarity" they never were supernatural entities, Gods, Spirits nor Devils, not even the workings or evidence of any.

In the childhood of the human race it was normal for imaginations to run riot. People, like little children, twisted every accidental illusion into an abnormality of delusion. In their abysmally primitive ignorance they did the same thing to this attitude spirit as they did to the sun in the sky. They jumped to the unfortunate conclusion that it was a God, to be appeased by praying to it because they did not know any better.

THE SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE concept is the COMMON DENOMINATOR KEY to the under standing and adjustment to most all the vital concerns of life. They originated and developed under its "sine qua non" guidance. We cannot afford to sacrifice these factors in civilization any longer on the altar of superstitious ignorance. There is no substitute for attitude adjustmont. Fanatical substitution leads to maladjustment and maladjustment is insanity in degree.

Attitude principle is the orienting factor of life and mind. To orient is to relate and interrelate. In the field of human RELATIONS it is no exception. It is imperative for public educcational agencies to orient this orientation key to their entire field of education. It is doubly imperative in view of the confusion in human relations and world circumstances. The present MESS would not exist if educators had done their duty long ago.

This SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE principle, as revealed or expounded in the SPIRIT of ATTITUDE book and documented by quotations from your own educational texts, is one of the most CONSTRUCTIVE CONCEPTS possible for the human mind to know and utilize. Building civilization, however, is a vast undertaking which constructiveness alone cannot do. A few sadly unfortunate and stagnating mistakes, misconceptions and blunders of dark age ignorance, which are obstructing further progress in the sane development of civilization, must be rectified.

If the constructive element of the project is conscientiously taken care of by public educators, the destructive phase need not be brought into operation to any material extent. Public school educators, however, will have to do it or national disgrace will be brought down upon them for dereliction of duty. They are the only ones who can settle the issue in the most peaceful manner by quietly and smoothly carrying it through. It is their official obligation.

It is not the duty of the church, even though the central issue is named the SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE. The only reason why preachers pretend to be spiritual educators is so they can play "dog-in-the-manger" with this very spirit of attitude. To actually expound it would'be fatal to their racket business.

When ignorant people, in the distant past, first made the error of imagining the attitude feeling might be a God spirit, it was the preacher -minded crooks who, for exploitation purposes, saw to it they never learned any better. They used the opportunity to capitalize upon the misfortune of ignorance for profit and ill-gotten recognition. They both ignorantly and deliberately let people keep on thinking it was a supernatural God with themselves as middlemen. They are entitled to a God or even millions of them if they can produce honest and aboveboard evidence that any exists.

Their favorite swindle device is the "revival meeting" where church "ye s-men" take their cues from the preacher, to psychologically hedge and badger prospective converts into thinking the bulldozing spirit of the congregation-devils is the hand of God reaching for them. The socalled converts accede to nothing but deception and fraud, then become addicted to the religious "fix". It is precisely the same psychologically-suggestive attitude-behavior pressure that miseleads lynch mobs to murder. The end is different but it could just as easily convert people to anything. With deception as the object, it is vicious.

Added to this shame of blunder and swindle, the church superimposes a "spuriously conditioned response complex" to mislead people into thinking they actually love religion. Then they "rivet" the whole thing home by applying the hypnotic process to induce more pitifully all the delusions common to religious insanity. Eventually, they enter into the state of "Idiot's Euphoria".

There just simply are no sacred liars. For the clergy to continue, either by omission or commission, to misrepresent this attitude spirit to be a supernatural entity or religious experience, for exploitation purposes of any kind, brands them as the basic liars, thieves and criminals by indirection. By setting such examples for children and others to emulate in the future, they become number one enemies of civilized hope. They are robbing us of our most valuable instruments for general welfare, education and survival.

The dignity of intelligence-guided selective-behavior must not be scuttled or sabotaged in favor of control by mob-hysteria. You have dillydallied long enough, now get on the job or someone else will, to your regret.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

What kind of Americans are＂on the take＂？How are they cheating every one of us？Here is a shock－ ing，factual story that probes behind headline scandals．

Recent＂payola＂and quiz show exposés only scratched the surface of today＇s gray－flannel morality．Millions of Americans， as Mr．Gibney proves，are＂taken＂every day by a yastly more subtle army of＂honest＂car dealers，＂friendly＂mortgage men， crooked union bosses，＂cure－all＂advertisers，chiseling TV repair－ men，phony＂educators，＂income－tax swindlers，and＂respect－ able＂businessmen all the way from the local store owner to a corporation board chairman．
In the current ethical jungle，members of our Genial Society may be both the innocent and the guilty，victimizer and victim． A staff writer on Life，a former feature writer of Time and an editor of Newsweek，Frank Gibney has documented every page of this extraordinary report－a startling profile of America that is alive with remarkable personalities and case histories．Not since One Hundred Million Guinea Pigs has one book presented such a powerful indictment of fraud upon the public．Now The Operators illuminates today＇s vasily different methods and man－ ners，and，going deeper，penetrates the moral confusion evident at every level of the Genial Society of the Fifties．

PJBLISHER'S' PREFACE

On November 3rd, 1957, Wilhelm Reich, M.D., died in a U.S. federal penitentiary, where he had been imprisoned for resisting an unlawful injunction aimed at crushing his research in Basic Natural Science, stealing his vital discoveries, and killing the discoverer. Dr. Reich gave his life to put the "total infamy" of the conspiracy to kill truthful knowledge "before the broad public."

As publishers and citizens, we consider Dr. Reich's death and the destruction and banning of his monumental books, a devastating blow to those who work for human happiness through democratic selfdetermination.

This volume consists of a small portion of the official Court Record regarding gravest personal, social, and planctary issues. Public administrators, government officials, and federal agents are servants of the people. To countenance deceit, unlawful procedures, and fraudulence on the part of Public Officials, is to relinquish one!s Right to Freedom, and to open the door to tyranny.

We let the "Record" speak for itself. . . .

The Hon. Judge. Clifford Federal Court House Portland, Maine

Dear Judge Clifford: .
I am taking the liberty of "transimitting to you my "Response" to the compiaint filed by the Food and Drug Administration regarding the Orgone Energy Accumulator. My "Response", summarizes my standpolnt as a natural scientist who deals with matters of basic natural law: It is not in myy. hands to judge the legal âspects of the matter's.

My factual position in the cise as well as in the world of science of today does not permit me to enter the case against the Food and. Drug Administration; since such action would, in my mind, imply admission of the authority of this special branch of the government to pass judgment on primordial, pre-atomic cosmic orgone energy.

I, therefore, rest the case in full confidence in your hands.
Sincerely yours,
/s/ Wilhelm Reich, M.D.
Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

RESPONSE

Regarding the Request of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to Enjoin the Natural Scientific Activities of Wilhelm Reich, M. D.

In order to clarify the factual as well as the legal situation concerning the complaint, we. must, from the very beginning, distinguish concrete facts from legal procedure to do justice to the facts.

Technically, legally the US Government has filed suit against the natural scientific work of Wilhelm Reich.

Factually, the FDA is NOT "The US Government". It is merely one of its administrative agencies dealing with Foods, Drugs and Cosmetics. It is not empowered to deal with Basic Natural Law.

ORGONOMY (see "Bibliography on the History of Orgonomy") is a branch of BASIC NATURAL SCIENCE: Its central object of research is elucidation of the Basic Natural Law.

Now, in order to bring into line the legal procedure with the abovementioned facts, the following is submitted:

The common law structure of the United States rests originally on Natural Law. This Natural Law has heretofore been interpreted in various ways of thinking, metaphysically, religiously, mechanistically. It has never concretely and scientifically, been subjected to natural scientific inquiry based upon a discovery which encompasses the very roots of existence.

The concept of Natural Law as the foundation of a secure way of life, must firmly rest upon the practical concrete functions of LIFE itself. In consequence, a correct life-positive interpretation of Natural Law, the basis of common law, depends on the factual elucidation of what life actually is, how it works, what are its basic functional manifestations. From this. basic premise derive the claims of natural scientists to a free, unmolested, unimpeded, natural scientific activity in general and in the exploration of the Life Energy in particular.

The complaint of the FDA is factually intimately interconnected with a basic social issue which, at present, is reverberating in the lives of all of us here and abroad.

Abraham Lincoln once said: "What I do say is that no man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent. I say this is a leading principle, the sheet anchor of American republicanism."

At this point, I could easily declare "I refuse to be governed in my basic natural research activities by the Food and Drug Administration." But exactly here, in this constitutional right of mine, the basic confusion in the interpretation of Natural and Common Law becomes apparent.

There are conspirators around whose aim it is to destroy human happiness and self-government. Is now the right of the conspirator to ravage humanity the same as my right to free, unimpeded inquiry?
. It obviously is NOT THE SAME THING. I shall not try to answer this basic dilemma of American society at the present. I shall only open an approach to this legal and factual dilemma. It has a lot to do with the position of the complainant, trying to enjoin the experimental and theoretical functions of Life in its emotional, educational, social, economic, intellectual and medical implications.

According to natural, and in consequence, American Common Law, no one, no matter who he is, has the power or legal right to enjoin:

The study and observation of natural phenomena including Life within and without man;

The communication to others of knowledge of these natural phenomena so rich in the manifestations of an existant, concrete, cosmic Life Energy;

The stir to mate in all living beings, including our maturing adolescents;

The emergence of abstractions and final mathematical formulae concerning the natural life force in the universe, and the right to their dissemination among one's fellow men;

The haniling, use and distribution of instruments of basic research. in any field, medical, educational, preventive, physical, biological, and in fields which emerge from such basic activities and which, resting on such principles, must by all means remain free.

Attempts such as branding activities and instruments of suc̈h kind as "adulterated," in other words as fraud, only characterizes the narromess of the horizon of the complainant.

Inquiry in the realm of Basic Natural Law is outside the judicial domain, of this, or ANY OTYER KIND OF SOCIAL ADMINISTRATION ANYWHERE ON THIS GLOBE, IN ANY LIAND, NATION OR REGION.

Man's right to know, to learn, to inquire, to make bona fide errors, to investigate human emotions must, by all means, be safe, if the word FREEDOM should ever be more than an empty political slogan.

If painstakingly elaborated and published scientific findings over a period of 30 years could not convince this administration, or will not be able to convince any other social administration of the true nature of the discovery of the Life Fnergy, no litigation in any court anywhere will ever help to do so.

I, therefore, submit, in the name of truth and justice, that I shall not appear in court as the "defendant" against a plaintiff who by his mere complaint already has shown his ignorance in matters of natural science. I do so at the risk of being, by mistake, fully enjoined in all my activities. Such an injunction would mean practically exactly nothing at all. My discovery of the Life Energy is today widely known nearly all over the globe, in hundreds of institutions, whether acclaimed or cursed. It can no longer be stopped by anyone, no matter what happons to me.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

Plaintiff having filed a Complaint for Injunction herein to enjoin the defendants and others from further alleged violations of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act; and each defendant having been duly served, on February 10, 1954, with a summons and copy of the complaint; and no defendant having appeared or answered in person or by representative, although the time therefor has expired; and each defendant having been duly served, on February 26, 1954, with a copy of Requests for Admissions; and no defendant having served any answer to said Requests, although the time therefor has expired; and the default of each defendant having been entered herein; and it appearing that the defendants, unless enjoined therefrom, will continue to introduce or cause to be introduced or delivered, or cause to be delivered into interstate commerce"orgone energy accumulators, devices within the meaning of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. 301 et seq, which are misbranded and adulterated, and in violation of 21 U.S.C. 331 (a) and (k); and the Court having been fully advised in the premises;

Orgone Energy Accumulators", the "devices" designed to concentrate cosmic Orgone Energy, and thus to make it available to further research in medicine, biology and physics, are being built today in many landsy without my knowledge and consent, and even without any royalty payments:

On the basis of these considerations, I submit that the case against Orgonomy be taken out of court completely.

DECREE OF INJUNCTION

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the defendants, THE WILHELM REICH FOUNDATION, WILHELM REICH, and ILSE OLLFNDORFF and each and all of their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, all corporations, associations, and organizations, and all persons in active concert or participation with them or any of them, be, and they hereby are, perpetually enjoined and restrained from doing any of the following acts, directly or indirectly, in violation of Sections 301(a) or 301(k) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C.C. $331(\mathrm{a})$ or (k)) with respect to any orgone energy accumulator device, in any style or model, any and all accessories, components or parts thereof, or any similar device, in any style or model, and any device purported or represented to collect and accumulate the alleged orgone energy:
(1) Introducing or causing to be introduced or delivering or causing to be delivered for introduction into interstate commerce any such article of device which is:
(a) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21.U.S.C. 352(a) ) by reason of any representation or suggestion in its labeling which conveys the impression that such article, in any style or model, is an outstanding therapeutic agent, is a preventive of and beneficial for use in any disease or disease condition, is effective in the cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of any disease, symptom, or condition; or
(b) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502 (2) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a) ) by reason of any representation or suggestion in its labeling which conveys the impression that the alleged orgone energy exists; or
(c) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a)) by reasion of any photographic representation or suggestion with a caption, or otherwise, which conveys the impression that such is an actual photograph depicting the alleged orgone energy or an alleged excited orgone energy field; or
(d) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a) ) by reason of any other false or misleading representation or suggestion; or
(e) Adulterated within the meaning of Section 501(c) of the Act (21 U.S.C. $351(\cdot \mathrm{c})$ ) in that (1) its strength differs from or its quality falls below that which it purports or is represented to possess or (2) it purports to collect from the atmosphere and accumulate in said device the alleged orgone energy; or
(2) Doing any act or causing any act to be done with respect to any orgone energy accumulator device while such device is held for sale (including rental, or any other disposition) after shipment in interstate commerce which results in said device becoming misbranded or adulterated in any respect; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED:
(1) That all orgone energy accumulator devices, and their labeling, which were shipped in interstate commerce and which (a) are on a rental basis, or (b) otherwise owned or controlled by any one of the defendants, or by the defendents, be recalled by the defendants to their place of business at Rangeley, Maine; and
(2) That the devices referred to in (1) immediately above, and their parts; be destroyed by the defendants or, they may be dismantled and the materials from which they were made salvaged after dismantling; and
(3) That the labeling referred to in paragraph (1), just above, except those items for which a specific purchase price was paid by their. owners, be destroyed by the defendants; and
(4) That all parts or portions of orgone accumulator devices shipped in interstate commerce and retumed to Rangeley, Maine, or elsewhere, and awaiting repair or re-shipment be destroyed by the defendants, or they may be dismantled and the materials from which they were made salvaged after. dismantling; and
(5) That all copies of the following itens of written, printed, or graphic matter, and their covers, if any, which items have constituted labeling of the article of device, and which contain statements and representations pertaining to the existence of orgone energy, its collection: by, and accumulation in, orgone energy accumulators, and the use of such alleged orgone energy by employing said accumulators in the cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of disease, symptoms and conditions:

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATFS COURT OF APPEALS

FOR THE FIRST CIRCUIT

Petitioners above named pray that a writ of certiorari issue to review a decision and judgment of the United States Couri of Appeals for the First Circuit which affirmed judgments of the United States District Court for the 'District of Maine, Southern Division, entered on May 25, 1956 (R. 534-541):

For background and scientific development of Wilhelm Reich, see Appendix page 1la.

The petitioner Silvert is a licensed physician who has employed the principles of Orgonomy in the treatment of patients and worked with Reich among other physicians and scientists in recent years in the development of cosmic energy experiments.

The Wilhelm Reich Foundation* was established and incorporated in the State of Maine as a non-profit organization under Chapter 50 of revised statutes.

Both the Wilhelm Reich Foundation and Michael Silvert have agreed to adopt as their own the petition and argument of Wilhelm Reich. The Foundation was suspended in 1954 and dissolved December 31, 1955.

*The purposes of said corporation were:

1. To conduct research and teaching in cosmic orgone energy (orgone physics, orgone biophysics), and hatural science generally, its medical, .technical, other and all future applications;
2. To establish, operate and maintain laboratories and observatories for scientific purposes;

3: To establish; operate and maintain clinics and hospitals for orgonomic medical research and medical orgone therapy;
4. To establish, operate and maintatin educational institutions;
5. To establishi; operate and maintain bio-energetic research in agricuiture;
6. To acquire and preserve the instruments, library and archives of Wilhelm Reich;
7. To preserve the discoveries of Wilhelm Reich and secure them for posterity by the establishment of institutions of learning, maintenance of museums or otherwise;

- 8. To publish any material concerning the discoveries and work of Wilhelm Reich; and all future work of the corporation based on these discoveries. (Orgone Energy Bulletin, 1951, burned on Court order, August, 1956.)

OPINIONS BELOW
The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit delivered an opinion by Woodbury, Circuit Judge. That opinion has not yet been reported and is printed as an appendix to this petition. (See p. la). There was no opinion in the District Court.

JURISDICTION.
The judgment of the Court of Appeals was dated, made and entered on December 11, 1956. (See p. 9a) The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254 (I), 62 Stat. 928.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

A. Whether the responsible citizen has, in a self-goverming society, within the framework of the Constitution of the U.S.A., the natural civic right to ignore an unlawful court order, if this order directs him to break into a safe; to violate the constitution of the U.S.A.; to lie under oath; or to submit to a commercial and political conspiracy to defraud the U.S". public of a discovery crucial during a planetary emergency.

(p. 4)

B. Basịc Statutory Questions Involved in Setting Legal Precedent:
I. GENERAL: Whether congressional statutes, well defined to rule a certain circumscribed realm of social functioning (A), may be lawfully. applied to realm (B), a new realm of nature, also circumscribed and defined, but entirely different from (A)?
II. CONCREIEIY: Whether statutes which rule the functioning of railway systems may be lawfully applied to the functioning of air travel systems? or are rules which govern air travel legally applicable to future space travel?

III: SPECTFICALLY: Whether the Act of Congress (Pure Food Act, 52 Stat. 1043, 21 U.S.C.), which rules the production and distribution of foods and drugs, may be applied to basic scientific research in general; and research in the realm of the "ETHER" or "COSMIC ENERGY" in particular?
C. 1. Whether injunctions against basic scientific research in newly discovered realms of nature, obtained by fraud, by misrepresentation of facts to the courts, by concealment of pertinent facts, and by outright falsification of facts, are lawful orders.
2. Whether court orders obtained by fraud and conspiracy are, as uniawful orders, automatically null and void. Whether the law requires orders to be lawful orders based on fact not opinion only, on truth and not on falsification, misrepresentation and concealment of fact.

3. Whether government has jurisdiction to determine questions of scientific opinion in realms of new knowledge of basic natural research.
4. Whether basic research in natural science in hitherto unknown realms of nature requires new laws of administration and should not be subjected to existing statutory laws, designed to administer established knowledge of a different kind.
D. Whether non-appearance in court to answer a fraudulent complaint is legally justified, IF
5. a) the acting judge has been informed of the decision not to appear, and of its reasons;
b) these reasons (not.to appear in Court) are such that it can be shown by factual evidence and argument, it would have inevitably led to ruin at the hands of a cunning conspiracy;
c) there is no other way to avoid entrapment;
d) it can be show that the acting judge was victimized to the detriment of his objectivity to do justice in the case.
6. Whether, furthermore, such non-appearance may lawfully be used by the conspirator to carry through his plan to obtain the default injunction.
7. Whether such non-appearance confers jurisdiction upon the Court under influence of conspiracy to proceed without examining its own jurisdiction.

STATUTES INVOLVED

I. The case on Trial and on Appeal is without factual and legal Precedent:' (Appeal Brief, WR vs. U.S.A., pp. 2-20, 21-51):

1) Factually:

Discovery of Cosmic Energy involves space problems without precedent: Petitioner succeeded in disabling space craft May 12, 1954 (see. p. 8, et seq.).
2) Judicially: There are no applicable Congressional Statutes since material substance of the discovery is without precedent: Space Ships are causing planetary ("DOR") Emergency by draining Life Energy from the Planet, causing drought and desert development.

II. Constitution of the U.S.A.

1) The scope of judicial power of Federal Judges over basic scientific research. Art. III, 2.
2) Exclusion of pertinent evidence from jury trial. Art. III, 3.
3). Obedience to unlawful orders obtained by. fraud and designed to serve conspiracy. Art. III, 2.
(See Appendix, p. 10a.)
(p. 7)
III. " Procedural Rules Involved
3) Rule of Criminal Procedure, Rule 12, Subdivision (b), (2) and (4): Subdivision (b) (2): "Lack of jurisdiction or the failure of the indictment or information to charge an offense shall be noticed by the court at any time during the pendency of the proceeding."

Subdivision (b) (4): "A motion before trial raising defenses or objections shall be determined before trial unless the court orders that it be deferred for determination at the trial of the general issue. An issue of fact shall be tried by a jury if a jury trial is required under the Constitution or an act of Congress. All other issues of fact shall be determined by the court with or without a jury or on affidavits or in such other manner as the court may direct."
I. A Cosmic Ėvent Without Precedent (May 12, 1954)

First Contact with Outer Space
On May 12; 1954, seven weeks after issuance of the injunction, an unprecedented event occurred at Orgonon, Rangeley, Maine, where the Orgone Institute Research Laboratories of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation are located.

The following is a verbatim excerpt from the "Second Oranur Report (195i-1956)", under the title, "First contact with Outer. Space" (Voì. V, Rec. App., Suppressed Evidence, R. ${ }^{\text {5 }}$ (5) : : *

An Event Without Precedent

Abstract

*Vol. V of Record Appendix in Appeals Court (see "Group D" in "Parts of Record to be Printed," p. 5r, Appendjx to Appeal Brief of WR ), being voluminous to the extent of about 300 pages, could not be submitted to the Circuit Court of Appeals in due time. A motion to extend time for filing was denied. Vol. V of the Record Appendix contains the crucial evidence which was suppressed at the trial; May 3-7; 1956. It constitutes, allso, the evidence which would have freed the defendants had the jury known its contents. The substance of this report, however, was at the time top secret. This report is not under injunction. It was the main objective of the commercial and political conspirany and of espionage activities which harassed the work and life of the Discoverer of the Life Energy and his staff for a full 10 years, beginning 1946 (see 2xhibit No. 4, Vol. I of Record Appendix: "Red. Thread of a Conspiracy" and "Table of Events").

energy was. drawn from them. The shock of this experience was great enough not to repeat such action until October 10th, 1954. The reason for the hesitation was obviously the risk to precipitate an interplanetary war by such experimentation. The event was kept secret until 1957.
"The (AAF) Ruppelt report on UFO's (Unidentified Fiying Objects) clearly reveals the helplessness of mechanistic method in coming to grips with the problems posed by the spacemen. The cosmic orgone energy which these living beings are using in their technology is beyond the grasp of mechanistic science since cosmic laws of functioning are not mechanical but what I term 'functional.' Even the mathematical theory necessary to formulate these problems and make them technologically usable, cannot use any of the old mechanistic methods of thought to cope with the functional OR facts.
"The helplessness of mechanistic thinking appears in the tragic shortcoming of our fastest jet fighter planes to make and hold contact with UFOS. Being unavoidably outdistanced is not a flattering situation for military 'pride. The conclusion seems correct: Mechanistic methods of locomotion must be counted out in coping wịth the spaceship problem. Neither propeller nor jet will or can ever get us into space beyond.

EEasy contact was made on that fateful day with what obvioüsly turned out to be: a heretofore unknown type of UFO. I had hesitated for weeks to turn my cloudbusteri pipes toward a 'star,' as if I had known that some of the blinking lights hanging in the sky were not planets or fixed stars but SPACE machines. With the fading out of the two 'stars,' the cloudbuster had suddenly changed into a SPACEGUN From then onwardy too, our approach to the problem of space became positite; affirmative, confident in using our carefully screened dàta.

New Tools of Knowledge Needed
"When I saw the "stari to the' west fade out four times in succession;, what had been left of the old world of human knowledge after the discövery of the OR energy 1936-1940 tumbled beyond retrieve. From now on everything; anything was possible. Nothing could any ionger be consjidered "impossibles if I had directed drawpipes, connected with the deep well, toward an ordinary star, and the star had faded out four times. There was no mistake about it. Three more people had seen it. There was only one conclusion: The thing we had drawn from was not a star. It was something else; a'UFO.'
"I must remind the reader that in May 1954 I had read only one report on UFOs; I had not studied anything on the subject.' I knew practically nothing about it. But my mind, used to expecting surprises in natural research, was open to meet anything that seemed real. I had to be convinced myself first. Most people try to obtain consent of their impressions before having been convinced themselves. I had long since given up hope to convince anyone steeped in present-day mechanics or mysticism. There were no authorities. There was no one to whom to report this observation.
"(In May/1954, the assault by the American drug business had just begun to bother us a few weeks before.) We were still laboring at an understanding of what had happened in early 1951 when Oranur had burst into our lives; we were still trying to dig out humanly, emotionally and scientifically from under the avalanche of new observations, facts, ideas which Oranur had thrown in our way. I knew, we had without intending i.t, drilled a hole, as it were, into the wall which had for millennia soparated man from the universe around him. We were hard pressed in our attempt to survive the flood of events in good form. A U.S. court of law had issued an order on March 19th, 1954 to stop all OR research activities including publication. We thus had to face the flood of incredible new facts, our own emotional and physical misery and the assault by the American and Russian mechanistic mind. It all tied in with our basic research neatly as one single fact: EARTHMEN EAD ENCOUNTERED SPACE AS IT REALLY WAS; not as science had conceived of it heretofore."
(p. 11)
II. Survey of the Development of the Cosmic Event

Discovery of Orgastic Convulsion in 1923-1926;
Application of Knowledge of Orgastic Convulsion in CHARACTER ANALYSIS, 1927-1933;
Application of the Same Principle in Human Physiology and the Cancer Shrinking Biopathy, 1934-1945; in Physjoss and Astrophysics and in the Oranur Experiment, 1946-1956.

The discovery of the orgastic convulsion at the climax of natural mating opened up a vast field of new huiman knowledge. In 1923, the discovery was made of the function of "orgastic potency" or orgastic convulsion. A basic principle of life was uncovered by careful study of human experience in natural mating. The physiological function of "orgastic potency" was the red thread guiding Orgonomic basic research ever since 1923 in the pathology of human character development.
(CHARACTER ANALYSIS, three editions, under decree of injunction, first published 10 years before the discovery of the Cosmic Life Energy.)
(p. 12)

The function of the orgastic convulsion was; after completion of the studies of human character development in 1933, furither applied in human physiology as a central problem of human psycho-somatic pathology: Biopathies. The cancer disease was adopted asia biopathic object of experimentation on the basis of the functions involved in orgastic convision. The result of this application of the principle of "brgastic potency" and the natural function of orgastic convulsion was conducted in cancer pathôlogy from about 1934, beginning in Norway, and ending 1945 in the USS.A.

It was, as a matter of fact, not the cancer disease itself, but the life functions and their disturbances entailed in this disease which prompted me to test experimentally, the validity and usefulness of the natural function of orgastic potency in the cancer disease, especially in connection with the problem in what manner alive mobile cancer cells develop within the human organism; they cannot be found in the air. The result was a report written and published in successive parts between 1939 and 1947 and compiled in a book, "IHE CANCER BIOPATHY." It was published in 1948. It was fiercely fought ever. since by some American drug industries.
"The Cancer"Biopathy" did not promise any cancer cures. On the contrary, ever since the beginning of cancer experimentation, careful avoidance of proclamation of any cures and strict adherence to the principle of reporting failure as well as success was due to a crucial discovery in the realm of cancer pathology .
(p. 13)

Cancer Shrinking Biopathy

It was found through experimentation with the life energy discovered in the so-called "bions" or "energy vesicles" in living tissue around 1938: The cancer disease is due to severe bio-energetic resignation with consequent shrinking in the living organism. The result of this disturhance. of energetic metabolism in living tissue is gradual loss of energy, succeeded by loss of substance and vitality, and finally a process of shrinking of the total system, known but not understood heretofore as "cachexia" in routine pathology. In, other words, "The Cancer Biopathy" stated that the local cancer tumor, the only object until then of cancer treatment, was only a by-product of a.general plasmatic shrinking biopathy. It develops in the human organism from emotional. resignation due to chronic frustration of natural genital lave, life from.childhood -through adolescence.

This was a major conclusion in human pathology. It threatened at once the continued existence of industries and medical practices based on the old concept. As was to be expected, they were interested in the continuation of ignorance of the true background of the cancer disease. They proceeded, accordingly, to kill the discovery. "The Cancer Biopathy", was condemned as "promotion of fraudulent cancer cures" by highly placed commercial and political conspirators, and, following them innocently, I assume, a chemist Smyth of the Pharmaceutic Council of the American Medical Assn. (1948), a department of the Consumers Union, under influence of the original instigator, Brady, and finally the food and drug agency.

No cencer or other medical experimentation with orgone.energy was done any langer after about 1946.

The Oranur Experiment

I shifted my laboratory facilities in New York and at Orgonon, Maine, completely over to basic experimentation in the physical realm of the Cosmic Energy. The result of this experimentation, to make it brief, was the discovery: Space is not empty. Highly evacuated, airless tubes can bè charged by cosmic energy and bë made to luminate upon certain irritation. This discovery shattered thé notion of an empty space. It established the universal existence of the Cosmic Energy discovered by me. I had hit upon the fundamental Law of Nature. In the spring of 1950, I gave up all activities in New York, including rich income from teaching, and established permanent work in Maine.

When the Korean War came down upon us later in 1950, I rearranged my laboratory again to be ready to help in the war effort, if requested. I published the "First Oranur Report" on the experimental work done in physics between 1946 and 1951: "The Oranur Experimento" It was received with great interest and some appreciation by dozens of top agencies in the U.S. Government, in the U.S, civic administration and in cirilian U.S. agencies; also abroad. A list of these recipients of literature is enclostid in the volume "Conspiracy," No. 41 of which was and still is in the hands of the FDA counsel.

The First Oranur Experiment Report was the acute object of a dangerous international conspiracy and of espionage activities directed from Moscow. The conspiracy was directed to steal this discovery for the U.S.S. R. and to kill it in the United States. (See "Table of Events" on public court record (R. 41-46) and Appendix to Appeal Bxief of WR of October, 1956, especially "Historical Record of Information Given Regarding Oranur," p. 35r).
(p. 15)

My strenuous efforts to effectuate the recognition by the U. S. Government of the national and international impact of the Oranur Experiment was not immediately met with success due to the vexy same conspiratorial espionage activities.
III. Reinstatement of certain enjoined activities due to civic responsibilities after the repetition of the Cosmic Event of October 10, 1954

Establishment of the desert research project, on official court record all through the trial and in Parts of Record to be Printed in Appendix to Appellants: Briefs, (Reich Brief 5r) submitted September 10, 1956, to CJerik, U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, "Group D-- Supressed end Top Secret Evidence, Referred to on Trial Records as 'OROP Desert Ea' and as 'Espionege':"

The cosmic event of May 12, 1954, was carefully investigated all through the summer of 1954: The decision was reached to repeat the experimental observation: Finally; October 10, 1954, was designated as the day of the second test.

Also, all during the summer of 1954, work was. being done on the Archives of the Orgone Institute to establish as accurately as; possible the extent to which the Russian espionage system in the United States had succeeded in collusion with U. S. Government employees and single treacherous individuals planted in high places in American civil organizations to obtain information from and at the same time to destroy and discredit orgonomic research in the United States.

The first result of these research activities during the summer of 1954 was the compilation, printing and distribution of a volume of the series, "History of the Discovery of the Life Energy," entitled "Conspiracy," with the subtitle "An Emotional Chain Reaction:" This compilation contained only original documentary material beginning early 1942 and carrying through 1954. The original documents were numbered in succession and a summarizing "Table of Evients" was compiled and added. Copies of this volume were distributed, partially gratis, and partially for recompensation among prominent organizations and personalities of the U.S. A.

A complete set of the impounded literature was sent to the District Court in Portland, Maine, specifically to Judge Clifford in February, 1954. One volume of "Conspiracy" in a black binder was sent to Judge Clifford for information and confirmation of a "Response" sent on February 25, 1954. The "Response" (Petitioners' Ex: 5, R. 85, 336) informed the court that a conspiracy existed and secret research work was at stake. The authentic documentary volume completed this information. The volume was sent to the courit openly'; it was fully accessible to the acting United States Attorneys; Peter: Mills: A volume, Nö. 4l, was sent in September 1954 to the U. S: Department of Health and Welfare.

Now, the two lines of activities at Orgonon merged on October 9, 1954: The experimental work on UFO's was crucial, pressing and evoked a sense of social responsibility strong enough to force a decision: A letter to Judge Clifford was sent through the Clerk of the Foundation, William Moise. This letter, dated October 9, 1954 (contained in suppressed Record Appendix Vol. III, p. 43), informed the court as follows:

COPY
October 9th 1954

To the United States District Court
Portland, Maine
We wish to inform your good offices that, in the course of October 1954, - the Orgone Institute Press will resume its normal function of filling orders for books in the realm of natural science and orgonomic medicine. This decision was made when it was ascertained, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the injunction of March 19th, 1954 was pursued and obtained in a criminal manner by Moscow-directed, American conspirators. We are sending, for your files, a volume of the History of the Discovery of the Life Energy which the Orgone Institute is sending out in connection with this fact.

It was felt that the District Court in Portland should be informed on this step. Should the District Court in Portland have any objection to the resumption of the normal scientific: activities of the Orgone Institute and its affiliate organizations, information to this effect would be appreciated.

It is out of deep respect for the basic principles of truth and justice, in whose behalf American Courts are functioning, that the Orgone Institute is proceeding to fulfill its scientific and medical duties.

Sincerely yours,
/s/ William Moise

Mrs. Hobby, Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
Commander, Air Technical Intelligence Center, Air Force J. Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

Thus, conspiracy and object of conspiracy were united in one formation and remained united until the present day.

The injunction had so far put a stop to our work. It had greatly reduced our financial resources to pursue our civic' responsibilities and research activities.

Agents of the drug agency of the U. S. Government had deceived the acting judge at the trial. The fact was concealed that until October 10, 1954 no literature was being distributed. On October 10, 1954, only the distribution of the literature was resumed, for reasons of information and for financial resources.

No. orgone energy devices were to my knowledge ever shipped after October 10, 1954, in interstate commerce, with the exception of the transfer of the accumulators from Rangeley to New York by Dr. Silvert to his own address and not to any custómers; a transfer which was accomplished without my knowledge or consent (Appeal Brief for Dr. Michael Silvert, p. 13).

The decision to resume distribution of literature was thus made in the performance of civic duties to remove the obstacle which obstructed our work on which depended the future fate of the planet. The second test of the effects of the space gun upon Unidentified Flying Objects (Ea's in our terms) was performed after careful preparation on the evening following the date when the letter of October 9, 1954, was sent to Judge Clifford. Operations with orgone energy or cosmic energy which, according to the civil complaint of February 10, 1954, "did not exist," succeeded once more: For the second time "stars" were dimmed, stopped luminating and moved as if in flight in different directions. They were space machines.
(p. 19) .

There was no doubt whatsoever after this second experience that our cosmic ennergy research was on the right track. It was standing up to the most exacting techniques of control and testing. The cosmic event was reported to the Air Force Technical Intelligence by one of the operators, William Noise, the Clerk of the Foundation, on his, way to Arizona in Dayton, Ohio, on October 14, 1954, at 4:00 p.m.

For furtner information, reference is made to this volume.
We must return now to the interlacing of our further Cosmic Ea Research with the continued attempts on the part of the drug agents and their conspiratorial consorts in and out of the American Government.

It is necessary to emphasize the interlacing of research work and conspiracy. The legal representative of the FDA deceived the Court of Appeals as he had previously deceived the District Court judges. He argued in his redbound Brief for Appellee to the Court of Appeals on November 5, 1956, to quote verbatim (p. 5) :
"References to 'conspiracy' are threaded throughout the record and briefs as well as references of the appelants to some nebulous super secrets involving, amoung others, 'Invasion from Outer Space' (Reich Brief 32) to mention but' one such immaterial sub.ject." (Italics by Reich.)

The representative of the FDA wrote this sentence into a response to the Court of Appeals, while their accomplices were trying to intrude and to, obtain information on exactly the very same "nebulous" and "immaterial super secrets": OROP DESERT Ea.

The FBI was continuously kept informed on the illegal intrusions and the harassment by espionage agents during the summer months of 1955 and 1956. The bulk of that sequence of events is beyond my domain.
IV. THE FRAUD

The complainant, or whoever directed his activities, had deceived and misled the District Court so completely and thoroughly that it took several years of carefui research to understand how such continued deceit could have been so successful heretofore at all. A simple inspection of quotations from the literature in the original complaint and comparison with the original text shows the fraud (see R. 409, and especially R. 436, 437, 438 compared with Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 95-104, 336):

"In the brief of the appellant. The Wilhelm Reich Foundation we understand its argument to be that the District Court erred during the contempt proceeding in refusing to hear evidence showing that the injunction was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence. We find no motion by this appellant to dismiss the amended complaint on these grounds. We nevertheless discuss the proposition since appellant, Reich, adopts the point in his Statement of Questions Involved (Reich Brief 1). Initially, it must be stated that there is not the slightest indication in the record, other than appellants' unsupported allegations, of any such actions on the part of the Government. There is no foundation whatsoever for these serious charges. Moreover, there is nothing in the record to show that the appeliants ever offered any proof, or indicated what the proof would be, to sustain these charges.
"We have scrutinized the record in an attempt to understand the basis for the error charged to, the District Court of preventing a showing that the injunction decree was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence: Furthur we searched to learn, where the claimed fraud lay, what evidence was suppressed, and at what stage of the proceedings the alleged suppression occurred."

Here, the opponent deceived the Court in the open. He could rely on the reluctance of the Court to reaily believe that anyone would dare to deceive so grossly and so openly right into the face of acting judgesj*
*See, also legal sumiohry on friud in Appendix, p.27a..

DECEIT NO. 1: "We find no motion by this appellant to dismiss the complaint on these grounds."

RECORD: On October listh, $\mathbf{1} 955$, in chambers of District Court Judge Clifford, in the presence of Maguire, U:S. Attorney Peter Mills, Counsel Charles Haydon and the Court Clerk Poole, I told the judge that the nature of procedures heretofore made it doubtful that Maguire was a bona fide U.S. Government agent.

On the same day, at the following public hearing, I charged fraud perpetrated upon the court in the form of "misrepresentation of facts" (R.. 502). The motion was postponed by Judge Clifford.

Specifically, I moved in a subsequent written "motion to dismiss the amended information on the grounds of illegal misrepresentation of facts" (R. 500) on October 24th, 1955. The motion was made in preparation of the presentation of these motions in oral argument at the hearing scheduled by Judge Clifford for November 4th, 1955 (R. 505, 506)'.

The hearing on November 4th, 1955, was devoted in its entirety to these motions to dismiss the information on the grounds of "fraud perpetrated upon the Court." The opponent "was not listening to Dr: Reich while he was talking." (R. 506, bottom.) Maybe this gentleman never listened all throügh these proceedings when Fraud, Conspiracy and Perjury charges were brought. forth. $\therefore$ The motions were denied in open court hearing; although espionage was specifically charged at the same hearing (R. 504ff, 519)..

DECEIT NO. 2: ". : : there is not the slightest indication in the record, other than appellant's unsupported allegations, of any such actions (fraud) on the part of the Government."
RECORD: Here, the mastermind has washed our brain, figuratively speaking, by "double-talk" and "double-think" ("1984" by Orwell) in order to deceive. He conceals at this point before the Court the fact that these motions were denied that same day and that, accordingly, the allegations are on record as charges in the above-quoted motions themselves.

* This fact was deliberately concealed in order to mislead the Appellate Court again: (Petitioner's Ex. 5; R: 96-104. 336, "Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig," Documontary Appondix.)

DECEIT NO. 3: "Moreover, there is nothing in the record to show that the appellants ever offered any proof; or indicated what the proof would be, to sustain these charges:
"We have scrutinized the record in an attempt to understand the basis for the error charged to the District Court of preventing a showing that the injunction decree was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence. Further, we searched to learn where the claimed fraud lay, what evidence was suppressed, and at what stage of the proceedings the alleged suppression occurred."

RECORD: This sentence demonstrates the mostrosity of the deceit before the Court. The monstrous bigness of the deceit is the very factor that prevents its detection since no one would believe that such open deception before courts is possible.

The proof of these allegations looms large all through Record Appendices: Vol. I of the evidence for the defense admitted in court at the trial, Petitioners!' Ex. 4, R. 1-62, 336, "The Red Thread of a Conspiracy," and Petitioners! Ex. 5, R. 63-104, 336, "Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig"; also in the Appendix to Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 95, et seq.

We quote here verbatim the charge of fraud brought forth in this evidence, Exhibit 5 for the defense, R. 102-104:

APPENDIX TO FACTUAL PRESENTATION

Compiled by WILLAIM MOISE, Secretary, EPPO, OROP DESERT EA

The Food and Drug Administration misrepresented the following publications as dealing with the "cure", "mitigation", "prevention of the disease conditions and symptoms hereinafter enumerated * * * which constitute labeling" (Civil Action 1056) ; while at the same time the FDA concealed from the court the factually true content of the publications:

PUBLICATION

1. THE SEXUAL REVOLJTION, by Wilhelm Reich, MoD.

True is the fact that CANCER does not appear at all in either content or index; the fact is that this book was written long before the discovery of the Orgone.

Not True is the FDA allegation that this work deals with the cure, mitigation, prevention, or treatment of. CANGER.
(p. 25)

Concealed from the court by the FDA is the fact that the true content of this book is on the failure of the Russian experiment in establishing. sexual reforms, due to human structural incapacity for freedom.
2. THE MASS PSYCHOLOGY OF FASCISM, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is the fact that CANCER does not appear at all in either content or index; the fact is that this book, too, was written years before the discovery of the Orgone.

Not True is the allegation by the FDA that this book is about the cure, mitigation, prevention and treatment of CANCER.

Concealed from the court by the FDA is the fact that the true content. of this work described how all forms of irrationality in politics (hed and Black Fascism used as examples) are derived basically from combined structural irrationality of human masses; that this book is an important text for present political psychology (in the libraries of the U.S. State Department and Central Intelligence Agency); that this book was ordered destroyed and burned by Hitler.

3. CHARACTER ANALYSIS, by Wilhelm.Reich, M.D.

True is is the fact that CANCER does not appear in the index, chapter headings, or outlines; that "cancer tumor" cannot be found in the contents.

Untrue is the claim that this book is about the cure, prevention, mitigation, or prevention of CANGER TYMORS."

Concealed was the fact that this work is a basic textbook in psychiatry, detailing the character-analytic technique of the discoverer from its beginnings in psychology to its present firm basis in natural science in the form of orgone biophysics.
(p. 26)
4. COSMIC SUPERIMPOSITION, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER, COMMON COLD, ICHTHYOSIS, RHENMATIC FEVER, . HYPERTENSION, or DIABETES appear not at all in either content or index of this work.

Untrue is the presentation by the FDA that this work is concerned with the cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of CANCER, COMMON COLD, ICHTHYOSIS, RHEUMATIC FEVER, HYPERTENSION, DIABETES.

Concealed, the fact that this work deals with hurricanes, the shape. of the galaxies, and the "ring" of the aurora borealis; that their request for the enjoining of the entire book was solely upon the inclusion of the Bibliography of Works on Orgone Energy at the back of the book."
5. EIHER, GOD AND DEVII, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER does not appear in the index or content, with the following one exception, p. 123, ©hp. VI, "Concentrated Orgone Emergy has many beneficial effects on living organisms which I have tried to describe. in my CANCER BIOPATHY * * *"

Not True is the allegation that this book deals with the cure, mitigation, prevention, or treatment of, CANCER.

Concealed again is the factual content of this work: the description of how the process of functionalism led to the discovery of Orgone Energy (Ether) through objective logic of the thought process; how humanity until this, had evaded discovery through various erroneous thought systems: mysticism, mechanism, etc. * * *
6. THE MURDER OF CHRIST, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER appears not at all in index or content.*
Not True is the claim that this work constitutes a claim of cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of CANCER.

Concealed again from the court is the true content: The Murder of Christ which is the Murder of Life"through the ages by and in each of us through the Emotional Plague.
7. PEOPLE IN IROUBLE, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that this work is a translation of the original German manuscript "Menschen im Staat" (1936-7), translated in 1947; that on page 123 of the Appendix the discoverer writes of, "The new set of problems grouped around the natural functions of endogenous infection and decay * * *", "The cancer process is a long-drawn-out process of decay within the human organism due to the bioenergetic shrinking of the life system." Not Irue is the opinion that this book constitutes a claim of cure, mitigation, treatment, of CANCER. Not True is the opinion by the FDA that "Blood" or "Tissue" is a "disease", a "disease condition" or a "symptom"; that this book states them as such; that this book constitutes a claim of cure, treatment etc. * * *

Concealed, that this work is a historical document of the discoverer's experiences in the socialist and psychoanalytic movement of 25 years ago, between 1927 and 1937.

(signed) WILLIAM MOISE

The opponent here used the "BIG LIE" technique. This Exhibit (5) evidence was admitted at the trial (R. 336). It could not be brought directly into the trial record because it shower the fraud, and my attempts of proving fraud ("whi" or Motives of my attitude to injunction) were ruled out by. Judge Sweeney.

At the hearing before the Appellate Court for the First Circuit on November 5, 1956, I brought forth in oral argument the charge of perjury against Joseph Maguire and
(p. 28)

Petex Mills in my reply to their reply argument. I had hesitated until then bringing forth this grave charge. When in his reply to my argument he continued to slander me financially, and proved once more that he was completely devoid of any sense of truth or decency, it would have been unwarranted to further adhere to restraint and good breeding, or to further hesitate from medical consideration to tell the truth about a man of such character.
"Joseph L. Maguire and Peter Mills have both committed perjury in addition to previous fraudulent deceit of U.S. Courts on the witness stand at the trial on May 5, 1956. The perjury concerns their knowledge of the content of the documentary compilation 'Conspiracy' (Vol. No. 4l) (abstracted in Rerord Appendix, Vol. I2 Exhibit No: 4 for the Defense 'The Red Thread of a Conspiracy'). This compilation contains documentary proof of : treason against the U. S. A." (Reply Brief, WiJhelm Reich, p. 1):.

The Contradictory Testimony of Joseph Maguire and Ilse 0llendorff on Vol. 41 of "Conspiracy"

1. "Joseph Maguire denied under oath on the witness stand knowledge of the "Conspiracy" document.
2. Witness Ilse Ollendorff testified that he had been in possession of Vol. No. 41 of "Conspiracy" while interrogating her.
3. Knowing the content of the "Conspiracy," Vol. No. 4i; he aiso knew that he had received it from Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Oveta Culp Hobby, to whom it was sent on September l, 1954, in fuli reliance on the integrity of the Health Department of the U.S. Govomment.
4. Joseph Maguire deceived the Health Department when he used this volume for his own information only, and not as information for the U.S. Public on the matters contained therein.
5. Having had knowledge of Vol: No. 41 of "Conspiracy," the social administrator, Joseph Maguire, knew well the following of its contents, among others:
(a) The documents concerning the Red Fascist conspiracy in the U.S.A., including the attack upon the Discoyery of the Life Energy. (See Record Appendix, Vol. I; "ithe Red Thread of a Conspiracy.") Maguire kept silent before the Court.
(b) The people who were involved in the conspiracy:
(c) The search for information on WR!s laboratory work and its invasion by tools of an espionage ring operating in the U.S.A.
(d) Information regarding the orgone energy motor and William Washington's involvement, 1948-49.

> (R. 333-335. All emphasis by WR.)

JOSEPH MAGUIRE, a witness, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:
Direct examination by Dr. Reich:
Dr. Reich: Mr. Maguire, you conducted the case against Orgone for how long, - since when did it begin?

Mr. Maguire: Well, in the first place, I have conducted no case.
Dr. Reich: Well, you have presented it?
Mr. Maguire: I have conducted no case against Orgone, at any time.
Dr. Reich: But you were the lawyer?
Mr. Mills: I object, Your Honor, as entirely irrelevant.
The Court: I will allow it. I am going to give him a little more Iatitude than a lawyer would have.
Dr. Reich: (Shows book to the witness) Can you identify this book, please?

Mr. Maguire: I have never seen this book before.
Dr. Reich: You say you have never seen this book before. On July 26 , you had the same book in your hands, and you quoted from it. Would you kindly read the title of the book?

Mr. Maguire: Wilhelm Reich, History of the Discovery of Life Energy-1942-1954."

Dr. Reich: Just read the title of the book, that's all.
The Court: Read the title.
Mr. Maguire: Well, there is so much on here, I don't know what is the title.

Dr. Reich: It is right here.
Mr. Maguire: Reading what Dr. Reich has pointed out to me, which is the title, and which is in rather small print, "Conspiracy and Emotional Chain Reaction. "

Dr. Reich: Have you ever had that in your hand?
Mr. Maguire: I have had what might be a similar volume.
Dr. Reich: Similar or identical?
Mr. Maguire: I can ${ }^{2} t$ answer that. The way the book is constructed, it is loose leaf and the pages can be withdrawn very readily..

Dr': Reich: Mr:'Maguire, may I repeat my" question? Did you see that book? Did you ever have it in your hands on July 26-ves or no?

The Court: He said he did not know.
Mr: Haguire: No'.
The Court: I can't receive that in evidence:
Dr. Reich: Did. you ever see this pamphlet?
(j. 3i)

Mr. Maguire: I have seen one similar to it.
Dr. Reich: Would you read the title, please?
Mr. Maguire: Milhelm Reich, Biographical Material-History of the Discovery of the Life Energy-Documentary Supplement No. 2-The Red Threat of a Conspiracy."

Dr. Reich: Is that known to you?
Mr. Maguire: Well, I said I have seen something or probably similar to this.
Dr. Reich: Did you see this pamphlet?
Mr. Maguire: No, I didn't.
Dr. Reich: You never saw this pamphlet?
Mr. Kaguire: No, I didn't.
Dr. Reich: The third one-this is the last one. Do you know this one?
Here is the title. The same series?
Mr. Maguire: I don't understand what you mean.
Dr. Reich: Did you ever read it or have it in your hands? Are you acquainted with this title? Would you please read it?
Mr. Maguire: Did I have this pamphlet in my hands?
Dr. Reich: Not this one.
Mr. Maguire: I have seen and had one in my hands, I presume.
Dr. Reich: With the same title, Would you read the title?
Mr. Maguire: "Atoms for Peace vs The Higs."
Dr. Reich: Did you read it?
Mr. Maguire: I think I read that one.
Dr. Reich: You think you read it?
Mr. Maguire: Yes.
(p. 32)

Dr. Reich: I offer this as an. Exhibit now.
Mr. Mills: I object. It is irrelevant and immaterial.
The Court: Are these books covered by the decree?
Mr . Nills: I believe so.
The Court: All right I will admit them.
Mr. Maguire: May I make a statement? That book is not covered by the Decree.

His own witness, Ilse 0llendorff, revealed on the witness stand the identity of the VOl. #41 of "Conspiracy" from which he had quoted during her examination, and which had been sent to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare:
(R. 355-358)

ILSE OLIENDORFF, a witness, called by and on behalf of the respondents, first being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Directtexamination Dr Reich:

Dr: Reich! Miss 0llendorff, I shall not ask you any questions as to identification since we know who you are. Do you know this volume? (Shows document to witness) (Conspiracy-WR)

Miss Ollendorff: Yes.
Dr. Reich: Will you tell the jury what that is, please?
Miss Ollendorfe: This is a volume of photostated copies of original letters and newspaper clippings that I helped to collect during the time I was an employee of the Foundation. It was collected in a loose leaf binder like that.

Dr. Reich: When was that material collected? When was it done, exactly?
(p. 33) Miss Ollendorff: I was there at the time. Part of the material was contained in the files and records that I kept, and it was collected in the present order after the injunction was filed.

Dr. Reich: Will you please tell the jury why this material was collected?
The Court: I don't think we are interested in why it was collected.
Dr. Reich: Will you please read the title?
Miss Ollendorff: "Conspiracy and Emotional Chain Reaction"
Dr. Reich: Wjil you tell the juxy whether you saw this volume here in the hands of Mr. Maguire Tuesday? (May 1, 1956-WR)

Miss 0llendorff: I saw a volume of this material. It was a limited edition, No. 41.

* Dr, Reich: Of this volume?

Miss Ollendorff: Of this material in Mr. Maguire's office on Muesday.
The Court: This is of this year?
Miss 0llendorff: Yes, when I was called again to identify some of the material from the bookkeeping.records.

Dr. Reich: Will you please tell the jury how it came about that I brought that here?. --

Miss Ollendorff: You showed me a document, a statement, that $I$ gave as a witness before, and. you asked me if I was aware of what this document contained in this volume. I said I was not sure of it. I knew that I wrote that document but I took your word that it was in this volume because it would be one of the documents that would be contained in this volume.

Dr. Reich: You are quite certain? You are under oath. Are you quite certain that the volume, which you saw in Mr. Maguire's hands and the volume I show you, are the same sexies, the same kind?
( $p .34$ ) Niss ollendorff: It is the same material.
Dr. Reich: Are you aware that Mr. Maguire had denied that?
Mr. Maguire: I certainly object to that. That is absolutely an incorrect statement. May I have the Court Reporter read the testimony back?

The Court: The jury will be the people to docide. The jury has heard your testimony, and now they have heard this testimony, and they will decide it.

Dr. Reich: May I repeat the question?
The Court: You may.
Dr. Reich: This morning, when Mr. Maguire was on the witness stand, I held up the same volume $* * *$

The Court: Let.me put this question to you. It is your testimony that you saw that in the hands of Mr. Maguire, and whether it was about some statement of yours that was in there. Do you consider it inconsistent with his testimony this morning?

Miss Ollendorff: I consider it inconsistent and I was disturbed about it. The Court: All right,
Dr. Reich: I have no more questions.

It would be anticlimactic to bring forth more such activities of the counsel for our Health Department. The Court records are full of such examples of pranking somersaults.

The "Cosmic Event" of May 12, 1954 and all that preceded and followed this event was excluded from testimony at trial, although it was "OROP Desert.Ea" which constituted the central object of the conspiracy (Appeal Brief, WR vs. U.S.A., 5160, Summary, pp. 4-20).

The counsel for the complainant again committed fraud when he denied that he has found record of suppressed evidence. The trial records are full of suppression of the crucial evidence, "OROP DESERT Ea", i.e., the planetary emergency in consequence of invasion from outer space.
(See p. 45 below for statement on Jurisdiction of District Court.)
SPECIAL REASONS FOR ALLONING THE WRIT
I. The PLANETARY EMERGENCX due to invasion of the earth's atmosphere from outer space, requiring Orgenomic Basic Research, is acute and critical.
II. The injunction against orgonomy was obtained by unlawful means in a conspiracy to kill the Discoverer of the Cosmic Energy and to usurp his approach to the space problem for the atomic industry, The injunction blocks crucial scientific research and work.in an emorgency of planetary dimensions.
III. Security and independence of basic natural science from interference by interests other than learning. (p. 37)
IV. The Discoverer of the Cosmic Energy respectfully requests the privilege to be heard in oral argument for further elaboration of the planetary emergency, which is being furthered by the unlawful injunction.
V. Reasons I-IV for allowing the Writ require the ultimate decision on important questions of federal law not yet settled by the Supreme Court.

ARGUNENTi I

The Decision of the Court of Appeals
The opinion of the Appellate Court, rendered by Justice Woodbury:

1. has decided an important question of federal law which has not been, but should be settled by this Court;
2. has decided a federal question in a way in conflict with applicable decisions of this Court;
3. has so far departed from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings, or so far sanctioned such a departure by a lower court, as to call for an exercise of this Court's powor of supervision.
(Revised Rules of the Supreme Court of the U. S. A. fart $\mathrm{V}_{4}$ Jurisdiction on Writ of Certiorari, Section 19, 1 (b).)

Summary of Trial Errors submitted to Circuit Court of Appeals:

1) No legal precedent:
(ips 38)
2. Evidence for defense submerged in secrecy, kept from view of the Jury and the acting Judge.
3. The fact that the trial court did not permit testimony as to the rotives, the "WHY" in this case is an error by the trial court and constitutes a legal basis for reversing the decision of the trial court.

Ten Principles of Truthful Conduct
The following Ten Principles of Truthful Conduct in Both Basic Research and Jurisprudence were submitted to the Court of Appeals:
I. Battles for Truthful Procedure are lawful battles.
2. Juries must render their verdicts fully informed.
3. There are no authorities on new knowledge, that is, "Knowledge of the Future." The only authority is the rule of learning.
4. Government must not interfere with basic research.
5. Scientific literature must not be ever impounded or burned anywhere on this planet. (It was done in the U.S.A. by the FDA, August 1956.)
6. Non-appearance in Court as self-defense against fraudulent complaints is a lawful means to avoid legal entrapment by master connivers.
7. Bona fide scientists must not be dragged into Court to be harassed to death by competitive commercial or political interests (R. 503).
8. 'Disclosure of scientific information, especially if secret, must not be forced by Court action or by administrative invasion of property and records. There are peaceful ways via conference and agreement.
(p. 39)
9. New knowledge requires new administrative laws.
10. Judicial errors must be realized and corrected. They must not be perpetuated (Brief on Appeal for Wilhelm Reich, No. 5160, pp. 1-2).

The following principles were presented, among others, in argument:
Common Principles of Basic Natural Science and Jurisprudence
"The following is a self-evident truth in natural science and its derivative, the judicial common law: Results obtained by unlawful means are themselves unlawful, invalid in the technical sense of jurisdiction. The legal profession adheres to these basic self-evident principles of all jurisdiction, since it does not wish to forsake the very foundations of the administration of justice. Conscious, systematic deviation from this principle.constitutos the 'shyster, ${ }^{\text {i }}$ defined in

Webster's dictionary and in the Encyclopedia Britannica as the 'pettifogging lawyer.' (Reich in Brief for Michael: Silvert, p. 10 and Reply Brief for Reich, 'Principles Involved,' p. la et seq.)
"On Procedure and Law: If procedure is so designed that it kills truth and fact, then procedure, and not factual truth, must yield to revision.
"If law is practiced in such a manner that quite obviously to everyone, the guilty one goes free and the innocent and decent one faces imprisonment, then the law practice must be changed as quickly and as radically as possible.
"These are the ABC's of justice, obvious a priori."
(p. 40)
"On Responsjbility of Science and Medicine: It is the duty of courts of justice to guard over the dignity of the court and against the abuse of privileges of freedom of action and speech. However, scientists and medical men in high position have the terse duty to watch over the independence of scientific inquiry into the laws of nature from any interference whatsoever, especially from ignorance, arrogance, prejudice, political or comercial interests. Science meets with jurisprudence at the very roots of man's existence in fact, reason and functional logic. Let us not, however, neglect those common roots. We have painfully learned what replacement of such principles by arbitrary interference has done to destroy security and human happiness.
"On Security of Natural Science: It is crucial to demonstrate the principle of security of basic research. The very security of Natural Science is in question." (Appeal Brief for WR, p. 49)

The only way that was open to the petitioner to blunt and avert the assault in the original complaint was information to acting Judge Clifford in the "Response" (Petitioners' Ex. 5, R, 85-89, 336) and non-appearance in court. This necessity, to avoid disaster, was explained in District, Court hearing before Judge Clifford and in Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals ruled against these basic principles involved in the test case. The question involved here is specifically whether scientists and medical men in high position have the terse duty to puard the independence of scientific inquiry into the laws of netiure ägainst any interference whatsoever, especially from ignoxance, prejudice $i$ political and commercial interests.

The test as to the legal urgency of such principles is now brought before the Supreme justices of the U.S.A. Human lives are staked on the answer to this question.
(p. 41)

ARGUMENT II
Consequences of Decision of Court of Appeals
The decision in Appellate Court established the following IEGAL PRECEDENT, should it not be reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court:

1. Fraud is lawful procedure in government to enforce unlawful orders.
2. Single federal judges have the power to issue unlawful orders obtained by fraudulent presentations and distortions of facts. Single men, subject to human error as anybody else, functioning judges on the bench, may make up crimes as they please; they may mete out such punishment as ideological whim, political dependence, ignorance in certain matters or irrational prejudice may motivate.
3. The judge may keep pertinent facts, from the jury in disregard of the Constitution of the U.S. A. The concepts of "due process of law" in criminal cases "have always meant at least two basic things (1) There must be a law enacted by the proper legislature defining the crime, and (2) the right of trial by jury has always meant that no judge had control over the facts of the case, which are the sole province of the jury." (Quotation from an unnamed prominent Washington lawyer, U. S. News and World Report, December 28, 1956.)
4. Basic civic functions are imperiled by permanent injunctions based on fraud. The doors are opened wide for any action that any federal district court may choose to take without any regard to any law; such as issuing a general injunction, telling everyrbody that no one can do anything contrary to the decree.

(p .42)

Article III (Appendix, 10a) is express and clear: United States courts may act only under laws of Congress gxanting jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the district courts is completely subject to congressional action and such courts may even by abolished by Congress at any time.

In the case before the Supreme Court, the essential substance of the legal case is without legal precedent; the factual substance is not on the congressional statute books and the court order was thus without basis in congressional legislation: Planetary Emergency due to Invasion from Outer Space is unknown to present Law.
5. Such "dragnet" injunctions would include anyone in the U.S.A., and, through the person being under court order, anyone who has any connection with this person. For example, to talk about or work with Cosmic Orgone Energy in connection with problems of outer space; to construct cosmic energy research tools, would be subject to contempt action by any Federal Court anywhere in the U.S.A. and throughout its realm of influential power.
6. Such unconstitutional injunctions would endanger the existence of anyone who acted as a physician in accordance with his medical conscience and duty.
7. It would threaten to jail any publisher here or abroad who, in performance of civic duties, wouid print such enjojned literature of science, as "Character Analysis," "Mass Psychology of Fascism," "Mhe Oranur Experiment," "Ether, God and Devil" for general reading, or would touch upon the Oranur Space Problem.

8. A single judge's personal opinion regarding cosmic or any other pioneer work would be considered "Tue LAW" of the land.

Anyone would be threatened by such uniawful procedures to be seized and jailed, as is the lawless practice in dictatorships. One might well ask; in accordance with the Washington lawyer "Publius" (Pseudonym) (see U: S: News and World Report of December 28, 1956):
"The Fifth and Sixth Amendments provide: 'No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury.
"I. Where is the statute, constitutionally passed by Congress, which defines the crime of which one stands accused?
"2. Where is the statute, constitutionally passed by Congress, which gives any court jurisdiction over anyone and everyone who he thinks might disagree with his decrees?
"3. Where is the presentment or indictment by a grand jury accusing * * * of violating what law?
"4. What are the limits of this power? If a judge, without law, can sentence one man to 30 days in jail, can he also hang him?
"5. If the courts can create such jurisdiction and powers for themselves, what other powers may they assume?"

> (p. 44)

These questions concern in a clear-cut manner the danger of development of a dictatorship in the U.S.A.

The Supreme Court "has supervisory jurisdiction over the proceedings of the federal courts. If it has any duty to perform in this regard, it is to see that the waters of justice are not polluted." (Chief Justice Warren in Stephen Mesarosh V. U.S. A., U. ST. 77 S. Ct. 1, No. 20, October Term, 1956.) If ever the waters of justice have been polluted, it was in this case. The Discoverer puts to TEST before the supreme judicial body of our land the question:

Jurisdiction of the District Court
The court in fịst instance had no jurisdiction, since fraud perpetrated upon the court vitiates the jurisdiction. It must be considered and decided upon before further steps are taken. This was not the case in District Court when my "Response" was submitted. The injunction was issued without inquiry into the charge of Conspiracy contained in the "Response."

What was in this test case more important to a responsible citizenry, its society and judicial system:
a. Mechanical obedience to an unlawful, unconstitutional order obtained by subversion end fraud,

OR
b. Functioning in order to act in a grave emergency on our planet?

The decisions in the courts below are warrants to federal agents and officials to perpetrate fraud and deceit in the name of the United States of America upon District Courts for the purpose of achieving uniawfully private commercial or political ends through injunctions in civil. cases.

The Court of Appeals has held that officers and agents of the Federal Food and Drug Administration cou?d procure a valid and enforceable injunction against Basic Research in this Realm of Primordial Cosmic Energy, Crucial to Research in the realm of Jaidentified Flying Objects in the Atmosphere of Our Planet; this was done in the name of the United States, by the perpetration of a fraud upon a United States District Court.

It held further that the District Court did not eir when it prevented those afflicted by the fraud from showing it to a jury which tried them for contempt

The Court of Appeals has thus decided a, question of federal law which has not been, but should be, settled by the Supreme Court.

The manner in which the Court of Appeals decided the question gives judicial approval to fraud and is so far a departure from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings, and is a sanction of such a departure by the District Court, as to call for the exercise of the Supreme Court's power of supervision.

THE CHARACTEROLOGICAL ERROR:
Neglect of Irrational Motivation of Crime and Judgment in this Case

Masters in deceitful litigation do not know or respect truth and fact. They believe that being smart is the same as being just.

The true assailant, the mastermind, in the legal action remained well hidden in the background. He used--and abused-emotionally sick individuals: Peeping Toms, persons offended personally by my disclosures about the "Little Man" (book enjoined and banned as "labeling" of lifraudulent" medical devices), phallic-sadistic-homosexuals who expressed their admiration for me and their wish to be treated by me as they would in my medical office: by assault with a knife, by sadistic derision; slander, or-as a schizoid characterby actual attempt to murder me. These examples may suffice to disclose some of the pathology in the background; passive-homosexuals, submitting to the phallic character, the mastermind in conniving.

My authority to state such characteristics of the assailants will scarcely be challenged by those who know my "Character Analysis." Only a mechanistic neurologist who remained sitting on the spot where pathology was 60 years ago will challenge my contentions; the assailant has no right to challenge it after having slandered my good name all over the place.

Distinction between govermment official in official function and in the bio-psychiatric medical office is of crucial importance to do justice in any legal case.
(p. 47)

As long as my medical work on human nature had been confined to individual treatment of emotional disturbances in seclusion, I was only exposed to individual attack by those treated.

But, when I gave up individual work and turned of necessity to work on the prevention of mental and emotional disease on the social scene around 1930, in other words, when Social Pathology and Social Psychiatry began to develop, the field of operations changed for the patient, too. Now, not only the individual case, but anyone in public office suffering from emotional disease felt entitled to use his official position or authority against me and my work for personal (irrational) reasons.

The legal test problem before the Court is a problem of pathology rather than of Law: The attack upon orgonomy was mainly due to irrational fear of disclosure of deep, otherwise well-hidden motivations. This attack only brought to a peak what had been going on for decades.

Based entirely upon the rationalistic concepts of human nature of the 18th and 19th Centuries, today's jurisdiction is, in the procedural-legal sense, unaware of irrational motivation. Motivation of human action was a mystery of transcendental origin in the 18th Century, emerging from the Reformation with a remnant from the Middle Ages.

Motivation was thought of as rooted in mechanical reflexes and impulses of the brain in the 19th Century, newly developing mechanistic materialism. According to this view, the brain acted like a general, giving his orders to the executive nerves and organs below; a truly hierarchic, mechanistic view, in accordance with the period of the Prussian birth of militarism.
(p. 48)

In the 20th Century, the discovery of irrational and repressed motivation of human action replaced or superseded the mechanistic brain-nerves-organ view, still surviving today in mechanistic neurology and chemotherapy. The "mental drugs" of today are the last stragglers of an over-aged mechanistic concept of Life. The brain gives no orders to the organisms, since the living has functioned without brain development for ages, merely by way of autonomic nerves or even mere protoplasm, i.e., by organized Orgone Energy functions. The brain is no more than an advanced central station of better impulse coordination, that's all.

With the fall of mechanistic thinking in physiology and the advance of bio-energetic thinking, motivation of human activity entered the scene.

* "Character" became the term denoting so-called bio-energetic, "stmictural" motivation, readable in "emotional expression."

This now 30 year old knowledge is not on the statute books. Life, however, and the science of life have advanced. The developments in the forms of human. love life of the last 25 years have certainly demonstrated the deep bio-energetic changes in human behavior, of this; many judges have taken practical, personal and professional notice; but human behavior and its bioenergetic motivation is not in judicial-procedural awareness; as it were. The results of this gap are insolvable legal problems, such as "Juvenile Delinquency." Irrationally based, little understood and therefore legally not manageable, procedures as those which characterized the attack upon Orgonomy by emotionally disturbed individuals in commerce and politics, are the results of the characterological gap in legal application of Irrational Motivation.

Without careful study and integration of irrational motivation in legal procedure, nothing can be expected for due process in jurisdiction, in keeping with the advances in human development in this century. Injustice, due to lack of characterological knowledge concerning human irrational nature, must inévitably result. Unprotected, not understood and exposed to slander, irrational hatred of life, fear of bodily sensations, etc., Life is at present severely handicapped in maintaining itself. Still it is the only basic issue that counts, on which all the rest, including jurisprudence, depends.

If the irrational motivation of human activity were included. in legal thinking, procedures and statutes, such problems would be much more easily accessible and solvable. The racial problem is bound up and locked in the irrational (Hitlerian) apprehension of the genital embrace between negro and white; this is the emotional, irrational motive in the racial conflict. Nature tends to merger of races in every respect; what aims at suppression of primal nature tends to keep segregation and racial hatred going.

There can be little doubt that such catastrophic entanglements of social administration as, for example, in the Clinton; Tennessee, racial segregation case, subterraneous pranksters were active to disorganize and prevent orderly, gradual integration of the races in America.

A careful study of the realm of social pathology refeals the fact that there exists no law in the U.S.A. which would directly protect factual truth against underhanded lie and attack motivatę by irrational interests. Truth is at present at the mercy of chance. It depends entirely on whether a law officer is personally honest or dishonest, emotionally rational or irrational, subjectively inclined toward or against factual functions. It is most difficult to operate as a pioneer in new fields of human endeavor, if any emotionally sick individual anywhere on the social scene can-unhampered-destroy work or knowledge he dislikes, and if truth is in no position to defend itself against underhanded attack. It is obvious that the future of the UnS.A. and the world at large depends on the rational upbringing of the newborns in each generation which will suable them to make rational decisions as grown-ups. (See Wilhelm Reich: Children of the Future, OEB;* October, 1951.) There do not exist any laws as yet to protect newborns against harm inflicted upon them by emotionally sick mothers and other sick individuals. However, there are many old laws rendered obsolete long ago by progress in the understanding of the biology of man, which threaten progressive educators with extinction if they transgress technically these old laws. These facts, together with the operation on the social scene of emotionally sick individuals, block progress and the search for better ways in medicine and education. Although laws which are serving the welfare of people at large can never accomplish factual changes, life sffirmative laws can protect those who strive practically for betterment of the fate of humanity. Therefore, two laws, one to protect Life in Newborns, and a second: to protect Truth against underhanded attacks (beyond the scope of libel laws which are not suited for this purpose), should be studied and formulated by legislatures, institutions of learning and foundations whose work is primarily devoted to securing human welfare and happiness.
*Orgone Energy Bulletin.
(p. 51)

To illustrate: Truthful and thorough investigation of natural love life in children and adolescents, one of the most crucial tasks in present day mental hygiene, is held up and rendered helpless by the single fact that any bio-pathic individual who himself has been emotionally warped in childhood or adolescence through frustration of his needs for love, is in a position to put in a complaint to an Attomey General's Office to the effect that. those who investigate the subject of love life in childhood and adolescence, and make certain suggestions as to its solution, are committing a crime, the crime of "seduction of minors." If the attoraey happens to agree emotionally with the complainant, the investigation of fact is completely at the mercy of chance. There exists, according to rich experience in actual situations, no provision on the statute books to prosecute the biopathic individual on the basis that his motivation is not truth-seeking, or helping children or adolescents, but only hate of such scientific procedures. The motivation of an accusation should always be taken into consideration, just as the motive for a murder is taken into. consideratiou.

This example must suffice to illustrate the situation. The Archives of the Orgone Institute contain enough factual evidence to prove that the situation is bad indeed where pioneering efforts are burdened with the rather hopeless struggle with such:irrationalism in addition to the factual difficulties entailed in the pioneering job.
(This is the text of a proposal made to the Congress of the U.S.A. in November, 1952 by The Wilhelm Reich Foundation.)

THE LOGICAL ERRORin the Procedure before the Court

In times of stress and distress such as ours, it is appropriate to look occasionally backward in time while searching forward into the unknown. *The principles of jurisprudence developed from certain common laws of decent, life-positive conduct. The same principle which emerged from common laws of decent conduct also gave birth to certain abstractions of human experience. A certain "natural philosophy" always precedes and underlies. advances in natural science. Critical religious thoughts precede religious developments: The Christian religious philosophy grew out of the principles of Judaism through criticism of rigidities in the Jéwish common laws which had stifled the movement forward of society as a whole.

By the same token, certain novel trends of pure thinking usually precede and underlie social developments. Buddha's and Confucius' philosophy underlay life in Asiatic countries. Western philosophies in general derive their principles from Locke, Hume, and others in the 18th Century and from "materialistic," "mechanistic" approaches of the philosophers, beginning with Buechner and leading up to Karl Marx in the 19,th Century and the Russian Revolution, 1917. (An abused mechanistic materialism led to the recent mass murder in Hungary (1956).) German idealistic philosophy led to Hegel and the absolute Kaiser-State-Idea: "This.State Idea plunged the world into the first world war.

It is, most regrettably, unknown that Karl Marx was the first to dissolve a communist organization, the "Kommunisten Bund" in Germany in 1847. Already then a rampant Little Man philosophy of power drunkenness, combined with laok of will to learn, had appeared on the scene, foreshadowing, as it'were, the mass murders of the Stalinite-Hitler type one hundred years later.

It has become obvious by now, in the second half of the 20th Century, that all these systems; true and forward driving as they were at their time, have failed to guide our generation along in the present chaos. With the masses of the Eurasian and African continent reaching out without technical or emotional preparedness for the fruits of an advanced technology, most systems of thought failed practically. Until then it was always someone "above" or "in favor of" or "against" the masses of living human beings who did the caring for, suppressing, or feeding or providing "for" people.

For the first time in the history of mankind, partially due to the great technological advances, the masses THENSELVES aspire in this 20th Century to rule their own lives.

Having been deeply immersed in misery over the ages, a "period of written' history of some 10 millennia," they want freedom; but they do not know what freedom really is like, how difficult, responsible, exacting at times to hold, (p. 54) to preserve and to develop. They learned to die for freedom or liberties or abstract ideas. Now they die en masse in their own confusions. The leaders of the confusion are organized psychonathic individuale in govermont ("Higs"). \% who abuse to their own pathological ends the confusion of the past and present in the human multitudes: FASCISM in all its color in political parlance; Organized Emotional Plague in parlance of Bio-Psychiatry.

Now, this over-aged kind of thinking is beginning to go under. The masses are leaderless, without guiding direction, as it were.

WHERE IS THE NEW KIND OF THINKING THAT, EMERGING FROM THE CONFLICIS OF

- THE PAST, IS BECOMING THE BEACON INTO THE FUTURE?

If we take the present legal conflict as an example of confusion and entanglement instigated by Higs, we may not find the beacon, perhaps, but we may succeed in obtaining some first orientation. Our first steps will be highly theoretical in thinking, but very practical in real life as applied to the test case before the Supreme Court:

The 18th Century thinkers, the founding fathers of the American Law System, devised an abstract system of logical thought which was factless, formal to the extreme, still alive in England, inescapable in its conclusions, according to the following very much simplified form:

PREMISE ONE: TWO X EQUAL ONE Y
PREMISE TWO: ONE Z EOUALS ONE Y
CONCLUSION: TWO X EXUAL ONE Z
This abstract logical thinking underlies most present-day abstract mathematical logic. The conclusions formed
*HoodIums In Government
(p. 55)
in this lawful manner are "necessary," i.e., Inescapable conclusions. They are considered fool-proof, inevitable. They underlie.our present legal thinking in the western world. They ran into much trouble and conflict with the realities of living social life with the advent of the international labor movement which took hold, in Europe at least, of the less rigid, more "practical" materialistic philosophy, deriving from, Buechner and developed * toward Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels (1848-1914).

According to the above logic, if two $X$ equal one $Z$, then it follows that one $X$ equals $\frac{1}{2} Z$; this is logically perfectly true.

Let us, however, test this truth in living reality. Let us replace the abstract symbols, $X, Y$ and $Z$, by living things. Jet us put it thus:

| PREMISE ONE: | TWO HORSES ARE EQUAL TO |
| :---: | :---: |
|  | FUİİING ONE LOADED CARRIAGE |
| PREMISE TWO: | ONE OX IS EQUAL TO PULLITNG ONE LOADED CARRTAGE |
| CONCLUSION: | TWO HORSES EQUAL ONE OX (in puliting one loaded carriage) |

This conclusion is logically and practically perfectly correct. There will be no conflict in that respect between an abstract logician and the practical driver of the specific carriage, i.e., the functional logician.

However, living life has certain specific qualities, called in ORGONOMY "FUNCTIONAL," which distinguish life from all other (moohanicel) existencer and set it apart in natural science, as it were. This can easily be shown by pursuing the above logical conclusion further as wie did with the abstract symbols, X, $X$ and $Z$.
(p. 56)

ONE X EQUALS ONE-HALL Z

is a correct statement in fact as well as in formal logic.
IF it is true; as it truly is, that two horses are equal to one ox in pulling a loaded carriage, then it must also be true that:

ONE HORSE TS EQUAL TO ONE-HALF OX IN FULLING A LOADED CARRIAGE
This, however, is not so under any circumstances. One-half ox cannot pull anything whatever; it is dead.

At this point, the abstract, formal, factless procedure of reaching conclusions established by our 18th Century philosophers breaks down completely, becomes useless.unless it takes into account the practical application of its abstractions and logical procedures in each single concrete living case, each time anew. What is called "conclusion" in abstract logic is the same as what we called "due process of law" or "legal procedure" in jurisdiction. These procedures are designed, as are the proceduces of conclusion in logic, to arrive at the factual truth; to secure "due process"; to avoid error or judicial injustice.

However, it became quite obvious from our demonstration, that the abstract, formalistic, factless, legalistic procedure must lead to illogic, untruth and consequently to gross injustice if it omits the factual, concrete events in real living life. "One-half ox does NOT EQUAL one whole horse in pulling a loaded carriage." ${ }^{*}$ It is dead as a doornail. The abstract formal deduction has its limitations and becomes false when it omits concrete living facts; Let us now apply this truth to the case, Wilhelm Reich versus the U.S. A., in the formal abstractlegal version, or WILHELM REICH VERSUS THE HIG, in the factual, concrete meaning of the actual case before the court. It is so very obvious: the FDA is NOT "rhe" U.S. Government. And may our good fate protect us from such identity.

The logical breakdown here looks like this:

| PREMISE ONE: | DISOBEYAL OF COURT ORDERS |
| :---: | :--- |
| PREMISE TWO: | IS A CRIMINAL OFFENSE. |
| DISOBEYAL OF COURT ORDERS |  |
| WAS DONE BY WILHELM REICH. |  |
| CONCLUSION: | WILHELM REICH HA: CCNMIT- |
|  | TED A CRIMINAL OPSENSE. |

Since criminal offenses are subjected to punishment, WR has to be punished; this according to abstract, formal, legal, logical procedure.

Still, everyone involved in these procedures knew well that Wilhelm Reich had committed no crime, that he was no criminal, that jailing him would be an extreme injustice, that the case should be dismissed. The true "criminals" were those who had instigated the assault upon the discovery of the life inergy and had conspired to kill it and its discoverex-by frondulent presentation to the Court. And, finally, WR had done a great service to the nation, to civil rights and principles of science by his resistance to organized evil.

The law procedure was obviously entangled in confusion. . It was stuck in abstract, factless, unconcrete, mechanistic, legalistic thinking.
(p. 58)

All seemed logical and just by way of abstract formal procedure. All was so inescapably unjust in the face of the living, factual reality. Wilhelm Reich is just as little a criminal as half an ox can pull a carriage. And whoever, is no criminal, whoever is innocent, has done his duty as a citizen in defying unlawful orders, should not be jailed. This is the functional conclusion from living life.

Where was the limitation of the truthfulness of abstract logics in the case: WILHELM REICH versus THE HIG?

The limitation lay in the omission of the FACTUAL background and true factual nature of the legal case; in the mechanistic, illogical, rigid separation of the facts of the civil complaint 1056, from the motives of the Discoverer not to appear in court; in the elimination of the factual motivating substance of the legal conflict at the trial by the lower court. The logical error rested fully on the failure to apply the legal abstraction in the concrete reality of living facts and indivisible processes; shortly, the legal procedure failed to be functional-factual in addition to being procedural.
"If procedure is so designed that it kills truth and fact, then procedure, and not factual truth, must yield to revision:
"If' law is practiced in such a manner that quite obviously to everyone, the guilty one goes free and the innocent and decent one faces imprisonment, then the law practice must be changed as quickly and as radically as possible.
"These are the ABC's of justice, obvious a priori."..
(Appeal Brief for WR, 5160, p. 49)
Can it be that this EUNCTIONAL IOGIC is the searched-for new kind of (p.59) thinking that may guide us along in the present chaos? We shall have to apply functional logic to actual social reality in order to tell. And thus we have reached the very substance of our test case:

Is a political mass murderer not a murderer to be routed from human society forever only because he is formally, "legally""posing" as a "statesman"?

Is a "diplomat," acting as a spy, not a traitor only because he is formally a "diplomat"?

Is a man a judge, because he wears a black robe? or because he knows right from wrong?

The chain of such factual arguments is endless. . Does anyone really expect to guide the world to better conditions of living if touching hot potatoes of truth is further eschewed? .

Does not, seen at close range, good breeding, "Bostonian" reluctance to "hurt feelings," or plain "pass-the-buck" philosophy contribute its share to commitments of mass murder? It certainly does.

It is true: Orders must be obeyed. But, we must add and never forget: Orders must themselves be lawful. Never forget this, lest we go down in history as traitors to mankind: Corrupt thinking has nearly succeeded in destroying our civil liberties; our natural rights; our hopes; the fruits of our toil; the cleanliness of our lives; the right to be bona fide wrong; the mercy toward bona fide error; trust among friends, between parents and childron or lovers.

Are orders issued on principles of untruth, based on opinions only, not on facts, or distortion of facts according to expediency; falsification of history in the service of principled lie; eradication of integrity as a basic foundation of social law - are these "Jaws" LAWFUL laws? It is on the principle of unprincipled, arbitrary, unlawful orders that all tyranny rests.
(p. 60)

MY CONCLUSION IN THE APPEAL BRTEF
TO THE APPELLATE COURT
"We must set the principles of truthful conduct against the continued practices of pettifogging deceit in the service of evil and treason.
"We must reiterate the basic principles of decent conduct against deliberate misrepresentation and outright fraud perpetrated on Courts of Justice.
"We must adhere to and never let go of the principle which declares all judgments and orders null and void which were obtained by fraudulent misrepresentation of facts. (See Excerpts of Hearing, November 4, 1955, R. 504-527 and Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 85-104, 336, 'Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig. 1)
"The case should be dismissed and reopened again to procedures which will guarantee the absence of such deceit."

ORDERS HAVE TO BE LAWFUL ORDERS, BASED ON TRUTH AND NOT LIE, ON FACT AND NOT OPINION.
Orders have to be lawful to be obeyed, lest the judicial doors be widely open to intrusion of social evil.

This principle is now put to the test of jurisdictional decision within the framework of the American Constitution before the Supreme Court of the U.S.A.

(p. 61)  RELIEF SOUGHT

The Writ of Certiorari should be granted.
The decision of the Court of Appeals should be reversed.
Adequate judicial steps in legislation should be taken to prevent such dangerous entanglement of decent hard-working citizens by irrational administrative practices and unlawful orders.

Jan. 10, 1957

WOODBURY, Circuit Judge. The United States, on February 10, 1954, filed a complaint under $\$ 302(a)$ of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 52 Stat. 1043, 21 U.S.C $\$ 332(\mathrm{a})$, in the United States District Court for the District of Maine asking for an injunction restraining the Wilhelm Reich Foundation; a Kaine corporation, and Wilhelm Reich and Ilse 0llendorff, individuals residing in Rangeley, Maine, from violating $\S 301(\mathrm{a})$ and ( k ) of the above Act by either introducing, or causing the introduction into interstate commerce, or, while being held for sale after shipment in interstate commerce doing anything resulting in the misbranding of, certain devices known as "orgone energy accumulators, ${ }^{* *}$ which it was alleged were adulterated within the meaning of $\$ 501$ (c) of the Act and misbranded within the meaning of $\$ 502(a)$ thereof. Service of the complaint and summons was duly made on the defendants on the same day that the complaint was filed.

* In their commonest form these are box-like structures in which the patient sits for treatment. It is asserted by the Government that these devices were being falsely held out to the public at large by the defendants as at least beneficial in the treatment of a great number of human ills ranging from cancer to the common cold.
(p. 2a)

The defendants entered no appearances and filed no answers. Indeed, in a letter to the judge of the court below dated February 25, 1954, the defendant, Dr . Wilhelm Reich, indicated unmistakably that he, at least, had no intention of filing either an appearance or an answer. Dr. Reich wrote to the court in part:
"My factual iposition in the case as well as the world of science of today does not permit me to enter the case against the Food and Drug Administration, since such action would, in my mind, imply admission of the authority of this special branch of the govemment to pass judgment on primordial, pre-atomic, cosmic orgone energy."
On the day after this letter was written requests for admissions were propounded by the United States and served on each of the defendants. These requests were ignored, and on March 19, 1954, upon request of the United States, the default of each defendant was entered by the clerk of the court below. On the same day the United States moved for default judgment, its motion was granted, and the court immediately entered a decree of injunction as prayed for in the complaint. By the terms of this injunction the named defendents, and "each and all of their officers, agents, servants, employees, $* * *$ and all persons in active concert or participation with them or any of them" were "perpetually enjoined and restrained" from indulging in the practices set out in detail in the complaint. Furthermore all orgone energy accumulators out on a rental basis or otherwise owned or controlled by the defendants were ordered recalled to the defendants ${ }^{\text {t }}$ place of business in Rangeley, Maine, and there either destroyed or dismantled for salvage under the supervision of employees of the Food and Drug Administration, and in addition all printed labels and order blanks for orgone energy accumulators, and certain listed descriptive literature pertaining thereto, were órdered destroyed.

Certified copies of the decree of injunction were served on the named defendants on March 22, 2954, and at the same time copies were either served or mailed to several other persons in the Rangeley area who were either employees of or contractors for the defendants in the manufacture and distribution of the devices. At the same time copies of the decree were also mailed to a number of duly licensed physicians in the New York, New Jersey, and Philadelphia area, most of whom specialized in psychiatry, who were known to have used orgone energy accumulators in the treatment of their patients. Included in this group was the appellant herein, Dr. Michael Silvert.

On March 30, 1954, the defendant Ilse Ollendorff as clerk of the corporate defendant sent a telegram to the United States Attorney for the District of Maine stating: "rhe Wilhelm Reich Foundation is far advanced in preparing full compliance with injunction of March 19, 1954 Stop An exact account of measures taken and still in progress will be sent to your office for your information." .
No further account of measures taken to comply with the injunction was ever sent to the District Attorney; nor does it appear that in fact any such measures ever were undertaken.

Next, on May 5, 1954, the doctors in the New York-Philadelphia area referred to above, including as we have (p. 4a) been obeyed. On the contrary, they admitted at the trial that no attempt had been made to comply with its terms. Their contention is that the court below had no jurisdiction to issue the injunction. The individual appellants say that they, both individually and acting through the corporate defendant, of which Dr. Reich was the moving and guiding spirit, were engaged in basic scientific research which no agency of the Government had jurisdiction to interfere with or control, and that furthermore and more specifically, the court below had no jurisdiction to issue the injunction for the reason that it had been procured by fraud and deception practiced upon the court by officers and agents of the Food and Drug Administration. In addition Dr. Silvert contends that he is not bound by the injunction because he was not a defendant in the original suit in which it was issued and had not been served with process therein. None of these contentions have any mexit.
We turn first to Dr. Silvert's separate contention. It has been settled law for a long time that one who knowingly aids, abets, assists; or acts in active concert with, a person who has been enjoined in violating an injunction subjects himself to civil as well as criminal proceedings for contempt even though he was not named or served with process in the suit in which the injunction was issued or even served with a copy of the injunction. In. Re Lennon, 166 U.S. 548, 554 (1897); Alemite Mfg. Corp. V. Stáff, 42 F. $2 d 832$ (C.A. 2, 1930) and cases cited. See also Rule 65(d) F.R. Civi P. The question then is whether Dr. Silvert had actual knowledge of the injunction of March 19, 1954, issued against the Wilhelm Reich Foundation; and Dr.
(p. 6a)

Wilhelm Reich and Ilse Ollendorff personally. There can be no doubt that he did. He was mailed a copy of that injunction when it was issued, he admitted at the trial that he read the injunction when he received it, and moreover he was one of those who moved to intervene in the suit in which it was issued. Thus it is abundantly clear that he knew of its existence and knew its terms.

The appellants ' first jurisdictional contention does not deserve much comment or discussion. Its refutation is obvious from its mere statement. Of course the United States Government has power to forbid and power to take appropriate steps to prevent the transportation in interstate commerce of devices of alleged therapeutic value if they are adulterated or misbranded. The appellants' second jurisdictional contention deserves only slightly more extended consideration. There can be no doubt whatever that Congress in §302(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, gave the District Court jurisdiction over the subject matter of the original suit. Nor can there be any doubt that the District Court obtained personal jurisdiction over the defendants in that suit by legal service of process upon them in Maine: This jurisdiction, once obtained, certainly would not be terminated by any fraud practiced upon the court by the successful litigant. On the contrary, the court's jurisdiction would necessarily have to continue in order to permit the court to entertain an application by the victims of a successful litigant's fraud to vacate the injunction through the remedies and procedures for relief outlined in detail in Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. V. Hartford-Empire Co.., 322 U.S. 238 (1944).

And the remedies and procedures available to a defrauded litigant certainly do not include refusal to obey an injunction. It is too well settled to require a lengthy citation of cases that an injunction, temporary or permanent, must be obeyed as long as it is in force and effect: Howat v. Kansas, 258 U.S. 181 (1922); United States v. United Mine Workers of. America, 330 U.S: 258; 289, et seq. (1947) and cases cited. Nor is this rule a mere technical quirk of procedure, for as the Supreme Court pointed. cut in Gompers $v$. Bucks Stove & Range Co., 221 U.S. 418, 450 (1911):
"If a party can make himself a judge of the validity of orders which have been issued, and by his own act of disobedience set them aside, then are the courts impatent, and what the Constitution now fittingly calls the 'judicial power of the United States' would be a mere mockery."
See also the remarks made by Mr. Justice Frankfurter at the bottom of page 311 and the top of page 312 of his concurring opinion in the United Mine Workers case, supra.

It follows that the court below did not err in refusing to permit the defendants at their trial for contempt to show in their defense that officers and agents of the Food and Drig Administration had procured the injunction of March 19; 1954, by fraud perpetrated upon the court.

Although the court's refusal to permit the defendants to show fraud in procurifig the injunction is the only error asserted by them to have occurred at their trial, we have nevertheless, because the defendants were not represented by counsel in the court below and only partially on appeal, examined the record with particular care. We find ample evidence that Dr. Reich and the Wilhelm Reich Foundation deliberately refused to obey the injunction and that Dr. Silvert aided and abetted them in flouting it. Nor do we find any erroneous rulings of law. Indeed, it is evident from the record that throughout the trial the presiding judge solicitously protected the appellants' rights and gave them full opportunity to present every defense available to them under the law.

Judgment will be entered affirming the judgments of the District Court.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For The First Circuit

JUDGMENT
December ll, 1956
This cause came on to be heard on the record on appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Maine, and was argued by Wilhelm Reich, pro se, and Michael Silvert, pro se, and by counsel for The Wilhelm Reich Foundation, appellant, and for appellee.

Upon consideration whereof, It is now here ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows: The judgments of the District Court are affirmed.

By the Court:
/s/ ROGER A: STITNCHFIELD
Clerk.
(cc. Messrs. Haydon and Maguire, and Messrs. Reịch and Silvert.)

EXCERPIS FROM THE CONSTITUTION

Article III, Section 2:
"l. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and - treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, or subjects.
"2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all other cases before mentioned the supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Cohgress shall make.
"3. The trial of all crimes; except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when hot committed within any state the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed."

Article IIǏ, Section 3: (p. 1la)

"1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.
"2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted."

> BACKGROND AND SCIENNIFIC DEVELOPMENT OF WILHELM REICH
> (From the Orgone Energy Bulletin, Vol. V, Nos, 3-4, $\frac{1953 \text {, burned on Court order August, 1956:) }}{}$

Wilhelm Reich's basic scientific discoveries include the following: Orgasm theory and technique of Character-Analysis (1923-34); Respiratory block and muscular armor (1928-34); Sex-economic self-regulation of primary natural drives in their distinction from secondary, perverted drives (1928-. 34); The role of irrationalism and human sex-economy in the origin of dictatorship of all political denominations (1930-34); The orgasm reflex (1934); The bio-electrical nature of sexuality and anxiety (1935-36); Orgone energy vesicles, BIONS, (1936-39); Origin of the cancer cell from bionously disintegrated animal tissue, and the organization of protozoa from bionously disintegrated moss and grass (1936-39); T-bacilli in sarcoma (1937); Discovery of the bio-energy (Orgone Energy) in SAPA Bions (1939), in the atmosphere (1940); Invention of the Orgone Energy Accumulator (1940); and the Orgone Energy Field Meter (1944); Experimental Orgone Therapy of the Cancer Biopathy (1940-45) ; Experimental investigation of primary biogenesis (Experiment XX, 1945);
(p. 12a)

Method of Orgonomic Functionalism (1945); Emotional Plague of man as a disease of the bionenergetic equilibrium (1947); Orgonometric equations (1949-50); Hypothesis of cosmic superimposition of two orgone energy streams at the basis of hurricanes and galaxy formation'(1951); Antinuclear radiation effects of Orgone Energy (The Oranur Experiment, First Report, 1947-51).

Wilhelm Reich was born on March 24, 1897, in Imperial Austria, as the son of a well-to-do farmer. His mother language wais German. Until 1938, Wilhelm Reich (hereafter, WR) was an Austrian (Viennese citizen). He had no religious education. He adheres to no religious creed and to no political party.
WR's early education (1903-07) was/a private student. He passed his examinations at an Austro-German public school: He attended a German high school between 1907 and 1915, preparing for natural sciences, and graduated in 1915 with "Stimmeneinheliligkeit". His best subjects were German, Latin and Natural Science.

WR's interest in biology and natural sdience was created early by the Iife on the farm, close to agriculture, cattiebreeding, etc:, in which he took part every sumer and during the harvesti. Between his 8th and 12th years, he had his own collection añ breeding laboratory of butterflies, insects, plants, etc., under the guidance of a private teacher. The natural life functions, including the sexual function, were familiar to him as far back as he can remember. That may well have determined his later strong. inclination, as a bio-psychiatrist, toward the biological foundation of the emotional life of man, and also his bio-physical discoveries in the fields of Medicine and Biology, as well as Education.

After the death of his father, in 1914, WR, at the age of 17, directed the farm work quite on his own, without interrupting his studies, until the war disaster put an end to this work and destroyed all property in 1915. He was in the Austrian Army from ' 1915 to 1918, a lieutenant from 1916 to 1918.

WR entered the Medical School of the University of Vienna in 1918, earning his living and paying his way through school by tutoring fellow students in premedical subjects. War veterans were permitted to complete the 6-year course in 4 years. WR passed the 18 Rigorosa in 18 medical subjects except one easily, and in all the premedical subjects received "excellent" ("ausgèzeichnet"). He was graduated and obtained the M.D. degree in July, 1922, from the University of Vienna.

During his last year of medical school, WR took postgraduate work in Intermal Medicine at the University Clinics of Ortner and Chvostek at University Hospital, Vienna. He continued his postgraduate education in Neuro-Psychiatry for 2 years (1922-24) at the Neurological and Psychiatric University Clinic under Professor Wagner-Jauregg, and worked one year in the disturbed wards under Paul Schilder. His postgraduate study"also included attendance at polyclinical work in hypnosis and suggestive therapy at the same University Clinic and special courses and lectures in biology at the Univerisity of Vienna. Also, while still in medical school, in October 1920, WR attained membership in the Vienna Psychoenalytic Society, then under Professor Sigmund Freud.

WR began psychoanalytic and psychiatric private practice in 1922. By 1933, the demands of work in orgone energy research required the termination of private practice.

WR was First Clinical Assistant at Freud's Psychoanalytic Polyclinic in Vienna (under the directorship of Dr, Edward Hitschnann) from its foundation in 1922 until 1928; Vice-Director of the Polyclinic, 1928-1930, and Director. of the Seminar for Psychoanalytic Therapy at the same institution, 1924-1930. As a member of the faculty of the Fsychoanalytic Institute in Vienna; 19241930, WR gave lectures on clinical subjects and biopsychiatric theory. He did research in the social causation of the neurosis at the Polyclinic from 1924, and at mental hygiene consultation centers in various districts in Vienna (Sozialistische Gesellschaft fuer Sexualberatung und Sexualforschung), centers which he founded and led from 1928 through 1930. He continued his mental hygiene work in Berlin; 1930-33, as lecturer at the Psychoanalytic Clinic and at the Worker's College, and as head physician in mental hygiene centers of various cultural organizations in Berlin :and other German cities.

Between 1934-39, WR lectured and did research in orgone biophysics at the Psychological Institute of the University of 0slo, Norway.

The Orgone Energy Laboratory was transferred by WR to Forest Hills, New York, WR coming to the U.S.A on a non-quota Professor visa, in August, 1939. He was Associate Professor of Medical Psychology at the New School for Social Research; New York; 1939-41, giving lectures on orgone biophysics. (p. 15a)

The Orgone Institute was founded by WR in 1942 in New York, and in the same year 280 acres of land were acquired in Maine and called "Orgonon", the future home of Orgonomy, the Science of the Life Energy. The Wilhelm Reich Foundation was founded in Maine, 1949, by students and friends, to preserve the Archives of WR and to secure the future of WR's discovery of the Cosmic Orgone Energy.

GLOSSARY

A new'scientific discipline must employ new terms if old ones are 'inapplicable. Orgonomy introduced the following terms:

ANORGONIA. The condition of diminished or lacking orgonity (q.v.).
ARMOR. See character armor, muscular armor.
BIONS. Energy vesicieo representing transitional stagés between nonliving and living substance. They constantly form in nature by a process of disintegration of inorganic and organic matter, which process it has been possible to reproduce experimentally. They are charged with orgone energy ( $q . v$. ), i.e., Life Energy and may develop into protozoa añ bacteria.

CHARACTER. An individual's typical structure, his stereotype manner of acting and reacting. The orgonomic concept of character is functional and biological, and not astatic, psychological or moralistic concept.
(p. 16a)

CHARACIER-ANALYSIS. Originaily a modification of the customary psychoanalytic technique of symptom analysis, by the inclusion of the character and character resistance into the therapeutic process. However, the discovery of the muscular armor necessitated the development of a new technique, namely vegetotherapy. The later discovery of organismic orgone energy ("bioenergy") and the concentration of atmospheric orgone epergy with an.
orgone energy accumulator necessitated the further development of characteranalytic vegetotherapy into an inclusive, biophysical orgone therapy. (See physical and psychiatric orgone therapy.)
'CHARACTER ARMOR. The sum total of typical character attitudes,' which an individual develops as a blocking against his emotional excitations, reaviting In rigidity of the "body, iack of emotionsl cootact, "deadness." Functionally identical with the muscular armor. (q.v.)

CHARACIER, GENITAL. The un-neurotic character structure, which does not suffer from sexual stasis and, therefore, is capabie of natural self-regulation on the basis of orgastic potency.

CHARACTER, NEURONICs The character which, due to chronic bioenergetic ${ }_{2}$ stasis operates according to the principle of compilisve moral regulation.
(p. 17a)

EMOTIONAL PLAGUE. The neurotic character in destructive action on the social scene.

MUSCULAR ARMOR. The sum total of the muscular attitudes (chronic. muscular spasms) which an individual develops as a block against the breakthrough of emotions and orgen sensations, in particular anxiety, rage, and sexual excitation.

ORGASM. The unitary involuntary convulsion of the total organism at the acme of the genital embrace. This reflex, because of its involuntary character and the prevailing orgasm anxiety, is blocked in most humans of civilizations which suppress infantile and adolescent genitality.

ORGASTIC IMPOTENCE. The absence of orgastic potency. It is the most important characteristic of the average human of today; and-by daming up biological (orgone) energy in the organism-provides the source of energy for all kinds of biopathic symptoms and social irrationalism.

ORGASTIC POTENCY. Essentially, the capacity for complete surrender to the involuntary convulsion of the organism and complete discharge of the excitation at the acme of the genital- embrace. It is always lacking in neurotic individuals. It presupposes the presence or establishment of the genital character, i.e., absence of a pathological character armor and muscular armor. Orgastic potency is usually not distinguished from erective and ejaculative potency, both of which are only prerequisites of orgastic potency.
(p, 18a)

ORGONE ENERGY. Primordial Cosmic Energy; universally present and demonstrable visually, thermically; electroscopically and by means of GeigerMueller counters. In the living organisme' Bio-energy, Life Energy. Discovered by Wilhelm Reich between 1936 and 1940.

ORANUR denotes orgone energy in a state of excitation induced by nuclear energy. (DOR denotes Deadly OR energy.)

ORGONE THERAPY
Physical Orgone Therapy: Application of physical orgone energy concentrated in an orgone energy accumulator to increase the natural bio-energetic resistance of the organism against disease.
Psychiatric Orgone Therapy: Mobilization of the orgone energy in the organism, i.e., the liberation of biophysical emotions from muscular and character armorings with the goal of establishing, if possible, orgastic potency.

ORGONITY. The condition of containing orgone énergy; the quantity of orgone energy contained.

ORGONOMETRY. Quantitative orgonomic research.
ORGONOMIC ("ENERGETIC") FUNCTIONALISM. The functional thought technique which guides clinical and experimental orgone research. The guiding principle is that of the identity of variations in their common functioning principle (CFP).

This thought technique grew in the course of the study of human character formation and led to the discovery of the functional organismic and cosmic orgone energy, thereby proving itself to be the correct mirroring of both living and non-livịg basic natural processes.

ORGONOMY. The natural science of the cosmic orgone energy.
ORGONOTIC. Qualities concerming the orgonity of a system or a condition.
SEX-ECONOMY. The body of knowledge within Orgonomy which deals with the economy of the biological (orgone) energy in the organism, with its energy household.

STASIS. The damming-up of Life Energy in the organism, thus the source of energy for biopathy and irrationalism.

STASIS ANXIETY. The anxiety caused by the stasis of sexual energy in the center of the organism when its peripheral orgastic discharge is inhibited.

STASIS NEUROSIS. All somatic disturbances which are the immediate* result of the stasis of sexual energy, with stasis anxiety at its core.

WORK DEMOCRACY. The functioning of the natural and intrinsically rational work relationships between human beings. The concept of work democracy represents the established reality (not the ideology) of these relationships which, though usually distorted because of prevailing armoring and irrational political ideologies, are nevertheloss at the basis of all social achievement.
(p. 20a)

PEIER MILLS, a witness, called by and on bohalf of the defondants, first being duly sworn, was asamined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Dr. Reich:

Dr. Reich: Here is the first Exhibit, Mr. Mills. This was taken from the records about your activities in connection with what you did for us. Mr. Mills, what is this?

Mr. Mills:* This is a table of events from the records. What is your question, Doctor?

- The Court: I presume, Mr. Mills; that all he means is this: To the best of your knowledge, is this a fair representation of your activities.

Dr. Reich: This is an abstract of our association?
Mr. Mills: I don't know.
Dr. Reich: Would you please inspect it?
Mr. Mills: I an presented, Your Honor, with an eight-page list of items and dates and I am in no position to verify or deny:

The Court: Do you have any reason to challenge any of it from your memory?
(p. 2la)

Mr. Mills: No, I have no reason to challenge it but I haven't any reason to confirm it either, Your Honor, as they are listed. I could state, generally, that I would try to be responsive to any questions that the examiner asks.

The Court: They have a right to show the transactions. If we have to go through the books and take item by item; and you use the charts and books, I think you should check that this noontime and let us see if it is a fair and accurate representation. He asked you if that is a fair representation of your activities in relation to the corporation.

Mr. Mills: Well, I am looking at the photograph, and it bears my signature, which I recognize as a statement, as a Notary Public, on August 11, 1947: I believe that was the first contact that I had with Dr. Reich. Dr. Reich called at my office to have a Notary take a statement and I notarized that statement and I affixed my name on it.

Dr. Reich: There are dozens of them?
Mr. Mills: There was one other occasion.
The court: I am going to ask you to hand that list to Mr. Mills and I am going to ask you during the recess to check, so far as you can, whether that is a fair representation of your activities.
(Recess 12:20-2:05)
MR. MILIS resumes the stand:
Dr. Reich: Mr. Mills, did you look through the material?
Mr. Mills: I did.
Dr. Reich: Is it authentic material in connection with your connection with Orgone Institute and the Wilhelm Reich Foundation?
(p, 22a)

Mr. Mills: I did not get the first few words?
Dr. Reich: Is this material legal material which you have handled in your function as a counsel for the Foundation, for the Orgone Institute, and for many of its employees and directors?

Mr. Mills: It is not.
The Court: Let me ask you this: Is that list a fair representation of activities in which you were engaged in relation to the corporation or some of its subsidiaries?

Mr. Mills: It is not, Your Honor.
Dr. Reich: Mr. Mills, have you been the counsel of the Corporation of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation? Did you incorporate the papers and sign all documents?

Mr. Mills: Part of your question I would say in the affirmative: I was at one time counsel for the Corporation, and I was the attorney at the time it was incorporated.

Dr. Reich: Did you act as counsel for the Corporation?
Mr. Mills: Yees.
Dr. Reich: That was in 1949 ?
Mr. Mills: I think 1950. or 1951.
Dr. Reich: The Wilhelm Reich Foundation was incorporated by you as a lawyer in 1949. Isn't that true?

Mr. Mills: I was the attorney at the time of the incorporation.
Dr. Reich: You partook in the meetings of the physicians who constituted the board of trustees of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation?

Mr. Mills: Some of them.

- Dr. Rejch: But you were our counsellor, our attorney? (p. 23a)

Mr. Mills: On some matters.
Dr. Reich: Yes, on basic matters, some of our legal matters, from $1949^{\circ}$ to 1952?

Mr. Mills: I believe that that is correct.
'Dr. Reich: That is about three years?
Mr. Mills: Yes.
Dr. Reich: The documents which pertain to this service, that you rendered, are in there?

Mr. Mills: I couldn't say all of them are in there, but certainly many of them are.

Dr. Reich: Would you permit that I submit this material as evidence?
The Court: The question is: Does he agree that this material, which. he identifies, substantially or partially, represents his transactions. Will you agree that that be put in evidence?

Mr. Mills: I would not agree to agree or disagree. I would not from my review of it.

Dr. Reich: My question was, do these documents pertain to your service as our counsel?

Mr. Kills: There is a great deal more in these documents that I have no knowledge of.

Dr. Reich: Would you agree to eliminate those which do not pertain to your service as counsel?

Mr. Mills: I would agree that many of these are. There are corporation papers here. There are many other things which certainly appear to be authentic.

Dr. Reich: For instance, one or two examples-one document there appears to be a notarization?

Mr. Mills: Yes.

Dr. Reich: Another notarization is a very important, crucial document pertaining to what we called Vacor Phenomenoni Do you remember that?

Mr. Mills: I dot,
Dr. Reích: You:do?
IKr. Mills: Yes:
Dr. Reich: The fact that I want to establish here is only one: You wer's for three years-ufor hore than three years-a good friend of ours and a colunselor?

Mr. Mills: That's correct. I was professionally, but not intimately.
Dr. Reich: There was some private contact?
Mr. Mills: Yes, a cup of coffee.
The Court: With cream and sugar in it?
Dr. Reich: That's right.
Dr. Reich: Now, Mr. Mills, the problem which is before us here, in this legal case-I think the Court will permit me, as a human being, to ask one central question which pertains to the Injunction since you are the counsel for the opponent.

Mr. Mills: Are you asking me a question or testifying?
Dr. Reich: I am leading up to my question. My question is now why you changed from our counsel to be the counsel for the opponents?

Dr. Reich: This-problem, Your Honor, I submit to you to be admitted in Court.

The Court: Well, what is your question?
Dr. Reich: My question is, under the circumstances, what reasons, or what facts induced fir. Mills after being our counsel for three years, and I (p.25a) prosarded him as a goad friend, to be our opponent's counsel, and the one to

The court: That is a fair question if there is anything.
Mr. Mills: The question is, what prompted me? - Dr. Reich: What made you change your mind?
. Mr. Mills: I have never changed my mind. I am not conscious of changing changing my.mind.

The Court: Wait a minute, The original question wäs what, prompted you to change sides.

Mr. Mills: I never changed sides. I first made my connections, I believe, with you on August 29, 1952. I never advised you on matters concerning the Pure Food and Drug Administration. I did not read the law with respect to the Pure Food and Drug Administration. I did not know it had any application in this business. You did not advise me.

Dr. Reich: In 1952 you stopped being our counsel, and then in 1954-I think it is 1953, because we have information that the complaint was here in court for a long time, and you were the attomey for the opponent ini 1952: Do you remember that in 1952 to put it correctly and legally, that you were present at a meeting with the Pure Food and Drug Administration * * *?

Mr. Mills: I do not.
The Court: Let him finish the question.
Dr. Reich: You don't know?
Mr. Mills: That's right.
Dr. Reich: You do not remember the meeting where the physicians were there in my study, in the Observatory?

Mr. Mills: The only recollection. I have with refexence to the Pupe Food and Drug Administration, in your connection, is one afternoon we were on the premises, you and I, and you said to me "spies-The Pure Food and Drug Administration * * *"
(p. 26a)

Dr. Reich: I do not remember that, but do not interrogate me. I will ask you questions. You will have plenty of time to interrogate me later. I am sorry, but that was out of step. Are you convinced that I am trying to get out the truth here?

Mr. Mills: I presume so.
Dr. Reich: Will you agree with me also that it is the job and the task and the obligation of everyone to get out the truth?

Mr. Mills: I certainly do.
Dr. Reich: You will certainly agree that the function of the District Attorney is not to prosecute by all means and to convict, but to find the truth? I will appreciate it if you will help to find the truth.

Mr. Mills: I certainly agree with you. I will try to help you.
The Court: You are getting argumentative. You have shown he was your counsel for three years. You can argue the rest of it when you argue your case, but I do not think you ought to pursue it any further.
(p. 27a)

THE FRAUD AND THE CONTEMPT PROCREDINGS*
(Legal Summary)
The information charging the petitioners with contempt was filed by their former attorney who is now the United States Attorney for the District of Maine (R. 348, et seq., and Appeal Brief for WR, pp. 7r-43r, Appendix to Brief). It was charged that Reich and the Foundation failed to comply with the injunction (R. 470, et seq.).

[^31](p. 28a)

Immediately, the Foundation and WR moved to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction (R. 463-464). Then, on October 10, 1955 motions were made and argued on behalf of all of the petitioners to dismiss the information and vacate the decree of injunction for suppression and falsification of evidence ( $\mathrm{R} .468,484$ ).

In order further to demonstrate the fraud and suppression which appellants prove permeated the entire case from its inception, on November 4, 1955, Wilhelm Reich argued his motion to show "illegal misrepresentation in Court of pertinent facts" (R. 500). The motion was denied on that day, despite the argument of Reich that he sought to proceed "with enumeration of the misrepresentations of pertinent facts" ( $R$ : 513). He was prevented from so. doing by the court. At that time none of the appellants were represented by counsel (R. 504 and Petitioners' Exs. 4 and 5, R. l104, 336).

Thereafter on Wovember 17, 1955, the appellant Reich sought. to inspect material subpoenaed from the Food & Drug Administration, including reports on actual experiments, but that motion was denied as well ( $R$. 530).

No testimony was permitted to be taken and no hearings were held on any of the motions, which were all denied.

Again, at the trial itself, the Court prevented the development of such evidence of fraud by the petitioners when it ruled at virtually the outset of the trial:
(p. 29a)
"I am not interested in anything that took place prior to the issuance of the injunction.". (R: 121)

The rulings of the Court below deprived the petitioners of the opportunity to show that the entire decree was the result of a fraudulent conspiracy, and that they were thus convicted without due process of law.

DO NOT DISTURB: The Emotional Plague in Education, by Jerome Eden This monograph expresses the rational anger of a Functional Educator who, for several years in both public & private schools, was "shot at" from ambush by pestilential people who were not motivated by a sincere desire to educate children, but who desired to crush any real work in that direction.
Mimeographed: $8 \frac{1}{2} \times 111$, with Cover...23pp, $\$ 1.00$
SUFFER THE CHILDREN: Fascism vs. Freedom in Education, by J. Eden A book for anyone interested in the development of happy, healthy, democratic children: based upon the author's teaching experiences in public and private schools, from the "Blackboard Jungle" of New York City to the "better" schools of suburban communities. It deals vividly and trenchantly with the prevailing sexual misery of children and adolescents which is at the roots of present-day juvenile delinquency. Hard cover, clothbound: 168pp., $$ 3.00$
OUR PLANET IS IN TROUBLE: The Eight of Winhelm Reich, M.D. for Life on Earth...Dr. Reich made crucial medical, sociological, and cosmic discoveries which threaten the existence of commercial interests now thriving on human misery and ignorance. The Red Facists, directed from Moscow, succeeded in stopping Dr . Reich's vital research. His books were burned and banned in August, 1956 in the USA, and Dr. Reich died in a federal penitentiary in 1957. This volume contains Public Court Documents: The Injunction banning Dr. Reich's books & research, his "Response", and his "Writ of Certiorari" to the U.S. Supreme Court. 60pp, Mimeographed... $$ 2.00$

MAXIMS ON ANMML MAGNETISM, by F.A. Mesmer, Clothbound, 78pp, $$ 3.00$
Translated by Jerome Eden, these books are the first English translations of Dr. Mesmer's original Principles and Procedures respectively. Dr. Mesmer's original work, as contained in these two books, demonstrates once again how the Emotional Plague kills by silence, defamation, or distortion, the vital findings of a pioneer scientist.

MWOEANDUE FOR THE DIRECTOR

> The following book review of "Science Versus Cries", by Henry Morton/ ${ }^{\text {robinson, }}$, was prepared in this unit:

Reviewing a historical background of man's dealing with criminals and what has been considered evidence in criminal cases, the author cites interesting cases which show the gradual world wide progress made in scientific crime detection. In a general discussion of crime is noted that "today there is no single source or volume from which the slightly apocalyptic vision of the new police science may be derived". Throughout the book, the author commends the Bureau under the Director's guidance, the material concerning the Bureau, its facilities, activities being handed in an efficacious manner.

RECORDED & INDEXED
Though the subject matter of the text covered, scientifically scrutinised, may be found faulty and the author over zealous upon occasion, the lay reader will find it an intense informative recital of cases exemplifying methods in paigntific crime detection.
$1+x^{2}=3 y$
Chapters are devoted to the fields of fingerprinting, Firearms Identification, Incs, Questioned Documents and Handwriting, Photography, Toxicology, Blood Tests, Mood Experts and the Hauptmann case, Dust, Houlage, Safe Cracking, Dissemination of Police Alarms, Science of obtaining confessions from $1200 \mathrm{~B} . \mathrm{C}$. to the Lie Detector, and finally in a chapter entitled "Social Indictment", is observed that our American Police Agencies have not availed themselves of the methods developed by science for the detection and apprehension of criminals. Poor personnel is deplored, resulting in the "ghastly police tipstavery" which was shown in "the opening chapter of the Lindbergh case".

Memorandum for the Director

"SeLence vergus Crime" affords the Special Agent not only pleasant roview of gubjecta with which he should be thoroughly conversant, but, also beings to mind the vast possibilities of appliantlon of sciontific methode to orime detection and oxininal apprehension, through the author* many aase examples.

This book mas not written as a complete exposition of cryptography, but on the other hand it is considered generally as criterion. It does describe the principal systems, gives a brief statement with reference to the history of the subject and includes various frequency tables which would be useful in the Work of the laboratory in some cases. These frequency tables are arranged for the French language, English, German, Italian, Spanish, and Russian. The book is written in French and has not been read by the miter.

This is a technical reference work on all phases of legal medicine even to the legal procedure and similar matters. The chapters on the identification of the living and the dead, diagnosis of causes of death and the statement of the effects of various causes of death are exhaustive and very valuable. There is a very good chapter giving the technical details of almost all of the recognized tests of blood stains. There is also a very good exposition of medical. examinations in sexual offenses. The examination of stains is given preferred treatment.

The above constitutes the first portion of the book and the remainder is entirely devoted to Poxicology, being an authority on all phases of this subject.

An attempt is made to classify various kinds of deception and descriptions are given of the methods used by lat enforcement officers to compel prisoners or witnesses to answer questions truthfully. of course, the book then concerns itself with the use of the so-cancadiedetector machine, that is the instrument promoted by Leonardef Feeler of Northwestern for recording blood pressure, respiration, and electrolytic changes in the body simultaneously during the questioning. This is one of the best arguments for the device that I have seen and a large number of cases in which the instrument was used are described.

ARECENT ADVANGES IN FORENSIC MEDICXNE - By Sidney Smith and John $_{\text {A }}$ AGlaister, Jr. - Publisher, P. Blackiston Son, Co., Inc.,Philadelphia.

The effect of injuries with firearms from projectiles is discussed and suggestions are given for the diagnosis from these effects of the manner of causing the injury, particularly the distance of the firearm from the body. This is illustrated by the same illustrations as appear in other writings on this subject, particularly those of the head of the laboratory of Mexico City.
There is a good exposition of the subject of Ballisties, including the examination of cartridges and cases as well as of the projectiles. There are given several tables showing the weight and kind of powder, the number of grooves and direction of bullets and data of many small arms. Not all of these used in the United States are shown. rhere are tables also of gun shot. $\operatorname{INDFXED}$ Photographs of the various powders and a good statement of this phase. in of ballistics are given.

A Traival ur tiginaia, by Bt. Brig. Genl. Albert Jofayer, pưblished by D. Van inostrand, IVen York, 1868, Library of Congress Chapter UG 580, Shelf . 19 , Copyright 1868.

This is apparently a text book of the signal school in its day. It is well out of date and of little value at the present time, although, it does discuss cryptographs and might include some individual system which nould be valuable upon accasion.

In this volume, which is a little pamphlet, Ir. Nay relates his principile of building up the evidence in a murder case. Ire furnishes a chart similar to a routing chart of a business organization in which the victim is in a block on one side, the cause of death in a block on the other side, and lines run from these to various other blocks, all of which in the end combine in going to the Prosecuting Attorney and the Court.

The outline used is based more upon a theoretical division of the evidence into the Res Gestae, Dying Declarations, Suspicious statements, and so forth, than it is to the steps to be taken by the investigator. On the other hand, Ir. Fay claims that these subjects represent the essential elements which the detective must remember in his inquiry and he does include statements that corpus delecti and such essential elements must be proven.

I feel that he is in error in using these headings as elements which exist in every case. Ie follows the outline strictly in the remainder of his pamphlet in stating that the investigator should do, and some parts of this, such as the examination of the scene of the crine, are valuable.

Because of his particular theories regarding these so-called elements, I do not think this writing is worth very much. It appears also to be a sort of advertisement for his school.

(mechanical InK IAmBics - by Webster Adan arelcher, Handwriting

In this pamphlet the author describes his studies of mechanical ink makrs as distinguished from those made by the human hand. This author had in 1912 referred to a method of the examination of handwriting by examining the edges of the lines. In this writing in 1914 he carries this same method furthe to include the examination of marks made by mechanical objects. His descriptions of his method induce the writer to be skeptical because he claims to depend on characteristics which none of the other experts in this field assign, the prominence given by "elcher. He goes on and shows how these methods are applied to stamping, typewriting, duplicating machines, and marks.

Pr. Lecher concludes from his studies that there is not the same fixity of relations in serration numbers that exist in handwriting. By this he means that in handwriting, according to his earlier writings, he is able to identify two different specimens because of the similarity of the number of serrations on the edge of the lines caused by the vibration of the human body. Apparently a similar vibration mark mas not observed in any of the mechanically produced lines.

There is some value in this pamphlet because :Ir. Nolcher did, to some extent, examine mechanical writings produced by various processes and, therefore, ascertained some characteristics of the lines.

This book was published in 1911 and is another of mitchell's familiar volumes in which he simply relates ways in which science has been used in criminal cases. "r. mitchell writes in a popular vein and his writings are evidently intended for popular consumption, although, they are not in any sense lurid.

In the beginning of his book he refers to the history of the development of scientific methods starting with leland, referring to the difficulty of apmenerdine fugitives and the develoment or handbills and other means or aiding in this apprehension. In this connection, he rofers to blood hounds and French police doss.

In the third chapter entitled "Personal Identification", ir. _mitchell deals with the fallibility of eye witness testimony. In the next chapter he deals with the systems of identification, including photography, the Bertillon system and the fingerprint system.

In the next chapter he duals with handwriting, the effect of heredity, illness, and similar conditions. In the next chapter he deals with forged documents, refers to the use of the microscope, to photo graphic methods, to the examination of typewritten documents and to charred fragments.

Chapter eight is devoted to ink and he reviews early methods of telling the age of ink by the color. This method of judging age by the presence of blue dye has to some extent been exploded by recent experiments of Dr. Taters at the Bureau of Standards. Following this, Pr. Mitchell refers to two notable trials and then passes to sympathetic inks. In the next chapter he arain relates certain forgery trials and in the following chapter refers to the identification of blood and hairs. Chapter thirteen relates early poisoning trials and the remainder of the book is devoted to trials, except for a chapter on the cdulteration of food.

In this pamphlet lielcher, who is a handwriting expert, relates his investigations of methods for determining the age of ink. He shows how tests may be made with the microscope by chemical reagents and by the color method. This was written in December, 1911, and, in my opinion, is far surpassed by other writings on the subject of ink.

There is a second chapter to the pamphlet dealing with what the author calls human dynamograms, which outlines the method of identifying handwriting by mieroscopic examination of the edge of a line. He claims that because of the vibration of the human body, the edges of all lines written by each individual are serrated. These may be counted and, since they are uniform in each writing of an individual, may be used in comparison with suspected writings to reach a conclusive determination whether they were written by the same indiavidual.

I consider this writing of no value.

In Volume $I$ the author includes various articles of the Assistant commissioner of the City of London Police and other individuals which combine to introduce the volume, give a history of the London Police, the C.I.D. or Scotland Yard, the Provincial Detective Forces, Dock Detectives, and the Constable. There are articles by C. Ainsworth "itchell of the various somcalled scientific aids Which are merely descriptive. Sydney A. Smith, nell known in legal medicine circles, includes an article called "The Pathologist and the Detective" which refers to subjects of legal medicine such as the cause of death, types of mounds, and the estimation of the range of firearms by these mounds. Dr. Leonard $A$. Parry has as article on "epical and Surgical evidence in which he describes several cases. T. Teignmouth Shores articles include his introduction, one on Direct Evidence which is supposed to include guides as to the may of taking evidence so that that which is not true may be eliminated, an article called the Identification of the Living mich describes various visual means of identification, pointing out the danger of such methods, and an article called the rotor Age which concerns changes brought about in police activities by automobiles and describes police telephone boxes and the flying squad. There is an article on Circumstantial Evidence by H. Fletcher moulton, a lawyer; one on Photography by the Chief Constable of : :worcester; one on Plans and Sketches by the Chief Constable of :"orcester; one on Firearrs by Robert Churchill; another article by "itchell on Identification After Death by teeth, tattoo marks, laundry marks, and similar clues. There are also included in this volume an axticle by an exsuperintendent of Constabulary in regard to Folice Dogs and one called The Detective at Fork by AIfred Crutchett, Bx-Chief Detective Inspector, Ietropolitan Police, New Scotland Yard. He refers to the investiceation of a murder case and, although, his article is general, it is good reading for investigators.

The second volume is also a compilation edited by Shore, of various articles. This book, however, is devoted entirely to the descriptions of individual cases which are narrated in detail. In these narratives the methods of detection are given. Thile, as a usual thine, I think such stories as these should be classed as stories because they are prepared after the case is over and edited very carefully no doubt, yet, I think it extremely valuable for investigators to read such stories. If nothing else is accomplished, a very good idea of the difference in crimes and the originality displayed by criminals may be obtained.

Review.

THE REPRESSION OF CRIME.

contention that scientific "truths" are nothing more than folklore and part of an international plot among scientists always to interpret the workings of mechanical contrivances in the same way, the author will certainly arouse the ire of all truly scientific men, than whom there are none more distrustful of "facts". as discovered and propounded by brother scientists. They insist on "being shown" not by one investigator and his complacent lieutenants, but by the independent checking up of a score of others who take a fiendish delight in showing up inaccuracies and fallacies, should such exist. Exception will also be taken to the author's vigorously stated belief that a great many scientific discoveries and truths are the adventitious outcome of "fiddling"" with machines, weights, measures, glass tubes, and so forth. No one could deny that many valuable and in some cases epoch-making discoveries were stumbled upon almost accidentally. This does not in any way diminish their significance; many apples fell before the particular one that impressed Newton, but no one previously had attached significance to the phenomenon or taken the trouble to inquire further. It would be foolish to infer that ali scientific discoveries were mere happenings. The failure to find an explanation and cure for cancer and tuberculosis are cited by the author as instances of the barrenness of frontal attacks on problems. He evidently does not nourish the hope, as others do, that out of the stupendous amount of research done on these problems, a solution will come and by design, not by accident.

There are three excellent chapters on the lure of machines, the kingdom of machines, and the industrial revolution. The thought running through the first two is strongly reminiscent of Butler's Erewhorn (referred to ait length) and Kapek's $R . U . R$. What the author has to say here leads naturally and logically to his contention that in reality the industrial revolution has not much more than started-is a thing of the future and not of the past. The chapter on dissolution points out that already, and with little realization on our part, some of our supposedly firmly rooted institutions are disintegrating under the insidious influence of the "machine".
For the scientists who, earnestly or with tongue in cheek, attempt to keep peace between science and religion, the author has nothing but scorn. The only thing to do is to relegate religion to Sunday and let it go at that, since a real reconciliation would have to be so general, so philosophical that in it both science and religion would disappear.

One might go on at great length, alternately admiring and "picking holes'", or trying to, in this thoroughly readable and thought-compelling book, but this is not justifiable now. We may not be convinced that "in all the affairs of men, science included, the wind bloweth where it listeth'', and in fact the author himself may not be as convinced as he leads us to believe he is. That a great many true things are said, and said well, is sufficient to warrant one in commending the book to all who are not afraid to have their beliefs closely analyzed and sharply challenged.

The Repression of Crime. By Harry Elmer Barnes. New York: George H. Doran Company, 1926. 382 p.
This book is a careful study of the history of methods used in an effort to suppress crime. After a preliminary chapter on crime in the light of modern social and medical science, the author presents successively the steps in the development of criminal codes and penal institutions from the original 1676 code, the Quaker codes prevailing from 1682 to 1718 , and the establishment of the Puritan code in 1718, through the developments in Pennsylvania and New York prison systems, to the present time. He discusses with the cool objectivity of the trained historian the origins and development of prison labor, of trial by jury, and of contemporary prison administration.

The book has three striking features. In the first place, it gives a lot of information that will be new to many people. It is interesting, for example, to realize that until William Penn introduced it in Pennsylvania, imprisonment was not regarded as punishment. Imprisonment was resorted to for the purpose of detention until punishment could be inflicted, but it had evidently not occurred to people to regard confined loafing as painful enough to constitute punishment. Once instituted, imprisonment became more and more prevalent as a punishment in itself, with various modifications such as the introduction of prison labor, which was first made as a result of the activity of American Quakers and other prison reformers. In 1822, however, one Sidney Smith advocated in the Edinborough Review that prisoners should be given as monotonous, irksome, and dull a task as possible without opportunity to see the results, with no share in the profits, and "no work but what was tedious". "This genial idea'," said Mr. Barnes, "triumphed over the program of the prison reformers and was followed by the orgy of the experiment with the treadwheel and crank . . . so that prison labor in England was set back for half a century by the meddling of those practical and sober souls who had God's ear in the matter of penal administration."

A second notable point about Professor Barnes' book is his frank exposition of the present unsatisfactory state of affairs. In addition to a survey of the inadequate methods and measures of most prisons at the present time, Mr. Barnes devotes an entire chapter to exposing the faults of the jury system with such penetrating shafts as this: "But even if we had the most accurate testimony, by witnesses of the highest intelligence and undisputed veracity, its value and significance would be practically lost upon the illiterate, inattentive, and distracted jury. Hence the outcome is essentially this: a body of individuals of average or less than average ability who could not tell the truth if they wanted to, who usually have little of the truth to tell, who are not allowed to tell even all of that, and who are frequently instructed to fabricate voluminously and unblushingly, present this largely worthless, wholly worthless, or worse than worthless information to twelve men who are for the most part unconscious of what is being divulged to them, and would be incapable of an intelligent interpretation of the information if they heard it." (Page 313.) Professor Barnes says that he would be quite willing to defend the thesis that, in so far as certainty and accuracy are concerned, the modern jury trial is not a whit superior to the ordeal or trial by battle.

He gives a long list of cases in which justice was sacrificed in the interests of "pinhead jurisprudence" of the sort in which convictions were set aside for such reasons as a misprint or a misspelled word in the indictment.

Most interesting of all to the psychiatrist and to those interested in the advance of the ideas implicit in the mental-hygiene movement is Professor Barnes' frank avowal of the psychiatrist's position with reference to the treatment of the criminal. It is difficult, he says, to find a better example of the inability of the average citizen to learn by experience than is to be observed in "the contemporary hysteria concerning the increase of crime and the accompanying attack upon scientific criminology and penology. . . . The modern criminologist is even more alarmed at the increase of crime than the lawyer and business man, for he knows so much better than they, how unnecessary it is and how far we are from having enough social intelligence to introduce an adequate method of dealing with the menace." (Page 637.) Professor Barnes puts into one paragraph a statement of the position of modern psychiatry better than it could be expounded in a whole pamphlet: "The new criminology will delegate the study and treatment of the criminal to a permanent group of experts under the leadership of trained and enlightened psychiatrists. Such a group will not be concerned primarily with the mere legal guilt of the person accused. Guilt of criminal action will be regarded only as a symptom of initial significance. Accusation and guilt will be viewed chiefly as means of bringing a criminal personality into the custody of scientists. The important question will be the menace of the individual to society and the possibility of so treating him as to eliminate that menace. If it is found that his personality is such as to make it permanent and serious, he will be segregated for life, whether he has committed a multiple murder or stolen a bag of peanuts. On the other hand, many a person who has committed a murder will be committed to a sanitarium for treatment, with the expectancy of his ultimate release to a life of freedom if his motivating compulsive disorder is of the type which promises recovery under treatment." (Page 323.)

Professor Barnes takes the position that it is now as scientifically àbsurd to talk of capital punishment or any other "punishment" for criminals. as it is to discuss punishing tuberculous patients or paretics. This, he indicates, does not mean that the principle of painless extermination might not be used even far beyond the scope of the present death penalty.

Professor Barnes' book is highly critical, but his criticisms are con.structive. He proposes a program. He thinks provision should be made for thorough and accurate criminal statistics; for the application of the principles of eugenics; for the improvement of the educational system to include an understanding of the necessity for obedience to law, manual and vocational education for every ablebodied citizen, and efficient methods for the aiding of backward children; for personal hygiene and proper housing and recurrent compulsory examination of children; and for the elimination of slum conditions, of the exhibition of crimes in the moving pictures, and of lurid accounts in newspapers. All these have to do with crime prevention.

For more adequate provision for the apprehension and conviction of the criminal, he suggests that the police system be taken out of politics and made an expert profession and that the energies of the police be reserved, so far as possible, for the discovery and apprehension of the more serious types of criminals rather than the suppression of crap games and petting parties. He advocates a reconstruction of the jury system and far-reaching changes in court procedure, particularly with relation to the rules of evidence. Insanity cases. should be taken out of the hands of ordinary juries; criminals should be given the advantage of mental examinations and the results put before the judge.

With reference to the reformation of the criminal, Professor Barnes thinks that the most important thing is a change in public attitude so that we will regard penal institutions as places for such treatment of the criminal as will return him to society determined and equipped to lead a law-abiding existence or else for detaining him permanently. He advocates the separation of first offenders and veteran convicts. Those convicted of petty offenses should, as far as possible, be kept out of penal institutions, and handled through fines, probation, psychiatric clinics, and social guidance unless there are evidences of potential seriousness. He advocates the administration of institutions by non-political and trained experts, comparable to staffs of physicians and nurses in the best hospitals, with provision for social reëducation, self-government, and labor wages from which the cost of maintenance, reimbursement indemnity, and support for the prisoners' dependents should be deducted. The teaching of a trade to the prisoners he thinks exceedingly important, and to aid in their establishment after discharge from the prison there should be an efficient parole and follow-up system in the hands of experts instead of the present situation characterized by careless indifference, politics, and inquisitorial supervision.
Mr. Barnes says ali the things that the progressive psychiatrists, sociologists, and educators would want him to say, and he says them with a background of historical evidence marshaled after the fashion of the historical scholar that he is. As an effective instrument in the education of any one who wants the facts impartially presented, this book is unsurpassed.

Problems of Human Reproduction. By Paul Popenoe--Baltimore: Williams and Willeits Company, 1926. 196 p.
In spite of the title of this book, the publishers state on its outside cover that it is "a sane and simple interpretation of the known facts of human reproductigh for the non-technical reader". The book certainly deals less with problems than with facts It consists of 196 small pages, divided into twenty-one chapters. Each subject is considered very briefly and consequently incompletely. The book presents in the main what is generally accepted as true regarding the anatomy and physiology of the reproductive sistem. On the whole the material is as clearly presented as brevity and the absence of illustrations would permit. The best chapter is the one on the determination of the sex of offspring. This rather-technical subject is made very clear.

In a number of cases the author has given space to relatively unimportant facts or to theories not generally accepted. In a book of this size, intended for laymen, it might have been better to use the space for the more important or more fully accepted facts. The author's idea of what to include in so small a book will not coincide with that of a good many clinicians. For example, he gives an entire chapter to spermatoxins, and another chapter to artificial insemination, of which the greater part is devoted to the subject of insemination when the husband is sterile. In the chapter on menstruation he gives more than three pages to a discussion of the improbability of the moon or the tides being the cause of the twenty-eight-day cycle, about three pages to mid-menstrual crises, and a full paragraph to the excretion of a poison in the various fluids of the menstruating woman. In the same chapter he states that "the tendency in colleges and other institutions where large numbers of girls are under the care of a physical instructor (especially if the latter is an unmarried woman) is now not even to excuse a girl from exercise, unless she reports symptoms of discomfort'. Although such may exist, we do not personally know of any college where exercise is permitted that would not be approved by competent gynecologists. The statements made by many of the colleges that gymnasium appointments must be kept, by all those who are not ill should not be interpreted as meaning that the full exercise program will also be required. Carefully selected exercise or else complete rest in a favorable recumbent posture are the substitutes for more general activity. We believe the author would find the college point of view on the whole even more conservative than his own.

Among the problems well discussed is that of sterility. Many of those matters, however, that are recognized as problems from the biological, sociological, or other points of view are either not stated or no theories regarding their solution are offered. In general the author stops at stating the facts from which problems arise. For example, sex antagonism is discussed in a limited way from the point of view of its causes and purpose, but is dismissed as a biological phenomenon which has persisted because of its utility to the race.

The non-technical reader, for whom the book is intended, will be surprised (and pleased or not, as the case may be) at certain of the author's definite assertions. For example, he states that "if there is no striking difference in the kind of mentality women possess, there is a noteworthy difference in the amount of it''. This is in the first chapter, entitled Male and Female. In the chapter entitled The Wealeer Sex, he states that the male is "born with a constitutional handicap which he cannot, by any possible method, eliminate'. If the reader takes these statements at their face value, as universally accepted, undebatable facts, and makes use of them in conversation, he will be likely to find himself in the center of a storm of argument. Anticipating this probable difficulty on the part of his readers, the Fawily fortunes are lost and recouped but Milde killa Captain Burgess, who unexpectediy returns after having been given up as dead, when he attempts to persecute Jane and Tilde.

For this killing, Wilde was sentenced to 20 years in prison. He begen his imprisorment at hevgete and the principle keeper, upon his entrace, expressed the prizon philosophy at that time in the following statsment:
"In the keeper. I have my sworn duty. Men of all conditions are forced into prison, as all the rivers run into the sea. That's what a wise man said, and 1t's true. They send me these men without reason or purpose. The good turm bad. The bad atay bad. I wheh they could live here with me and watch hope fale into despair."

Conditions are further described in this quotationt
The Isw in those early days of the mation were stern but slow of motion. It had no vigor nid no sense of direction. It concerned itself with Liberty and life and yet within a fer yards of the cradle of its fostered begining it was developing notorious center of crime and vicioumess" - the reference beine made to Nev York.

At this time began the perverted theory of penology, that the sole cure of crise lies within priaon walls.

Abstract

There In described the merrilees bettinge and forms of proishment prevalont in that day which is brought out in the vivid pleture of prison IIfe as Iived by lhmer Wilde. Wilde ia rameved to Sing Sing which wan supposediy the last word in the penolow of the early 29th century bat the whippinge and panishant of the conviets contimues. It was after a whipping that Tilde began te ohisel into the stone in his cell wall with the intention of carving his name and his reoord in stome, while the prison adninistration carred its record in heman flesh. Betause of the turbilent epirit Wilde thought that the word Rebel best portrayed his 11 fe and sing Sing.

It wan some yeart before his releave that he finds that his wife Jane's faith had never been broken is his, thet whe had died of a broken heart and that his family wes walting for his in the new Feat. This prompted bis to begin seratching the 1 ine through the woxd Rebel, feeling as be did, that he had beem wrong in thinking that that portrayed his spirit. After "ilde's release be is reunited with thowe nearest to him nad begins life ane in the neer west.

FIAOBD ROLPHE - CITIC

In the epidemic of 1822 Edmund Rolphe loses hle mother. His father Enory Rolphe, a stombome captain, leavea his mon yamend and daughter Jenny in tho oare of Bacle Heary, a free mogre. Dy the your 1827 Captais Rolphe has amassed considerable venlth, but through the efforts of one Joarthan Peck and Bob the Wheeler be invents in worthlese securities. There follows the panic of this pariod and overything is loot. In this same your Captain Rolphe roscues Rlimbeth and Jowhu Peck from a river disaster and taken them inte his howe deapite the fact that he diseovers that their father swindied hif. The captain dies shortly thereafter in another riverboat axplealon. Edirund now comes under the Influence of ambitious Daniol Lerrian whone dreams of fortune fade with another panie. Bob the wheeler, thief and racketeer of his dey, Is finally killed by Edmund to prevant Bobss unscrupalous enterprises from coming betmeen ptamé and his wife Elimabeth. For this he te sent to Sing Sing brolem because of his belief thet Elisabnth is more vitaliy coneerned in Ivangeliatie movemante and the freelag of slaves in the Abolitionist movesent than in his own plight.

Throughout this portion of the book is deseribed the llom Tork of that time, dirty streets, class diatinetion, tragie inifitual portraits, the big fire, and the chootic induetrial age spamaine slune and attemiting crime". In Sing Sing Rolph beconee what is known as the ideal prisoner and as the man without a Priend. Five jesra paps. Rolphe serutinised the word RHagi serstehed into the stone and decided thit for his, who had wo hope for bettermant or for life there remaing only virulence contempt no cyicism.
Trrough Rolphe's prison life in dopicted the ranction to progress in prison reform which get in ac a result of political pressure brought to bear by hirers of prison labor. Prison 14 fe becones one saries of haroh treatment ant terror and folphe realising the futility of everything in Sing Bine which "hamers down the human emotions and eqshions wothing but hate" wes convineed that the word CINIC should best deacribe him.

In one of the prison revolts Rolphe ie injured, loses his mind and his only mentsi drive is to sinith his carming in the granite. The prison director becomen interested and through the records finds Blizabeth, Rolphe'f wife, and persuades her to come to Rolphe in prison. Ho recognises her but a moment and she leaves him unroconciled. On the dsy he was to be relenged after serving 20 years he 18 fom dead in his cell, heviny died despaired of men, hie record in atone - crkic.

ARNOLD BHANOT - SKEPTIC

In 1857, Amold Brnntt, a criminel lawyer, dofencs a murderer and save him from the gillows ith an oration, typical of the lawyers of the time, pointing out that the prisoner, Jim Reynolds ves a prowuct of the imperfect socinl order which was a cymol of Anericats fallure tomards its mases end a victis of eocnomical slavery. Brandt becomes famous through his sbllity to play on the emotion and obtain 1ight sentences and accuittsle. He zoen Fest on a vection tith the picneer Patrick o'Dogherty and sees the possibilitice of frontier develonment. After a distingushe sarvice in the Civil mar, Arnold Brandt returns to the practice of law. Pat otDogherty made wealthy by a gold strike and land sale has left a fortme in bonds with him for sefekeeping for Patrick's son. Brandt is offered a directorship in a rallroad If he investa $$ 100,000$ whieh could he accomplished if he used Patrick's boads. He $1 s$ subjected to the ruthless urge of power and wealth and thinks he will aliow nothing, including the law, to atand in his way. Jin Reynolis in the interim has been relessed from prison and through the influence of Brandt's wife has become an Evangelist. The prosence of Rernolds caused Brandt to go into n fremzy as momonterily Reynolda personified a freedom of cuilt which he himelf oould not obtain. In this freamy Brandt kills Reynolda. The reason for his deed wos not clear to Branit himeelf but, after meditation, he looked forward to his terw of laprleonment hoping to clesr hinself of the oppresetion of his mind.

The Sing Sing of his time was uncer the control of an autocrat whose rule was sustained by brute force by fear and suppresaicn. Men like him had made Sing Sing a byword among decent people, having transformed and eleveloped the prison into a "eewer of unholy passions snd human filth". Reading the oarving in the stone in his cell he felt that each man yields to a peculiar and intimate pull that dragged him over the borderline of normelity. Each man's life was his own". Like those two who had left their records, the RFBEL, who had foum life whole, the CYNIC wom it had overwhelmed. In Brendt'a mind the men and momen of Sing 3ing were not really prisoners of society. Actually, ther mere held in boniage by the very power that had steered them from 11 fe.

Years pass, gradual changes are made through many administrations, Reform is begun and prison conditions bettered but economie preasure and politics brought to bear on penologists of the time found iittle progress actually being made. For sometime Brandt had thought that he would carve the word Courage into the stone but soon be began to doubt and became a SKPPTC. Realising his own skepticism be began carving the word skeppic. There follows a deseription of the lives of the prisoners, their treatment and mental reactions until Pat OPDogherty the son of the old pat for whom Brandt had been keeping the bonds comes to prison himself. He tells young Pat what he has done and finds that he has cleared his conscionce and has freed himself of his old skepticism finding renewed faith in life. He ays, "I am free. Free to live and love. Cells, bars, walls I do not feel them, There is no man more free. I see it all so clenrly now. Wetters were not physical. At first it was the soul's desire for power - power that costs. I pald too dearly for it, price that left me frustrated. I gave my soul for 1 it. Ho beging to acratoh through the word SKEPTIC.

Brand is released from prison at the termination of his 20 years is reunited #ith his family and beging efforts of restitution and to obtain Patrick' release from Sing Sing.

STEPIEA YERES - MaRYONETTS

Staphen Yerkea came from family who for may yars had served with distinction in the United States Arwy. He set out pith overgthing in his favor, but the panic of 1873 drove his fathor to suicide and his fanily into bsnkxuptcy. He oets out to recoup the family fortune and to marry the girl who scorned his poverty. Through his omployer, the girl's father, he becomes implicated in eriminal activities. His criminal activity recounts that period in American economic development when there was arsch criminal activity on the atock market during which time fanous fortmes, such as the Venderbilt's, were built up. Yerkes becomes powerful as a financier and the head of farous thieves orgaization. His sentence to Sing Sing is the result of killing anothor thief in an effort to protect his wife from the knowledge that her father snd basbond wore not the respectable financiers she thought them, but high clams thieves.

Coing to Sing Sing Yerkee finda the prison sytom of the atate had been forced through legisl tive action in Albray to abandon contract labor. In 1836 an aroused public consoience, or posaibly the insiatence of free labor, demanded the abolition of contract labor. The events of prison life were brought out through Ierkes' Life and experiences at Sing Sing. There is dencribed the building of the death $h$ use at Sinct Sinc, Fhich is to inaugurste the electric chair for the death penalty. After 14 years Xerkes makes his escape, boing driven by the thought of seeing his son and wife. Returning to Nee York he rinds that his gon does not know of his existence nd that his wife has married Howard dyres, who was gratly responsible for Ierkes' miafortunes. Thia so stuas him that he voluntarily returns to Sing Sing to finish serving his sentence.

Terkes begins his carving in the stone and decides upon Marionerte, his philosophy being that brains mean nothing. Wo are no better than the meanest of nem prisoners. 111 are puppets. Marionettes, dancing to the strings of their own wenving". 1921after 25 years Stephen Terkes is releused from prison. His thoughts are full of vengeance for the mamer in which iffe has treated him. Returning to some of his old friends and mhile conniving to bring the downfall of Howard Ayres, a yege knowing of Yerkes' story and of his son, threateng to let the boy know everything about his father, whereupon Yerkes kills him. For this orime he was olectroouted.

EPILOGUE

This portion of the book consists of letter to Farden Lawes by Judge Edmund Rolphe, the heir of the ex-convict, writing for the four men mentioned in the prologue, and the answer to the Judge by the warden, in which Warden hiwes expressea the opinion that the best we can hope for is to provide the setting that will inspire a spiritual renaisance. then that is achieved physieal torment can assume purifying proportions". He says farther, "The permenence of our institutions depends upo: the degree of individual responaibility townd public peace and security. Abere is no universal panacea. Slepler legsi codes will help. Simpler habits of thought and living. A more even distribution of opportunity to achieve contentwent, but above all, our educstional, social and economic agencies mut be reorganized with the view to strengthenIng our morsl ilber as individuals ant an a nation.

In reading this lengthy book one camot help being impressed by the enormous amount of research that wu t have gone into its production. The vividnes: of each character is exphatic; the life atories cover a wide range of hwan drama and the four episodes of the book appear not oniy to comprise one powerful unity but to Illuminate the temper of the times as well as the change and development of American penolozy.

In ofeing up the reason for the chan oe In otpiltzation during the past half century Ur. Hayek states for over 200 yeape Eng lith teas had been spreading Eastward. The rule of freedo wht th had been echieved in England seemed destined to spread throughowt the world. But ebout 1870 the retgn of these taeas had reached to easternest expansion and from then onward it began to retreat and Ingland loet her intellectual leadership in the political and pocial aphere and became on importer of ideas. Then for the next 60 years Germany became the centre from whi ch ldeas desitnod to govern the world in the 20 th century spread east and west. He says, Whether it wae Hegel or Mars, list or Schmeller, Sombart or luanhetm, whether it mat oootaliam in its more radical form or mercly morganization" or "planning" of e less radi cal kind, German idecs vere everywhere readl Iy imported and german institutions imt tated f---He goes on to thoo how socialism flourished in oermany and German thoughte ereretsed e powerful intellectual influence on the whole world end bsilt ap a "Festern ciuilization meaning Test of the Ehtne; that the poople the Feat continued to import German ideas and bere cven induced to belteve that their own former convietiona had merely been rationalisationa of belfish interests, that free trade was a doctrine invented to far ther Arlitiah interests, and that polltical ideals of England and America were hopelessly outmaded and a thing to be ashamed of.

In Chapter 2 the outhor ilsousses what he terme "the Great Dtopi a" and barns that it is raraly remembered now that socialism in its beginning was frankly authoritarian. The french uriters who lald the foundation of modern sociallam had no doubt that their tdeas could be put inte practice only by a strang dicteterial government. To them soclallsm neant on atterpt to teminate the revolution" by a deliberate reorgantzation of eoctety on nieraronical lines by the tmpesition of a coerctue "epiritual power."

Where freedon was concerned the founders of soot alt sm made no bones obout their intentions and they regarded frecdom of thought s. the root of 011 the evil of 19 th centure socfety and the pioneer of nodern plannera, St. Stmon, cuen predicted that thoee bhe did not operate his proposed planning boerds mould be ntreated as cattle."

The author tates that "nobody aw more clearly than De Tocqueville that democracy as an essentially individualist inetitution tood in an trreconcilable conflict with socialtsm."

De Tocqueville stated, Democracy extends the sphere of individual freedom, socialism restricts it. Democracy attaches all posstble value to each man; sociclism makes cach man a mere agent, a mere number. Democracy and soct alism have nothing in common but one word: 'equality." But note the difference: iwhile demoeracy seeks equallty in liberty, socialism seeks equality in restraint and eervitude." ${ }^{\text {th }}$ These words were spotien in the year 1848.

Continuing, Mr. Hayek tates, "To allay these suspiolons and to harness to $t$ ts cart the strongest of all political motives - the craving for freedom - socialism began increasingly to wake use of the promisc of a 'new freedon'.....the subtle ohange in meaning to which the word, freedom, was subjected in order that this argument should sound plausible is important......the demand for the new freedom was thus only another name for the old demand for an equal aistribution of walth.....there can be no doubt that the promise of greater freedom has become one of the most effective weapons of socialist propaganca and that the belief that soctaltsm would bring freedom is genuine and sincere. But this would only heighten the tragedy if it should prove that what was promised to us as the road to freedow was in fact the high road to servitude.
"Inquestionably the promise of more freedom was responsible for luring more and more liberals along the sociallst road, for binding them to the conflict which exista between the besic principlea of soctalism and liberalism, and for often enabling aocialiste to usurp the very name of the old party of freedom. Socialism was embraced by the greater part of the intelligentaia as the apparent hefr of the liberal tradtion therefore, it is not surpriaing that to them the idea of socialiam leading to the opposite of liberty should appear inconceibable.
"Even communiats must have been somewhot shaken by such Cestimonies as that of Max gotman Lentn's old friend, pho found himself compelled to admit that instead of being better, Stalinism is morse than fascism, more ruthless, barbarious, unjust, immoral, antidemecratic, unredeemed by any hope or soruple, "and that it is better described as super fasctst; and when we find the same author recogntaing that 'Stalinism is socialism, in the sense of being an incoltable although unforeseen political accompaniment of the nationalization and collectivization which he had relied upon as part of his plan for crecting a classless soctety, 'his conclusion clearly achieves wider significance."

The author in his effort to show the clese conneetion between Marrism, fascism and national socilaism quotes a British writer by the nam of Fo A. rotgt who after many yoers of powable oberpuation of developmente th gurepe at a foretgn correapondont conciuded thet Haretim hat led to faect an ond national coefallume beocuet, in all ceentials, tt to fonotan and national eootalimme" Continulng, the author tatea thet everyone who has watohed the grewth of these movemente in italy or in oermany hae been impreased by the number of leading men, from lasecelint downarid and not exoluding Laval and Gutaling, who began an aoelaliote and onded ae fosed sta and Narle. Demooratic control may prevent power from becoming arbitrary, but it doee not do so by its mere exfstence."

In Chopter 6 the cuthor discusses Planning and the Rule of Lawy He points out the general distinction between the Rule of Law and arbitrary govermment tating that under the frot the govermment conflnes tiself to fixing rules deternig'g the condithons under which the cuat lable resources any be used end leaving to the individuals the dectsi on for what endi they are to be ssed. mader the second the government di rects the use of the means of producti on to particular ends. He states that bif givinge the gouernment sn1fntted pewers, the most arbitrary rule can be made legely and in this way a democracy may set up the most complete deapotian imeginable.
"How even a formal recogntition of individual righte, or of the cquel righte of minorities, loses oll significance ina state whi ch embarks on a complete control of economic life, han been emply demonstrated by the expertence of the various Central Europeon countries."

In Chapter 7 "Sconomic Control and Totalltariontom" 1s discussed and the author starts off this chapter by statiag that mozt planners who have seri ously coneidered the practicel aspects of their task have litile doubt that a directed cconomy mest be run on more or less dtctatorial liaes. He di scussed the value of paying for services rendered in noney rather than rewards of vari ous types, as an individual oho is pald in money hes the oppertunt ty to choose his purchases and control his conomic Iffe where an individual pald in rewaris of various kinds would meon that the rectpiont no longer would be allowad to choose and that whoever fired the reware detenined not only the size but also the particular form in which it thould be enjeyed.

TThe question ratsed by cconomic planaing is, therafore, not merely whether we shall be able to satisfy what we regard as our more or less important needs in the way we prefer. It is whether it shall be we who decide what is more, and mat is less, important for us, or whether thit is to be dectded by the planner...... and whoever controls oll conomic actiolty controls the means for all our ends and must therefore dectde which are to be satisfied and which not. This is really the crux of the natter. Economic control to not merely control of a sector of human life whi ch ean be separsted from the reatg it th the control of the means for all our ende..... our freedom of choice in a competitive soolety reste on the fact that, if one person refuses to satisfy our wishes, we can turn to another. But if we face a monopolist we are at his mercy.

Mr. Hayek feels that people in general hate to face the real focte that there is an economic problem of any kind; thet in their wishful belief there ts really no longer an economic problete people have been oonflrmed by irresponatble taik about "potential plenty" - which, if it were a fact, would indeed mean that there Is no economic problem which males the choice inevitable. He then states, "The reader may take it thet whoever talk about potential plenty is elther dishonest or does not know what he is talifing obout.

MEven a good many economfsts with socialtst vi ews whe have seriously studied the problems of central planning are now content to hope that a planned society mill equal the efflcienoy of c competitive system..... the passion for the colleative satisfaction of our needs with which our soctallsts hove so well prepared the wey for totalitarianiam, and which wante us to take our pleasures cs well es our necesstites at the appolinted time and in the presoribed form, is, of course, partly intended as a means of political cdacation..... the economic fresdom which is the prerequisite of any other freedon cannot be the freedom from cconomic care which the socialists promise us and which can be obtalned only by relifoing the indiuldual at the same time of the necessity and of the power of choice; it mast be the freed om of our conomic activity which, with the right of choilce, incuttably also carries the rist and the responsibility of the right."

Chepter 8 entitled "Tho, Whompn is a dis ouest on of the merits of competition and the author feels that although oompotition and fustioe may hove littie clae in common that it is as muth a oonmendation of competition as of justice thet both are blind and that both ore no respecter of persons. He feels that the fact thet the opportuntities open to the poor in a competitive society are vech mora restricted than those open to the rich does not sake it leas true that in such a oociety the poor are much more free than a person commanding much grecter material comfort in a different tupe of socfety. He atates that it is only because we have forgotton what unfreed om means that we often overlook the patent foot that in cuery real sense a badly paid unskilled worker in this country hes more freedom to shape his $14 f$ e than many amall entrepreneur in germany or a much better pald engineer or manager in Russia.

Mr. Hayek feels that what our generation has forgetten is that the system of private property is the most tmportant guaranty of frecdom, not only for those who own property, but soarcely less for those who do not. "And who will deny," he says, "thet a vorle? in which the wealthy ere powerful is still a better world than one in which only the already powerful can coquite wealthp"

An interesting part of this chapter is the following: "It is pathetic, yet at the same time encouraging, to find es prominent an old communist cs Max Eastrian rediscovering theatruth." Then the author guotes luar Eastman in the following statement: "It seems obvious to me now - though I have been slous, $I$ must say, in coaing to the conclusion - that the institution of private property is one of the matn thinge that have given man that 11 int ted amount of free and equalnees that Nary hoped to render inflint te by abolishing this institution. Strangely enough yarx was the first to see this. He ts the one who informed us, looking bachwards, that the cuolution of private capitallsm with its free market had been a precondition for the cooluti on of all our denocratic freedone. It never occurred to him, looking forward, that if this was so, these other freedome might disappear with the abolition of the free market."

The author goes on to relate that the nightmare of Snglish 19 th-century polittcal thinkers, the tate in which "no avanue to mealth and honor mould exist save through the government," would be realized in a completeness whi ch they never inagined though famillar enough in some countries wich have since passed to totalitarianism. And he states that tt was Lenin himself who introduced to Russia the famous phrase, "who, whomp" during the early years of Sovict rule the byoord in which the people sumed up the universal problem of a socialist society. Tho plans whom, who directs and dominates whom, who assigns to other people their station in life, and who is to have his due allotted by others?
"Security and Freedom" is the heading for chapter 9 in which the author states that the plannting for securtity whtch has such an insidious effect on liberty is that for security of a different kind. It ta planning designed to protect indi viduals or groups againat diminutions of their income......egainst lesses tmposing severe hardshtps having no moral justification yet inseparable from the competitive system.

The author says that in any system which for the distribution of men between the different trades and occupatione relles on their own chotee it is necessary that the remuneration in the se trades should correspond to their usefulness to the other membere of soot ety, even if this ahould stand in no relation to aubjective merit ..... Fowe all know the tragte plight of the highly trained man whose hard-learned skill has suddenly lost tts value because of some Invention whi ch greatly beneflts the rest of soclety. The history of the last hundired yeara is full of instances of this hind, some of them affecting hundreds of thousands of people at a time.

He feels that anyone suffering such a great diminution of his income and bitter disappointment of all his hopes through no fault of his own, and despite hard work and exceptional shill, undoubtedly offends our sense of justice, and that demands of those oho suffer in this way, for state interforence on their behalf, are certain to recelve popular sympathy and support. Thus governments have not only opproved of such demqnde ant merely to protect the people so threatened but to secure $/$ 号hem the continued recelpt of the ir former income and to shelter them from the vi cissitudes of the market.

Some time ago I read the book entitled "I Am A Spy" by "E.7", a British publication which was brought back from England by Mr. Clegg, for the purpose of determining any information or details of interest in conjunction with our espionage investigations.

This book is the personal account of "E.7", who claims to have operated as a professional spy for a number of years, chiefly for the British, but also for the Japanese. His narrative is interwoven with melodramatic and romantic episodes surrounding his female confederate of quasi-Oriental orirgin. The author extols at length the results of his confederate's work and credits her with a high degree of ability, at the same time confessing innocence of her detailed methods of operations.

So far as revealing any new or different techniques employed by espionage agents, with which we have not already become acquainted through our investigations, this volume is of no material value. Confidential contacts within governmental departments are mentioned, through whom copies of confidential documents are secured, and the establishment of microphone surveillances to cover conferences in foreign embassies. The remainder of the author's work in espionage relates to the evasion of apprehension by the authorities, his success being attributed to the development of circumstances in his favor rather than to any outstanding cunning on his part.

It is not believed that this book reveals any information of value in connection with our espionage investigations.

On August 4，1951，a note was received from the Director to get and review two books，if we did not have them in the library．The books were：

> 1. "Sabotage - How To. Guard Against It" by Harry Domarren, published by Nat. Foremen's Institute.
> 2a pine To Understand" by E. Ra, Posnack, publisher, Greenberg, 1950.

The 56 page book，＂Sabotage－How TomGuardagainst－It＂by H．D．Farren，has been in the Bureau＇s Library for 10 years．The author deals with sabotage in World Mar ones Black Tom，et al．，and explosions in the year 1940，the Hercules Powder Company，et ales and says this book serves as a warning to American workers to prevent loss of life，bloodshed and disaster such as was suffered in 1916w18．

He starts out by relating the details＿of Hercules＿Powder Company explosions at Kenvil，New Jersey．on $9=12-40$ ．

He then cites on page 7 the Black Tom explosions of 19．6．
On page 9 he gives full credit to the daring and vigilance of ＂government operatives＂of the Department of Justice for preventing greater $103 s$ by unearthing even greater plots than Black Tom＿during㐬orld Mari period o He then sets forth details of some of the plots， using names of persons involved，companies and places scheduled for demolition by saboteurs．He refers to a Department of Justice Agent called only the＂Baron＂and reports the part he played in thwarting Dr Frederick 77. Bischoff and his group at Newark，No J．He relates the Dupont Powder works explosion by Bischoffo He then relates high－ lights of some of the major explosions in the year 1910．（P．19－21）

After citing these fires and explosions during september and October 1940 the author says：＂Can there be any doubt in the minds of any of us that we are at war with the saboteurg（P．21）

Memorandum to Mr. Nichols from M. A. Jones

The Director is quoted at length on pages 24 and 25.
The FBI's breaking of the Dr. Ignatzareibl casemis cited on page 29. The FBI's plant protection programis_mentioned on pages $30-33$.

Pages 33 . 39 are devoted to discussions of what had happened in England and France in the sabotage field.

The vo Rintelen case of World War $I$ is cited on pages 40-41 and the rest of the book is devoted to what America should do to prevent sabotage of our plants, food and labor. The author discusses hiring of personnel, fire equipment, arson and employee's responsibilities,

The book, "Time To Understand" by Emanuel R. Posnack, was not in the Bureaus Library, but a copy has been obtained and reviewed.

The book is divided into five main parts, egg., (1) Communism and Its Refutation, (2) Marxism in the Twentieth Century, (3) Retarded Free Enterprise and the Twin Technologies, (4) Bridging the Gap between East and West, (5) Where Today's Capitalism and Restrictive Society Fail. An appendix has been added entitled, "A Pictorial Study of the Money System."

The book is a summation of the misconceptions and inconsistencies of Communism from both the Marxian theories man the way it is practiced in Russia.

There are no references to the FBI in the book, nor does it deal with Communism in the United States, but more on an international scale with emphasis on the economic fallacies of the Communist Doctrine of Russia today.

In his preface the author states:
"One of the greatest obstacles to the development of intelligent social consciousness in the masses is the insufficiency of books designed to give the man of average education a basic understanding of the economic [^33]Excerpts from the author's introduction keynote adequately the contexit of the book.

[^34]"To stem the tide, billions of dollars are being spent and valuable manpower is being unproductively used in armies of occupation. And every known diplomatic expedient is being employed in anti-Soviet maneuvers -- with the concomitant countermaneuvers, breaches of treaties and counter-breaches, encouragement of civil strife, and betrayal of oppressed groups. The very foundation of the United Nations, the only organized force for world peace, is being knowingly undermined in the frantic attempt to repel the advance of Communism.
> "In the light of such extraordinary efforts, it is startling to note that practically nothing is being done to explain to the general public why it is believed that Communism will not work..

"The average American's fear of Communism is rooted in ignorance. And this applies to all cultural levels. Indeed, college heads are heard to warn their students to be wary of the 'Reds'...
"We have a valid case against the creed of Communism. But today's tensioned atmosphere is conducive to its spread. Ideas are contagious, and they can multiply rapidly.

[^35]Much of the data in the book is a re-hash of tenets of Communism which are of no value to the FBI such as shown in chapter 2 when Mr. Posnacksets porth the Ifroposals of Communism" and socialism.

Typical of the trend of this bookare thesepassages taken from the chapter on the "'Refutation of Communism."
"Instead of abolishing competition -- as Communists would do -- society should encourage it to the fuliest extent..." (P. 19)
"The Communist charge that the competitive system is inherently inefficient loses its surface plausibility when examined in the penetrating light of human experience..." (P. 19)
"The politico-economicmsystem-oftoday's Russia is not true Communism. The productive wealth of the nation is not distributed according to the needs of the individual citizen, but rather according to the needs of the state -according to the worker's contribution to production. Higher wages are paid for more labor, better work, greater skill. The incentive system is employed just as under capitalism..." (P. 24)
"Under ideal Communism (as distinguished from the present allegedly temporary Soviet system) the state, being without competition in its own realm, would have no need to seek new ideas or inventions for the purpose of attracting customers for its goods, or for gaining a competitive advantage over anyone in its own sphere..." (P. 30)

On page 48 an instance of proof that_Russia has its own brand of Communi sm is shown by the author.
"Hence, in an allegediy communistic society where the selected method of wealth distribution is to pay wages according to the nature of services rendered or according to the need for services, the capital needs of the state could be supplied from the surplus wealth of its people only by offering a reward for the use of this wealth -which reward must be in the form of interest. And that is why Russia today is paying interest on its bonds and on its citizens' bank deposits. It is in the expectation of this reward that labor is spurred on to greater efforts -toward the storing up of excess labor in the form of surplus wealth for use as capital. And where labor has the right to employ its excess produce in the form of income-producing capital, there can be no Communism..."t ( $P$. 48)

BASIC CONCEPTS AND ETHICS (CHAPTER 6)

"Every proposal of Communism is based on the conception of the supremacy of society over the individual..." (P. 55)
"To establish an ethical justification for their position, Communists have resorted to Darwin's theory of evolution as proof that man is not born into this world with natural rights..." (P.55)
"Darwin's theory is thus used by Communists as a scientific and ethical prop in support of their proposition that man has no natural rights. But how can it be reconciled with their other proposition of the supremacy of the state?..." (P. 56)
"Indeed, many political philosophers and economists adopt Darwinism as the very creed of individualism..." (P. 56)

MORAL VALUES AND THE CLASS' STRUGGLE

"Inherent in today's great ideological controversy are the different values which Communism places upon the ethical standards of two 'classes' of society -- the 'owning class' and the 'working class.' It is the assumption that there are different moralities for the se two alleged classes that is primarily the basis for the Marxist idea of an 'irrepressible class struggle.'" (P. 60)
"There are three basic personal qualities which, together with the primary driving force of self-interest, determine all human behavior -- and the dynamics of society. They are the qualities of humaneness, integrity, and competence. The last is used in the broad sense to include mental and physical capacity and ability and their concomitants of creativeness, curiosity and initiative...." (P. 62)

The quality of humaneness is dampened by the dogmatic subordination of the individual to the state and his relegation to the role of a mere social unit of a superorganism..." (P.63)
"The quality of integrity also suffers a process of disintegration under the strict surveillance to which Communist citizens are necessarily subjected...t" (P. 63)
"Because communistic society, by its very nature, suppresses the qualities of humaneness, integrity, and competence of the individual man, it offers very little hope of an improved total society. But outside the area of Communism the horizon of the modern world does reveal opportunities for general betterment" (P. 63)

A NEW SPECIES OF MAN:

"Give man the means to mingle with his fellow inhabitants of our planet, and he will develop more understanding -and humaneness. Give him the means to scan the far reaches of the earth, to see and hear its people, and he will learn the truth -- and develop greater integrity. Give him the means to learn from others, and he will develop increased competence." (P.64)

The author sets forth on pages 69, 70 and 71 "Facts Showing Russian Trend Toward Capitalism," and modern socialism's trend toward Communism.

In Chapter 9 the author discusses "Capitalism Today" to show that our own system which allows a favored few to control concentrations of wealth has caused vast regions of poverty, a dearth of living space, food and work. (P. rr)

On page 113 the author says today society is attempting. to solve the troubles of the world by power politics, negotiation, and legislation in an atmosphere in which power politics are provocative and negotiations on critical issues are useless.

An outline of the U. S. trend toward socialism is set out on pages 116-118.

In his next to the last chapter "Perspective," pages 123-166, the author discusses the economic theories of. supply and demand for the peoples of the earth.

His last chapter, # 15, is titled "Summation" which are his ideas of 20th Century Man, the economic troubles of today and tomorrow. He says "Mankind is trapped.e. Millions of humans...are waiting formorders. to destroy civilization." (P. 168)

The Executives Conference on $10 / 3 / 49$, those present being Messes. Tolson, Glavin, Tracy, Harbo, Mohr, Carlson, Led, Nichols, Rosen and Clegg, considered a suggestion made by NA Counselor Ronald Phillips, based upon a recommendation made on the the NA Associates' Retraining School, thatitoook reviews on la enforcement books on a national scale be included in the National Academy bulletin which is sent to all Associates. It was argued that this would provide the Associates an opportunity to decide

The Conference unanimously recommended that, when it was deemed advisable and appropriate to provide a book review, the books review be included in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin primarily. Objections to widespread or frequent book reviews were voiced since favorable reviews are subsequently quoted by the publishers and authors for the purpose of implementing the sale of. such books, and thus it was believed that these book reviews should be on a very selective basis as occasions would demand or suggest.

Are Government Workers Free to Do as They Choose?

ALL HONORABLE MEN, by David: Karp (Knopf; $3.95) is worth reading because it offers a somewhat different slant on the perennial quarrel between liberalism and conservatism. It is focused on the issue of whether persons like Government workers and teachers are free to think, speak and make friends as they choose.

This novel also is commendable because it is adroitly planned and filled with susDense. Mr. Warp, author of "One," a terrifying picture of a future totalitarian state, is a skillful writer.

Despite these praiseworthy qualities, however, the novel, like so many that uphold the liberal position against both communism and reaction, is not plausible. Most of its characters are stuffed examples of one shape of opinion or another.

The story concerns a Dr. Burney, a famous antiCommunist liberal, - who has directed a great foundation. He is offered the executive direction of a new organizalion, the Institute of American Studies, which is designed, so he is told, to uphold the con-- servative position on a high intellectual level. He accepts, only to find that the sponsors are a bunch of educated, antiseptic Gu Kluxers or Silver Shirts.

Dr. Burney comes to grief 'over an investigation of the qualifications of a Dr. Ness, an economist ${ }_{2}$ proposed for the faculty-a former Government official whose associations takes on a red tinge. Ness, a timid, naive liberal, who is not a Communist has always meant well.

Although the Institute is a private enterprise, the case takes on all the aura of a congressional investigation. Dr. Ness' daughter turns out to be a Communist. When the papers get hold of the issue, the applicant's future career is in the balance. What happens to him is one of several alternatives which might be guessed.

For one thing, a man of Burney's reputation and background never would have joined such an outfit without knowing more about its backers, his employers. For another, the Institute, a private comporation, could not have wielded the influence attributed to it. Then, too, the characters talk more like editorials stating the liberal or conservative view than human beings. You also get the impression that all conservatives are bigots, without reasonable or rational minds.
In spite of these flaws, "All Honorable Men" is an absorbing story.

SYNOPSIS:

This memorandum summarizes the captioned book which was copyrighted in 1956. Author Kart also wrote "One," in 1953, and "The Day of the Monkey," in 1955, and is freelance radio and tolevision writer. No references in Bufiles. Bufile #121-38722 reflects Alfred A. Knopf, believed identical with publisher, member of several Communist fronts, and this company reportedly has published number of books written by persons whose loyalty has been questioned.
"All Honorable Men," a suspenseful novel; one more of a long 1line of literary efforts concerning loyalty investigations. The hero of the story is Dr. Milo Dexter Burney, famous anti-Communist liberal, educator, assiduous after-dinner-speaker, head of Rutledge Foundation for Social Sciences, who joins four wealthy individuals in a project "dedicated to honest, decent conservatism." This project is to ultimately establish an institute for post-graduate training and research and work to be called the Institute for American Studies. Almost immediately Dr. Burney discovers one member of the group, J. J. Van Ord, a retired Brigadier General, is particularly ruthless concerning the past political affiliations of candidates for the faculty of the Instituts.

The entire story revolves around the case of economist, Dr. Joseph Selig Ness, whose candidacy is questioned on the basis of charges againist him contained in a letter to the FBI, a copy of which Van Ord has obtained in some unexplained way. In opposition to the other members of the Board, Dr. Burney decides to defend Ness in the matter of these unevaluated charges. An investigation is begun which reveals Dr. Ness's daughter had participated in a Communist-infiltrated group. In addition, the investigation reveals that Ethel Glucker, sister of one of Burney's assistants, is a Communist and a lecturer for the Young Communist League; the farmhouse of Oliver Candell, another of Burney's assistants, is wiretapped; and Cancel's past political affiliations are revealed. Ultimately, news of the charges against Ness break in the papers and finally Ness commits suicide: Burney resigns from the Institute and joins Ness's lawyer in a citizens' Committee for Justice which proposes to give the Institute 'the find of public exposure they 'ven. been demanding for others'f and show the world "how poisonous and dangerously vicious such thinking and thinkers are."

The $\operatorname{FBI}$ is mentioned frequently throughout the book. Since the entire story concerns the investigation of the charges against Ness contained in the letter to the $F B I$ there are numerous references in this connection. These frequent references and the context in which they are used could be construed as a subtle attack upon the Nation's security system. Two of the more salient references are:

On pages 88 and 89, for example, Van Ord admits his possession of this document is illegal but insists that his informant is a person of high personal loyalty to the United States and tells Burney, "If you will not accept this statement as an official report despite the fact that it comes from $F B I$ files-well, I'd like to say that you do not display a proper respect. for one of our great Federal safeguards when you imply that it would accept malicious rubbish into its files."

After the first leak to the newspapers, Dr. Burney, in an argument with Van Ord, asks him if he is ready to explain publicly "by what means you came into possession of the FBI letter concerning Dr. Ness ill Taking a completely different attitude, Van Ord replies, "You're using a misnomer when you call Miss Ryan's letter an 'FBI letter.' It has nothing to do with the $F B I$. It is merely a copy of a letter written by a private citizen, to the FBI. It in no way represents an official document of the FBI. I don't think it is improper for us to be in possession of it..." (page 183)

RECOMMENDATION:

For information.

The book "All Honorable Men," by David Karp, was released recently by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., New York, New York.

AUTHOR, DAVID KARP

Daukikarp, born in New York City in 1922, was educated at the College of the City of New York, from which he was graduated with a Bachelor of Social Science degree in 1948, having been delayed by three years' service with the Army in the Pacific. 'His writing career began in 1948. In that year he won the Ward Medal in English composition at C.C.N. Y. and the Ohio State Award for writing the best radio program on social and personal problems, and went to work as a continuity writer on New York City's station WNYC. Now a free-lance radio and television writer, he lives with his wife and son on Long Island.

Mr. Karp's first novel, "One," published in 1953, was a Book-of-the-Month Glub choice. Two years later his second novel, "The Day of the Monkey," was published. (Book Jacket)

A check of the "Readers Guide to Periodic Literature" reflects that stories by Karp have appeared in the magazines, Collier's and the Saturday Evening Post.

Bufiles reflect no information identifiable with the author.
A check of Bufiles re Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., publisher of "All Honorable Men," indicates numerous references in security cases. Bufile #121-38722 reflects that one Alfred A. Knopf, believed identical with this publisher, has been a member of several Communist fronts, and this company reportedly has published a number of books written by persons whose loyalty has been questioned.

THE BOOK
The book, "All Honorable Men," described as a suspenseful novel, is one more addition to the long line of literary efforts concerning loyalty investigations.

The story concerns Dr. Milo Dexter Burney, a famous antiCommunist liberal, educator, assiduous after-dinner speaker, and head of the Rutledge Foundation for the Social Sciences, an 18-milition dollar fund for the advancement of man's study of man. A group of wealthy individuals invite Dr. Burney to join them in a project dedicated to honest, decent conservatism. Indicating that they have become concerned over the drift of this country toward socialism, they des. cribe their intended project as a means to drown socialism in a new conservatism, promoted and propounded by the brightest, the finest, the clearest and most vigorous minds of our country and ultimately to establish an Institute for post-graduate training and research. and work to be called the Institute for American Studies. The purpose of this institute would be to provide selected candidates with an opportunity. to study, describe, and propound the philosophic bases of enlightened conservatism. The Institute would be conducted on the highest levels of intellectual endeavor and would draw its pupils from the United States, Canada, England, and Australia.

Despite warnings that he will find himself mixed up in something which may prove distasteful to him, Dr. Burney decides to accept the offer to head the Institute. The project gets under way with Dr. Burney and the four persons who, proposed the project constituting the Board of Governors which will also operate as a Final Selection and Review Committee on applicants and instructors. These four persons are: Vincent Looke, an immensely wealthy manufacturer of candy and sugar products; his wife, Edna Sutton Locke, a New York socialite; Macy Sutton, young Broadway playwright and half-nephew of Edna Sutton Locke; and Brigadier General J. J. Van Ord, chairman of the board of Locke Products and formerly on the staff of General Patton.

Almost immediately differences of opinion crop up. Dr. Burney discovers his office help is being required to sign a loyalty oath, apparently adapted from forms used by defense plants that have to meet security regulations of the armed forces, and puts a stop to it. At a Board of Governors meeting Van Ord takes exception to a proposed faculty member, a famous political scientist who, in his vigorous defense of Negro rights, once supported Paul Robeson. Burney decides not to make an issue over this teacher's name. Dr. Burney finds Van Ord is particularly ruthless concerning a candidate's past political affiliations. Burney states in his diary that Van Ord ${ }^{t t}$ is armed with a sheaf of lists of un-American organizations compiled from all sorts of sources. He keeps it to himself, as if the lists were secret. During a recess I tried to look at the lists, but Van Ord would not surrender them. Short of demanding them from him, I could not think of any way of seeing them. But I will vigorously fight if the only barrier to the acceptance of a candidate is a chance affiliation with one of Van Ord's malodorous organizations."

Three weeks after the first meeting of the Board of Governors, one of the candidates for selection to the Institute, Joseph Selig Ness, an economist, calls on Dr. Burney and states he wishes to witharaw his name from the panel. In explanation, Ness states that he was in Federal service, first with the OPA and later the Department of Agriculture, and that after he left Government service he learned that some unknown individual had made some charges against him, which charges he had been advised would probably wind up in the thBI's raw files of une valuated data." Burney advised Ness that while they desired to employ only men who had shown a complete devotion to the ideals of their profession, they were willing to accept men who had honestly made mistakes in their past political affiliations and now honestly decilared their mistakes, adding that the Institute did not have access to $F B I$ files, unevaluated or not. Burney stated that Ness's interview had been favorably received by the entire Board and suggested if he let matters ride he would be offered a contract which he would be free to accept or reject.

Memorandum for Mr. Nichols

At a Board meeting two days later, Van Ord reveals that he has new information concerning a candidate already accepted which forces him to the decision that his acceptance should be set aside. Macy Sutton and Van Ord get into an argument which ends in Van Ord. stating he has information "from completely reliable sources" concerning economist, Dr. Joseph Selig Ness. This report described Ness as a one-time member of the Watson Group in Washington, D. C., an organization to discuss creative writing which, although it professed to be, unaffiliated with any national writers' organization, received literature from the League of American Writers, an organization listed as a front organization. After the reading of the report, Dr. Burney, who felt the report was merely spitefulness on the part of someone whom Ness had sharply criticized, is surprised by the reaction of others. Van Ord states a man with such serious charges against him is unfit to teach at the Institute and begins a formal motion, which Dr. Burney rules out of order. Burney reiterates his conviction that any candidate charged with certain political affiliations, or the prior ezipression of certain sentiments, must be given a chance to explain his reasons and his present attitude. A two-week adjournment for the Christmas holidays is the result.

Ness again requests Dr. Burney to withoraw his name, but Burney, satisfied in his own mind that there is nothing to the charges, tells Ness he should fight. When Ness agrees, Dr. Burney tells his two assistants, Oliver Candell and Irving Glucker, of his decision to defend Ness. Glucker who was opposed to Dr. Burney's move to the Institute from the beginning, tries, without success, to dissuade Burney. At the next meeting of the Board of Governors, Van Ord receives the authorization of the Board to assign a private detective agency to investigate the charges against Ness and itwis agreed that Ness will be called before the Board in three weeks.

The weekend before the scheduled Ness hearing, Dr. Burney accompanies Oliver Candell to his farm in Connecticut. Ness and Victor Vircassian, a lawyer notable for his defense of American Communists and fellow travelers, appear at the farm. Vircassian produces a sheaf of folded papers which he states were left in Ness's mailbox that morning. These papers prove to be photostats of the investigator's reports on Ness; however, in addition to data concerning Ness's participation in the Watson group, the report indicates that Ness's daughter, Sylvia Ness Wells, had been a member of a so-called "social, cultural" group which was reportedly Communist infiltrated, and further, that Sylvia had had an abortion performed five years prior to her marriage. Vircassian asks Dr. Burney what he will do when these are presented at the hearing and Burney says they constitute. new charges and that he will close down the hearings to give Ness an opportunity to produce material in defense of these new charges.

Dr. Burney and Candell agree that Irving must have made this material available to Ness. Irving admits supplying Ness with the photostats and his only explanation is that he felt Ness should have them.

At the scheduled hearing, Ness reads a statement in reply to charges that he was a member of the Watson group. When Van Ord attempts to question Ness concerning the additional charges, Burney decrees that Ness is to have three weeks to prepare his answer. Subsequently, Van Ord and Vincent Locke call Macy Sutton to a private meeting where they intim mate there may be some question of Dr. Burney's loyalty. They also reveal that Irving GIucker was the person who furnished Ness with photostats of the reports and that Glucker's sister, Ethel Glucker Saxman, was a lecturer for the Young Communist League and leader of the group attended by Sylvia Trells.

Under pressure from Vircassian, Sylvia admits that everything in the report concerning her is true. Thereafter, Vircassian talks with Irving who admits his sister is a Communist and reveals that approximately eight years previously Dr. Ness had addressed the group at his sister's house. Irving doesn't think Ness knew any of the group were members of the Young Communist League. Meanwhile, Dr. Burney and Candell discover that Candell's farm has been wire tapped.

A news item hints at trouble in the Institute and when Burney asks Van Ord if he is responsible for the leak, Van Ord suggests Burney look to his own personal staff, naming Irving Glucker as a possibility. Burney reiterates his belief that the Ness matter should be kept confidential and backs it up by threatening to assist Ness in the prosecution of a libel, slander and defamation of character suit against Van Ord, the other members of the Board, and the Institute, in the event the matter is not kept confidential.

Irving finally confesses all to Dr. Burney, including his interview with Vircassian. Dr. Burney talks with Vircassian and suggests that perhaps he can persuade the Board to drop the Ness hearing and merely reject his name for "lack of professional competence." Vircassian, while he believes in Ness's innocence, feels they don't stand a chance in view of Syluia's implication and therefore agrees. Once too cowardly to fight, Ness now refuses to give up and Vircassian is finally forced to tell him the truth about his daughter. Meanwhile, Burney sounds out the members of the Board concerning dropping the hearing. Van Ord reveals his investigators have turned up evidence that 0liver Candell had once been a member of the American Labor Party and a member of several Communist front organizations between 1934 and 1939. Burney tells Van Ord he already knew that, and later advises Candell to go back to the Rutledge Foundation.

The Board subsequently refuses to drop the hearing on Ness and votes to make the findings public. Vircassian returns to Ness who has recovered from the blow of learning about his daughter and tells Vircassian he has been offered a teaching job in a small college. Vircassian tells Ness of the Board's refusal, , advises him not to appear at the hearing, and further suggests that he leave the country since after this he will not have any future.

Two days before the scheduled hearing, the "New York Jowrnal American" carries a copyrighted story concerning the investigation being made by the Institute. The following morning, Ness's body is found hanging from a rope noose in the Ness's cellar.

On Monday morning following Ness's suicide, Van Ord calls an emergency meeting of the Board. Dr. Burney acouses them of being responsible for Ness's death and Van Ord suggests no motion is needed to accept Burney's resignation. Locke believes Burney should be fired outright, but the others agree firing Burney will give the Institute a tulacheye. ${ }^{\text {t" }}$ They agree to accept Burney's resignation, but he refuses to resign except on the condition that Oliver Candell's name not be brought into any further statements since he has already resigned and so far has not been mentioned.

Meanwhile, Candell, refused reinsiatement at the Rutledge Foundation because they have received a report of his past political activities, has retreated to his farm in connecticut where he receives a call from Victor Vircassian. Angered by the "ditty deal" accorded Ness and his resultant suicide, Vircassian has organized a citizens' Committee for Justice which he invites Candell to join. Candell refuses and later is very much surprised when Dr. Burney says he is going to join Vircassian. The hastily formed Committee for Justice has come in for much criticism because of some of the people who have joined and Vircassian is about to give it up when Dr. Burney and Irving Glucker appear.

Burney suggests junking the Committee as it is and starting a new Committee to be comprised of more acceptable personages, which will "Give Locke and Van Ord and Sutton the kind of public exposure they've been demanding for others." Burney says, "Let's strip these swine down to their proper size and color and hold them up for inspection. Let's really go at these men so as to show the whole wide world how poisonous and dangerously vicious such thintsing and thinkers are. These men haven't had a fight on their hands before. I propose we give them a fight they won't forget, that we show up that Institute for American Studies as the garbage heap it really is."

MENTION OF THE FBI

The $F B I$ is mentioned frequently throughout the book. References of an innocuous nature appear on pages $37,42,68$ and 130.

The entire story revolves around the case of economist Joseph Ness, whose candidacy for acceptance to the Institute is questioned on the basis of charges against him contained in a letter to the FBI, a copy of which Van Ord has obtained in some unexplained way. The frequent references to this $F B I$ report and the context in which they are used could be construed as a subtle attack upon the Nation's security system. The most outstanding references are set forth below:

On pages 87 and 88, Dr. Burney questions Van Ord concerning the alleged FBI report. When Van ord refuses to reveal how he got the report, Dr. Burney suggests calling the $F B I$ to find out if it is an official report. Van ord hastily replies "This material was given to us by an individual of deeply loyal feelings. It would compromise both this individual and ourselves if we should involve the FBI." In further explanation Van Ord states, "Our possession of this document is illegal. That we have the good of our country at heart is something else again. The courts often take narrow views in such cases, although I have absolutely no shame for what I have done and my informant is a person of high personal loyalty to the United States and everything it stands for. If you will not accept this statement as an official report despite the fact that it comes from $F B I$ filles-well, I'd Iike to say that you do not display a proper respect for one of our great Federal safeguards when you imply that it would accept malicious rubbish into its files."

The report of the detective agency hired to investigate the charges against Ness (page 103) reveals that the letter sent to the Department of Justice ini 1947 concerning Ness's participation in the Watson group was executed by Kitty Ryan, a known alcoholic and hysteric. The report offers the opinion that Miss Ryan had written the letter of accusation because an affair she and Ness had been having was coming to an end.

After the first Ieat to the newspapers, Dr. Burney, in an argument with Van Ord, asks if Van Ord is ready to explain publicly "by what means you came into possession of the FBI letter concerning Dr. Ness?" Van Ord replies, "You're using a misnomer when you call Miss Ryan's letter an 'ribI letter.' It has nothing to do with the FBI. It is merely a copy of a letter, written by a private citizen, to the FBI. It in no way represents an official document of the FBI. I don't think it is improper for us to be in possession of it. I think it was you yourself who pointed out that. the letter is not an official document." (page 183)

Other references in connection with the letter concerning the charges against Ness appear on pages 44, 45, 54, 57, 58, 90, 91, 136, 154, 167, and 274.

FROM

subject: BOOK REYIEW "ACQUITTED OF MURDER" BY WILLIAM EAGLE

SYNOPSIS:

Date: January 15, 1959

Director sent brief review of above book clipped from Sunday Star, 1/11/59, and said: "It might be well for us to review this book. H." Memo to you of $1 / 12 / 59$, advised book had been purchased and was being reviewed in Crime Records Section. O Rook REVIEUS

The Director is mentioned at the bottom of page 251 and top of page 252 when the author says: The police and prosecuting officials of the national capital have not suffered in silence when the courts have struck particularly mortal blows at criminal law enforcement. 'From. J. Edgar Hoover to Assistant United States attorneys who have been deprived of their sleep, they have been vocal enough. Perhaps the most outspoken of all have been Police Chief Robert V. Murray and United States Attorney Oliver Gasch."

On page 251 the author states the Mallory case has probably created the most convenient loophole of all time for hard-pressed criminals. He then refers to a survey in the Washington Star on $1 / 12 / 58$ which allegedly reported that the police and prosecutors were in a race with the clock, since the slightest delay in arraignment might ruin a case against a suspect. . "Assistant United States Attorneys were being frequently awakened in the middle of the night by the metropolitan police or by FBI Agents, when they had a prisoner who had confessed at night, were not sure whether they should wait until the following morning before arraigning him."

In his introduction author says the fear of convicting the innocent has had an overwhelming influence in shaping every system of criminal justice which attaches importance to protection of the individual; that popular sentiment has been that it is better for ten guilty persons to escape than for one innocent per son to suffer. "It must be admitted that the ten-to-one school has never been lacking in horrible examples of miscarriages of justice to support its point of view: On page 5 the author states that one the most awful examples the ten-to-one school was BMS:bsb/an cc - Book Review File, Room :42:37 (2 copies)
cc - Miss Gandy
|the case of Albert Anastasia, "Lord High Executioner" of Murder, Inc. He was allegedly tried for murder in 1921, convicted, sentenced to die and the New York Court of Appeals awarded him a new trial on a technicality and when the state was ready to try him again it was found that all key witnesses had been murdered. "Police debited Anastasia with personally killing thirty-one men and with ordering the execution of another thirty-two." (Page 5) "In American courts, the || procedural dice have always been loaded in favor of the person accused of crime. $1 \mid$ The administration of the criminal law has deliberately been made inefficient, a subject on which I have dwelt at length in my book, Law: The Science of Inefficiency. A person accused of crime at once becomes the darling of the law and enjoys all the advantages which it can possibly bestow on him. " (Page 6)

On page 9 the author states: "Apart from the courts themselves the whole 1machinery of criminal justice is designed to facilitate the escape of persons accused of crime. To be sure, the resources which modern science has made available to the police in the detection of crime are formidable, but they have been negated to a great extent by the greater procedural resources of the defense, and the lack of organization in the machinery of prosecution."

Author takes a slap at district attorneys elected to office who are more interested in getting a conviction than making it stick and says the misconduct of district attorneys is one of the most frequent of the causes for reversing criminal convictions. (Page 10) Author says on page 11 he has selected case histories to prove his allegations against the American courts favoring criminals accused and convicted of crimes rather than theoretical discussion. "All cases selected have involved murders, and the murderers, although found guilty by juries, escaped all punishment except for relatively brief periods of incarceration which they had to endure while their fates were being decided. "(Page 11)' He then cites in great detail seven cases covering 180 pages between the years 1806 and 1931 which are of no value to this memo.

In his last chapter titled "Post-Mortem" he cites statistics on reversals in murder cases in California from 1850-1926; Texas from 1900-1927 and 1924[1944 the latter showing 37 percent reversals out of 1438 appeals in murder cases. (Page 196) He goes into the Illinois Crime Survey of 1929 and the Missouri Crime Survey of 1926 to show the high percentage of reversals in murder cases. The author says the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri achieved undoubted leadership in quashing defective murder and rape cases towards the turn of the century when they found indictments to be fatally defective because of typograpical and misspelled words' and allowed a rapist to go free because the word "the ${ }^{14}$ had been ommitted in the phrase "against the peace and dignity of the state." (Page 199)

He discusses the continually increasing number of reversals based on unlawful arrests, unlawful searches and seizures, confession, delay in arraignments, wiretapping, etc. (Page 203-204) He criticizes the U. S. Supreme Court on pages 206 and 207 for the judge-made doctrineswhich have facilitated the escape of the guilty and not supported by the Constitution. He ridicules the Court's interpretation of wire-tapping laws as 'the fruit of the poisonous tree.' (Page 208-209) He discusses the Mallory case, page 212, and shows its far reaching and devastating effect upon law enforcement.

Author says the penitentiaries have become veritable habeas corpus mills as a result of Supreme Court pronouncements on constitutional rights; that the leading law school is no longer Harvard but Joliet Prison and Alcatraz. He says 3000 legal documents a years are sentforth from Alcatraz; that 400 inmates have typewriters; and prisoners are allowed to keep a maximum of eight books in their cells. (Page 220) Author cites case of "Treetop" Turner, a tall Negro who confessed to killing 2 men in a robbery. He was tried and convicted of murder 5 separate times and each time the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reversed the trial court over a period of 12 years 1945-1957 at which time Turner's case was nolle-prosed and today he is a free man. (Page 222-229)

Author blasts District of Columbia as the Number One haven for criminals in the U. S. He blasts the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the reversible decisions they have made in favor of criminals admittedly guilty, but merely because of a technicality of no real bearing on the guilt or innocence of the accused. (Page 233-256)

Author cites interesting statistics on criminals freed because of insanity |at time of crime, page 240; mentions celebrated Monte Durham case as well as the Dallas Williams case known in Washington as "The Bad Man of Swampoodle." He said Williams record showed 100 arrests, 11 convictions for crimes of violence and after he shot a man in both legs he was tried 5 times but they failed to convict him and in 1957 he was let loose upon the community once more. (Page 242)

Author says most celebrated case of application of the new constitutional $\mid \|$ doctrines is the case of Judith Coplon, arrested by the FBI. After her trial and conviction the U. S. Court of Appeals declared "her guilt is plain, "but they reversed her conviction because she had been unlawfully arrested without a warrant and her wires were tapped. She was again tried and convicted and the higher court again reversed it and she walked out of court a free woman. (Page 243-244)

Author says Mallory decision is the greatest obstacle to successful police work in the District in cases of murder, rape and robbery. (Page 245)

The above-captioned book, written by the well-known cartoonist for the "Washington Post and Times-Herald," contains some 430 cartoons by Herblock as well as some 30,000 words of explanatory text. The book deals with virtually all phases of public life, with cartoons and text on such items as secrecy of Government files, foreign policy, politics, civil rights, Government operations, etc. $U$

Herblock attacks Congressional investigative committees, |such as the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities. (HCUA) He also is critical of the FBI. His comments are a rehash of well-known canards about the Bureau, such as that the Bureau is not as closely scrutinized by Congress as other agencies; that it relies on confidential informants; that the Director has harsh ideas regarding the handling of juveniles; that the Bureau joined with the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities in attacking Cyrus Eaton, etc. $W$

These key points are made by Herblock: $W$
(1) The FBI has not been given the same careful scrutiny as other agencies in the Government. $W$

Herblock mentions that in a column written in July, 1957, Drew Pearson cited some examples of cases in which he said the FBI and the Director received more credit than they deserved, adding that no newspaperman, including himself, had published the complete truth in these cases. (This undoubtedly refers to a Pearson column published on which Pearson erroneously claimed that the Bureau hoged 10.1957 , in which Pearson erroneously claimed that the Bureau hozged the credit in the Nazi Saboteur, Elizabeth Bentley, Greenlease and Brinks cases). (94-8-350Nazi Saboteur, Elizabeth Bentley, Greenlease and si FES 91053
881) $u$

EA: RE REG 33
Herblock then adds: "Certainly this bureau has not"been given the same careful scrutiny as others in government. And J. Edgar Hoover, particularly when he is deliyering pronoufements on debatable subjects, could benefit from the kind of critical appraisal that is given such other public servants as, say, the President of the United States or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. "U

(2) The Director is a good policeman, but when he leaves that role he is. umreliable.

The author says the Director strongly defended the Government's security program and "implied that anyone who criticized this program or disapproved of complete reliance on anonymous informers must be either a Communist or Communist dupe." $U$

Herblock then says: "Mr. Hoover has performed some good work in his capacity as a policeman; but when he tried to get away with that kind of talk he got himself caught, as you might say, flat-footed. Happily, there were at least a few newspapers which said so, in editorials that did not support him in the manner to which he had become accustomed. This was a healthy reaction from members of a free press who should not have any sacred cows - or sacred bulls." $U$
(3) The Director adyocates harsh treatment of juvenile offenders. $w$

It is mentioned that the Director issued a statement in 1958 demanding tougher methods for handling juvenile delinquents and attacking a "distorted notion of justice ${ }^{\text {T }}$ which, according to the Director, had "even permeated our court system." (Introduction to FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, April, 1958). Herblock then states that Monsignor John O' Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, criticized the Director's position, asserting that Mr. Hoover had contributed to police work but this did not entitle him to the position of an oracle in dealing with juvenile delinquency. (File 94-37133 reflects that O'Grady in a letter to the editor of the Washington Star on April 9, 1958 did make such a statement). U
(4) The Director likewise is "not exactly our greatest authority on constitutional law, on what can properly be shown on movies and TV, on how to cope with Communism, or on a number of other subjects on which he has. spoken in oracular fashion. " $u$

Jones to Nease Memo
January 26, 1959
Herblock speaks of Cyrus Eaton, saying that Mr. Hoover and the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities in the spring of 1958 "joined in doing some televiewing-with-alarm." He characterizes Eaton as "a plam-spioken and unintimidated man" who at the age of 75 ."was in no. mood to learn any/ightor Americanism." After Eaton's interview on the Mike Wallace show, the Director declined equal time, but the House Committee, "which had not even been mentioned in the broadcast," demanded and received broadcast time. $u$

Mention is then made that the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities threatened to serve Eaton with a subpoena. "Both the committee and Mr. Hoover explained that they had nothing against free speech, mind you. The committee only wanted to make inquiries, and Mr. Hoover merely deplored 'inaccuracies in the exercise of free speech. '" (Director's quotation taken from introduction of Law Enforcement Bulletin, July, 1958). However, public reaction was adverse, and the HCUA dropped the entire matter. $u$

Herblock then goes on to quote from the Director's speech before the American Legion (September, 1957), in which Mr. Hoover criticized "certain organizations" which thwart the concepts of security, claim to be anti-communist but actually launch attacks against Congressional legislation designed to curb communism. Such comments of the Director, Herblock says, betray Mr. Hoover"'s "imprecise speech exercises," in that he doesn't identify these "organizations." However, according to Herblock, the Director let the "cat out of the bag" a few sentences later when he talks. about "The recent campaign to throw open the files of the FBI is a case in point." $u$

Herblock states: "At this point - or at this case in point - the fat was out of the bag on all four pussy feet, and we discovered the kind of dangerous subversives who were the objects of Mr. Hoover's creeping McCarthyism. First and foremost on anybody's list of 'organizations ${ }^{4}$ which would 'throw open the files of the FBI,' as Mr. Hoover misrepresented the matter, would have to be that familiar group of desperadoes, the Supreme Court of the United States. And Mr. Hoover's tirade was brought on by their 7-1 decision which upheld the rights of people being prosecuted to see government material necessary for their defense - as, for example, the various conflicting statements of an informant like Harvey Matusow. " $u$

January 26, 1959.
These comments then follow on the Director and the Supreme Court: "As one who believes that all government actions are subject to: questioning and comment, I don't hold that federal court decisions are always right or above criticism. There are some I'd quarrel with. But in a choice, I!d certainly take the considered deliberations of the Supreme Court in preference to the statements of a policeman so carried away by his own power and his own press releases that he has taken to impugning the integrity and patriotism of all who disagree with him." $U$

Herblock makes this biting sarcasm:

Abstract

"A more forthright crack at the Court appeared in a mid-1958 report of testimony by Mir. Hoover before a Congressional committee. He said, 'The Supreme Court must come to grips in a realistic manner with facts and join all the forees for goodin protecting society." (Page 174 of Director's Testimony before the Subbcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, January 16; 19.58 ; reflects that Mr. Hoover actuallysaid: "But the courts themselves must also eventually come to grips in a realistic manner with facts and join all forces for good in protecting society.") $u$ "This was pretty big of our most publicized bureau chief. He might have said simply that the U. S. Supreme Court must go. But he was forbearing, though firm. He allowed the members of the nation"s. highest tribunal a chance to give themselves up and to 'join all the forcess for good.' $u$ "Who knows to what heights men like Earl Warren and Hugo Black might have risen had they but obeyed and grasped the opportunity for redemption? They might have traded in their black robes for white hats, to show they were forces-for-good guys instead of forces-for-bad guys. They might even have become Junior G-men. But they remained steeped in their iniquities, steeped in the law, steeped in the old idea that the rights of American citizens are even more important than the barkings of cops and committees. $U$ :

Jones to Nease Memo
January 26, 1959
"Actually, the law that has been operating against the Eastlands, the Jenners, the Walters and the Hoovers is one which has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court, and which appears not in legal books but in economic ones. That is the law of diminishing returns." $U$
(5) Building up a myth of communist strength inside the United States. $u$

Herblock severely criticizes the FBI for trying to create a myth of communist strength inside the United States, when actually there is none - a "basic law" that "the fewer the Communists and the less their influence, the more imminent the danger from them. " $u$.

These are Herblock*'s final comments:
"With all their combined efforts, they have not been able to keep the country's fears of internal 'subversion' whipped up to the fever pitch of the McCarthy era. The Russian gains on world scientific, economic and political fronts have brought a sobering realization of the real dangers which confront us. And the Suspect-Thy-Neighbor groups have been up against the additional handicap that the strength of the Communists in the U. S., which was never large at any time, has dwindled to near zero. $u$
"In their efforts to overcome the law of diminishing: returns, Mr. Walter and Mr. Hoover have tried to proclaim a kind of basic law of their own invention - that the fewer the Communists and the less their influence, the more imminent the danger from them. $u$
"If it were a fact that our internal peril is now as great as ever, that would hardly seem much of a testimonial to these men, whe have supposedly beer eliminating the dire threat that wetre all going to turn red some morning. But in the face of clear and present dangers to their personal prestige, they could hardly be expected to worry about little matters of logic. $u$

January 26, 1959
"The business of hunting Americans guilty of no crimes and of finding 'subversion' in such things as free speech and freedom of assembly is not yet played out. But the chases aren't what they used to be. $u$
"The pursuers are still willing, but the audience is getting tired. And, worst of all, the pursued aren't all co-operating in quite the old way. It takes at least two to make a chase. Somebody has to run away, or maybe drop dead when you point at him. But people aren't dropping the way they used to $\alpha$ or falling for all the old charges. As: for running, the Supreme Court just sits there, handing down judicial opinions. People like Cyrus Eaton sit there handing out personal opinions; and instead of fleeing when a pursuer comes roaring up, they just stand and spit in his eye. $U$
"Perhaps Mr. Hoover has detected something in the air. Lately I've been reading lots of newspaper stories about an FBI list of Ten Most Wanted Men. This sounds like an echo of the old Public Enemy days when Mr. Hoover built his reputation by catching criminals, and by upholding the laws instead of trying to dictate them. $U$
"Jenner has bowed out. And if the business of pursuing | law-abiding citizens keeps dropping off, I don't know what people like Eastland and Walter are going to do for action. Some time when they come up for new appropriations, Congress could suggest that they go chase themselves." $U$

The text is accompanied by several cartoons (wïhich have previously been published), all of a derogatory nature to the Bureau and the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities. $u$

Dr. Guy L. Roberts gives minister's viewpoint on delinquency in captioned book. Has written book to express belief that church has a vital role to perform with problem children and their families. He states that the church should be first source of help to individual and family. It is in an excellent position to counter fear and hate, common with problem children, with faith and love. Dr. Roberts believes that "problem young people" are basically religious, but their religious lives are functionally weak. A more realistic and creative type of Christian education is needed. This will combat philosophy of "self-expression" and "empty freedom" which rules out the claims of "self-sacrifice" and "self-control." By neglect, we have made the modern family what the Marxists by social planning have made it. Failures in community living produce delinquency. The relative failure of the probation system is due to failure to establish adequate counseling relationships. Church is in position to make available consecrated men and women properly equipped for this task. However, a key factor in any planned approach to delinquency problem is adequate counseling service in schools. Dr. Roberts holds more hope for future as churches are finding and accepting a primary responsibility in alerting the community to its responsibilities. Dr. Roberts does not refer to Director or FBI. No information in Bureau files identifiable with Dr. Roberts, a Methodist minister.

Re: "HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS'

AUTHOR GIVES MINISTER'S VIEWPOINT ON DELINQUENCY

Rober
Dr.
R.
"How the Church Can Help Where Delinquency Begins," by Guy L. Roberts is essentially a ministerts viewpoint regarding problem children. Dr. Roberts has specialized in psychology and counseling. He earned his Ph. D. degree at the University of Pittsburgh and pursued other graduate work at Columbia University and the University of Glasgow (Scotland). Heattended the Seminary of Boston University and studied at Southern Mlinois : University and the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Roberts is currently the minister of the First Methodist Church, Clarkston, Washington.

Nothing in Bureau files identifiable with Dr. Roberts. The Director and FBI are not referred to in this book. The author uses various other authorities and statistics based in case studies to support $\because$ position. (Book jacket)

CHURCH HAS VITAL ROLE TO PERFORM

This book was written to express the belief that the church has a vital role to perform with problem children and their families. While a growing number of religious leaders know this fact, the general public and vast majority of church members do not. Dr. Roberts discusses the various bases of juvenile delinquency from the various so-called authoritative sources. Dr. Roberts notes that the pattern in the course of juvenile delinquency differs from case to case but in all cases "love" is inadequately expressed. A primary function of the church is to make (Christian) love applicable to the individual and the family. It should be the first source of help. (pp. 7, 35)

ALL CHILDREN ARE POTENTIAL DELINQUENTS

According to Dr. Roberts, many children have problems that may become too difficult for them to solve. Thus, all children may become problem children or delinquents because of the stress of these insolvable problems. One child in a family of several children can become a delinquent because no two children in a family have the exact environment or problems. Nany seemingly unimportant environmental factors such as comic books may "trigger" the immediate pattern of delinquent response. However, with most problem children, fear and hate have won over faith and love. Of course, the parent should step in to assist potential delinquents with their difficult problems, but the church is in excellent position to step in and re-create around problem children patterns of wholesome social relationships based on understanding, faith, and love. Dr. Roberts described "love" as meaning discipline and firmness, as well as tenderness. (pp. 31, 40, 42-43, 144)

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont

SHALLOW-ROOTING OF CHRISTIAN IDEAS

Among Dr. Robertsr conclusions is a statement "These problem young people of ours-of our churches, our communities, our homes-mare basically religious." However, religious lives of delinquents may be idealistically strong though functionally weak. We need to provide a more realistic and creative type of Christian education. Right ideas have been accepted uncritically but concepts and convictions were shallow-rooted and the deeper emotional drives, such as resentment and aggressive feelings, left largely unaffected. (pp. 73, 74)

SELF-EXPRESSIONS AND EMPTY FREEDOM

Dr. Roberts quotes a source stating that we are doing by neglect much of what the Marxists have done by social planning. In this connection, the modern family makes three fundamental mistakes. "First it sees a marriage as mere contract, sécond, it understands marriage as a private affair, and third, it adopts a philosophy of self-expression and empty freedom which rules out the claims of self-sacrifice and self-control." He states that the church has the only adequate philosophy of family life to counter this weakness and has access to the family as no other agency has. Countering this deficiency in family life will aid the prevention of delinquency. Dr. Roberts indicated that he does not mean to say that the frightened and irresponsible parent can delegate the authority to the church, "but his church is the one supporting ageney that can work with him every step of the way from the birth of the child to its maturity. . ." Problem children must suffer the consequences of the church's failure to live up to their potentialities. (pp. 75, 76, 92, 96)

ROLE OF THE CHURCH IN THERAPY

The counseling function of ministers and the role of the church in therapy are questioned by professional and lay workers in religious and social services. In some instances where resentment and anxiety are not too deep or alienation not too complete, the problem child may be able to adjust to other persons in the church atmosphere of fellowship and love. However, many children are beyond this and need the help of a trained counselor. Dr. Roberts claims that the church today has recognized this need and is training its ministers to be counselors. He does not believe technical training is enough as counseling is more an art than a science, the art of establishing a relationship.

Memorandum to Mr . Belmont  Re: : $H$ HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS'"

Based on a study of 200 delinquent boys and girls in Texas, the book set forth the following conclusions relating to the delinquents and their homes:
" (1) In about 75 per cent of the homes of the respondents, parents have shown some attempts at attending church.
(2) There is a definite lack of interest on the part of the parents toward active participation within the organization of the church.
(3) There is a noticeable lack of religious literature in the homes of the respondents--found in only one-third of the homes.
(4) There is little religious training in the homes, but a great desire on the part of many of the respondents for such training.
(5) Churches have had some contact with over three-fourths of the respondents; two-thirds of the respondents claim church membership and slightly over three-fourths of them claim regular or occasional attendance at Sunday school and church, particularly in early childhood.
(II) Positive attitudes toward the Church, the Bible, and Jesus, and positive beliefs in the existence of God seem to indicate a tacit acceptance of the values of God, the Bible, Jesus, and the Church." (p. 72, 73)

On this premise, Dr. Roberts feels that the problem youth are basically religious. Thus, the church has a solid entree to aid the problem youth and their families.

PROBATION HAS BEEN ONLY RELATIVELY SUCCESSFUL

In the past, probation has been only relatively successful. The relative failure of the probation system is basically a failure in establishing an adequate counseling relationship. The Church is making available to the courts the consecrated men and women best equipped to establish this relationship. Certainly, a key factor in this program is an adequate counseling service that begins in the schools. Two centuries of scientific progress, industrial development and social changes have brought so many changes in social functions under the control of secular agencies that the role of the church and its influence have greatly lessened in modern life. The trend in changing; the churches of the community are finding and accepting a primary responsibility in alerting the community to its responsibilities:

Delinquency is failure in community living. The prevention and cause of delinquency (and mental illness.) reside in the community. (pp. 144, 147-150)

BACKGROUND:

By letter to the Director dated March 2, 1959, attached, Mr. Jerome Eden, of the Eden Press, Mount Vernon, New York, transmitted a copy of his newly published book entitled as captioned. In his note Mr. Eden expressed the hope that his book will throw more light upon the menace that threatens freedom-loving peoples everywhere. It is noted that the bibliography of this book lists "Masters of Deceit," on page 152 as Item 19.

In the acknowledgement to his book, Mr. Eden mentioned, among other things, that all he knows about the biological, life-energy of the living organism, of its functional identity with the sexual energy in man, he is indebted either directly or indirectly to the work of Dr. Wilhelm Reich. The preface to the book indicates that Eden is an educator and a member of a civilization which has reached a perilously critical stage in its development. Eden has been deeply concerned over local, national and planetary events of recent years. He states that it. is his conviction that what is happening has its roots in the personal relations between the individual man and woman, parent and child, child and teacher; further, that it is man who perverts the warm streaming love of the child into a cold, dirty "act" of pornography.

INFORMATION IN BUFILES:
Bufiles reflect that Dr. Wilhelm' Reich founded The Orgone Institute at Rangeley, Maine, -in 1942 to commercialize his theory of cancer treatment through control of biological energy. Reich was subject of an Internal Security investigation,' (Bufile 100-14601) and we have a voluminous file on his foundation (Bufile 105-11461). In 1954 the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) secured an injunction against Reich and his associates for their quack methods of curing cancer and other serious diseases. In October, 1957, our files indicated at that time, that Reich was serving a prison sentence for contempt of court for violation of this injunction.

M. A. JONES to DELOACH MEMO

Since November, 1955, Reich and members of his staff bombarded the Bureau with complaints of perjury, fraud and other irregularities in handling of the FDA and court action against them. As a matter of policy, the Bureau has not been acknowledging communications from Reich and his associates. According to Mr. Eden's book, Reich died on November 3, 1957.

Further, files reflect that we received letters from Mr. Jerome Eden dated 5-31-58, pertaining to the work of Dr. Reich, and another letter dated 10-13-58, wherein he forwarded to the Bureau's attention a pamphlet dealing with psychopolitical warfare. Neither of these two communications was acknowledged.

RECOMMENDATION:

That instant letter from Mr. Eden and his book not be acknowledged by the Director.

This is to advise that the above book written by Dr．Bernard Schwartz，former chief counsel，House Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight has been reviewed．In the book Schwartz details the ex－ periences of his relatively brief career investigating the six Federal regulatory commissions．There is nothing new in the book that has not been disclosed by public hearings of the subcommittee and in newspaper accounts of the hearings，nor is the FBI mentioned．

Schwartz cites the historical and legislative background of the six regulatory commissions，the problems and obstacles he faced in conducting his inquiries and his observations relative to his ouster as chief counsel of the subcommittee．

Schwartz recounts the alleged illegal influences exerted by Thurman A．Whiteside，Miami attorney，on Richard A．Mack who was a commissioner for the Federal Communications Commission．His allem gations related to the activities of Mack and Whiteside in connection with the granting of a TV Iicense for Miami Channel 10 to Public Service Television，a firm which Whiteside represented．Our investime gation of the Mack－Whiteside matter resulted in the indictment of these individuals on $9 / 25 / 58$ ，for conspiracy and obstruction of justice in the U．S．District Court，Washington，D．C．This matter is awaiting trial．

Schwartz also restates allegations of improper influence by Sherman Adams on behalf of Bernard Goldfine in connection with the Federal Trade Commission and Securities Exchange Commission matters involving Goldfine．
$\therefore$ Schwartz altso recommends the transfer of the judicial＂ powers now vested in regulatory commissions to the ordinary Federal courts to eliminate the existing evils in the regulatory commissions．

It is noted that the recent press indicated that Congressman Harris was quoted as stating that schwartz' book merely reconfirmed his opinion that the greatest mistake the subcommittee made was employing schwartz in the first instance.

FROM

date: March 24, 1959

The above-captioned individuals were interviewed by SA C. Benjamin Fulton upon referral from the Director's Office on March 23, 1959. Mr. Christy advised that he is an advertising consultant in Washington, Pennsylvania and that he has written a series of stories slanted for children to be read to children by their parents. He stated he had spent several years completing the series which was illustrated by Yolanda Lengyel.

The complete volume is entitledyStory Telling Time." Mr. Christy explained that it was his hope that he would be able to see the Director briefly just to say hello and leave the series of stories with him so that Mr. Hoover could review the stories. He informed that he and Mrs. Christly would be in Washington, D. C., for a few days, and it is their hope that the Director may have a moment to see them. It was explained to the Christys that the Director was not in and that no encouragement could be given them regarding a meet with Mr . Hoover due to the extremely heavy schedule and the great number of urgent matters confronting him. In addition, it was pointed out to Mr . Christi that due to the great number of similar requests he received and in view of his position as Director of a Federal investigative agency, it has been necessary for Mr. Hoover to adopt a policy of declining to comment, offer opinions or suggestions regarding such articles.

They desired to leave the volume and requested that it be brought to the Director's attention. It is noted that Mr. and Mrs. Christy appeared to be very personable, high type individuals and their admiration of the Director and the FBI was sincere. While in Washington, D. C., they are stopping at the South Gate Motel in Arlington, Virginia.

Bufiles do notryeflect any information identifiable with the Christys or with the artist Yolanda y Lengyel. A cursory review of the stories indicate they are fairly well written; however, they are in the first person and depict in some respect the childhood life of Mr. Christy. The series is self serving and quite obviously fictions to a great extent. The volume is attached for information. 1959

Jones to DeLoach memorandum
In view of the Director's heavy schedule, it is believed he should not take time to see the Christys. If you agree, Christly will be contacted by SA Fulton, the Director's regrets will be expressed and the brochure of stories will be returned to him.

RECOMMENDATIONS:
(1) That the Director not take time from his busy schedule to grant the Christys request for an interview.

(2) That the brochure of stories be returned to Mr. Christy and the Director's regrets expressed.

ADDENDUM:
An attempt was made to contact Mr. Christly at the South Gate Motel on 3-25 without success. He was reached on the afternoon of 3-26 and advised of the Director's inability to meet with him for a few minutes. The Director's regrets were expressed. Mr. Christly had hoped that Mr. Hoover would be able to comment on his volume of stories for children. He stated it would be appreciated if the volume could be mailed to him at his home address inasmuch as he would not be coming back downtown to Washington. He was informed that this would be done. It is noted the Christy's were planning to do further traveling before returning to their home at Washington, Pennsylvania/ CB/f subject: BOOK REVIEWSfTHE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS, AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

SYNOPSIS:

In The Case of the Sleeping People, Dr. Dale Alford is portrayed as a patriot who selflessly stepped forward to champion the cause of segregation at a time when he believed the Federal Government was illegally forcing racial integration in Little Rock, Arkansas, schools. He describes Little Rock as the battleground where democracy is pitted against dictatorship of the Federal judiciary. Among causative factors contributing to the integration crises, the authors name. ${ }^{2}$ Warren-dominated ${ }^{[f}$ Supreme Court, which is charged with being influenced by for ign social-economic philosophy. and by an "international conspiracy ${ }^{\text {tr }}$ which seeks to divide the South and destroy our country from within. Neither the FBI nor our investigation of the Hays-Alford election is discussed. The Director is mentioned only in connection with Masters of Deceit, from which quotations: are cited by Dr. Alford. ## RE: BOOK REVIEW-THE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS, AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD

The Critical Congressman Writes

When Congressman Dale Alford (D-Arkansas) delivered his vitriolic attack on the FBI and the Department of Justice from the floor of the House of Representatives on February 11, 1959, he mentioned a book which he and his wife had written about the "occupation" of Little Rock by Federal troops and about how the present Attorney General had set himself and his Department against the constitutional rights of free Americans. Mrs. Alford delivered a copy of the book to the Bureau on March 20, and it has been reviewed in the Central Research Section pursuant to the request of Mr. DeLoach. (Memo Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolson, dated 3/24/59)

Segregation-A Patriotic Cause
The Case of the Sleeping People, by Dale and $\mathrm{L}^{\mathrm{r}}$ Moore Alford, 142 pp. , is an apology for the stand taken by Dr. Dale Alford during the Little Rock school integration crisis of 1957 and during his successful campaign for Congress in 1958. As an outspoken segregationist member of the Little Rock School Board, Alford opposed the majority of the board in its short-lived effort to integrate local high schools. After a special election in September, 1958, indicated Little Rock voters' support for school segregation by a 3 -to- 1 margin, Alford stepped forward to declare himself a write-in candidate for the congressional seat which had been occupied by "moderate" Brooks Hays for 18 years. Alford's successful eight-day whirlwind campaign was based solely on the school segregation issue. His victory over the "moderates" is portrayed in The Case of the Sleeping People as vindication of the Alford themenamely, that the fight to maintain segregation in the South is a patriotic cause, one which pits the concept of popular democracy against the dictatorship of the Federal judiciary.

Democracy vs. Judicial Oligarchy
In developing their theme, the Alfords point to the use of Federal troops and the action of the Justice Department in implementing Supreme Court decisions as illegal and unconstitutional Federal interferences with States' rights. As causative factors behind the judicial decisions and the

RE: BOOK REVIEW-THE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS, AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD

organized efforts to bring about integration in the public schools, Alford's campaign speeches charge that the "Warren-dominated" Supreme Court was influenced in its school-desegregation decisions by foreign social-economist Gunnar Myrdal and that the mass agitation for immediate integration results from an "international conspiracy" which seeks to divide the South and to destroy the Nation from within. There is no specific development of the Alford theory that an international conspiracy is responsible for race agitation in Arkansas or any other place, but he brings communism into the picture by quoting directly from the Director's book, Masters of Deceit. (The Case of the Sleeping People, p. 78)

References to Masters of Deceit

The impact of Masters of Deceit on the Alfords is apparent throughout their book. For example, when describing the moment of decision in which her physician husband elected to abandon his medical practice in order to run for Congress, Mrs. Alford wrote as follows: 'Pointing to the book, Masters of Deceit, by J. Edgar Hoover, he (Dr. Alford) said, 'Remember that our enemies and their dupes and the skeptics will do everything they can think of to stop our solving this mystery and bringing out the TRUTH. ' " (ibid., p. 92) The book contains several additional references to Masters of Deceit, and quotations from it were credited in the acknowledgments. One reference to Masters of Deceit which appeared in Dr. Alford's televised speech just prior to the Little Rock election on the integration issue in September, 1958, is quoted as follows: "This is no longer a so-called Southern problem, so my appeal is to all America to wake up before the 'Masters of Deceit' succeed in placing the 'Trojan horse of Communism' in our midst through the guise of integration. " (p.72) Other direct quotations are used to illustrate the need for education in democracy in order to overcome communism. (pp. 78, 117) It is noted that Dr. Alford, in one of his speeches, used a direct quotation from Masters of Deceit without reference to its source. (p. 117) This is a portion of the same quotation regarding the need for education in democracy, referred to above, which was properly credited in the text on page 78. The FBI is not discussed at any place in the text, and there is no mention of the FBI investigation to determine whether election laws were violated in the Alford campaign last fall. There is, however, indication that there was congressional controversy over the seating of Alford as the Democratic Representative from the Fifth District of Arkansas.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont

Evaluation

The Case of the Sleeping People succeeds only in making the point that the Alfords look upon the integration problem in Little Rock, Arkansas, as the crucial issue which will decide the future of States' rights in America and that Dale Alford has come forward at great personal sacrifice to act as a patriotic spokesman against the impending threat of Federal dictatorship. There have been more penetrative and persuasive writings. which treat the integration problem. In this book, the reasoning underlying the Alfords' stand has been only superficially exposed.

chief investigator for State District Attorney's office had injected himself into the investigation and was being assisted by Sgt. Badeaux. As a result of information developed that members of nudist movement in New Orleans and elsewhere have transported wives interstate for "wife-swapping parties," New Orleans Office advised by airtel 10-15-58 that White slave Traffic Act case had been opened. This investigation still pending ( $31-86928$ ) although numerous U. S. Attorneys have declined prosecution.

Badeaux devoted part of book to Guy Banister, former FBI SAC, who assigned Badeaux to investigate organized degeneracy in 1958, when Banister was Assistant Superintendent of New Orleans Folice Department. He indicates he only trusted Banister because of corruption in New Orleans Police Department and when Banister was dismissed "after it was charged that Banister, a highranking police official, had capriciously drawn his revolver in a public place," Badeaux's investigation bogged down and this was the first in a series of unfortunate incidents which blocked investigation of organized degeneracy. Primary target of Badeaux's investigation into nudism and its allied degenerate activities is one Louis Stewart, who was the primary subject in Bureau White Slave Traffic Act investigation. On 12-22-58 Stewart pleaded gullty in U. S. District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, to two counts of sending obscene matter through the mall and was sentenced to 18 months in custody of Attorney General on each count to run concurrently. This investigation handled by postal authorities. This matter has been followed in Crime Research Section since 7-30-58 as research matter in connection with our sex offender file.

Budeaux's book has two main themes, one pertaining to corruption in New Orleans Police Department and city government and the other to a farreaching ring of sexual degenerates which has its roots in nudist colonies, primarily the Three Lakes Nudist Camp in Louisiana. Badeaux was sergeant on police force New Crieans and resigned in 1958 after public officials allegedly thwarted his efforts to uncover organized sexual degeneracy because some of higher-ups in community were involved. He castigates Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison who allegedily purposely overlooked the sexual degeneracy situation, although his polttical success was pised on a "clean government" campaign. Badeaux refers to New Orleans Superintendent of Police Provosty A. Dayries as inept and bungling, and telle of administration which constantly threw obstacles in the path of the organized serual degeneracy investigation.

The book spares little in its description of the sexual orgies and there are reproduced photographs, letters, sex orgy club applications, etc., which in themselves make Badeaux's book an obscene publication.

Jones to DeLoach memorandum
Eufiles reflect Badeaux, as Agent in Charse of Division of Intelligence Affairs, New Orleans Dolice Department, was in charge of Communist Farty investigations in that city, and has testified bcfore committees on coraunism.

- He has also testified that National Association for tho Adivancement of Colored people io a Communist Iarty pava, and is an outspoken sezresationistchapter by chapter summary of book attached.

RECOMTEMDATIONS:
(1) That this book be discussed iniormanly with postal authorities by the Liaison Section relative to its apparent obscenity and transmittal through the mails.
(2) If approved, our New Orleans Office will be instructed to contact Badeaux and set him straight regarding our SAC's transfer from New Orleans and the fact that this matter was reported to the Bureau by our New Orleans Ofilice and appropriate attention is being civen to it.

DETAILS

BACKGROUND

'The Underworld of Sex," by Hubert J. Bedeaux, was forwarded to Mr. DeLoach anonymously. The book is unbound and is privately printed, distributed through the Herald Press, Inc., New Orleans, Louisiana. It is identified as an advance edition, for reatricted circulation only. It is further Identified as "A Documented Account of Organized Sexual Degeneracy." It was printed in 1959.

GENERAL OUTLINE AND OBSERVATIONG
The book opens with a quotation in the preface from the Durector's speech before the National Convention of the American Legion on September 19 , 1957, which pertains to the peddlers of obecene pictures and writinge which have flooded this nation, and the need for an arouged public to stop the flow of obacene Literature, as well as the necessity for longer sentences and heavier tines against the purveyors of such material. The preface ends by repeating a part of the quotation relative to an aroused public being necesaary, and Eideaux atds that the people must also not countenance any attempts to prevent it from boing aroused.

This book has two main themes, one pertaining to corruption in the New Orleans Police Department and city government and the other to a farreaching ring of sexual degenerates, which has its roots in nudist colonies, primarily the Three Lakes Nudist Camp. Badeaux was a sergeant on the police force in New Orieans and resigned in 1958 after public officials allegediy thirarted his efforts to uncover organifed sexual degeneracy, because some of the higherups in the community were involved. He castigates primarily Mayor deLesseps 8 . Morrison, who allegedly purposely overlooked the sexual degeneracy situation even though his political success was based on a "clean government" campaign. Badeaux refers to the Superintendent of Police, Provosty A. Dayries, as inept and bungling, and told of the administration who constantiy threw obstecles in the path of the organized sexual degeneracy investigation.

Badeaux's investigation primarily involved the Three Lakes Nudist Camp, which he claims is the center of sexual degeneracy in the New Orleans area. He further belleves that the international nudist movement is nothing but a cover-up for unspeakable sexual activities between its members, sometimes reaching nationwide proportions through "wife-swapping parties." The primary target of Badeaux's investigation into nudism and its allied degenerate activities is one Louis Stewart, and he is the primary subject in an Investigation opened by the Bureau under the White Slave Traffic Act clasatfication in October, 1958. This investigation by the Bureau is still pending although numerous U. S. Attorneys declined prosecution. On December 22, 1958, Stewart pleaded guilty in United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, to two counts of sending obscene matter through the mail, and was sentenced to 18 months in the custody of the Attorney General on each count to run concurrently. This investigation was handled by postal authorities. This matter has been followed in the Crime Research Section since July 30, 1958, as a research matter in connection with our sex offender file, because of the alleged degeneracy involving interstate travel on a national basis for immoral purposes.

REFERENCES OF INTEREST TO FEI

In Chapter 10, Badeaux reproduces some letters pertaining to his investigation in New Orleans, Louisiana, as a sergeant on the police force into organised degeneracy. On Page 271 a letter appears from Senator Allen $J$. Ellender to the president of the Greater Gentilly Civic Council, Inc., of New Orleans, to the effect that he is referring lis request for Federal assistance to the FBI. On Page 273, 2 letter from the Director to Senator Ellender dated 2-21-58, is reproduced, advising that our New Orleans Office developed intormation that the activities of certain members of the Three Lakes Nudist Camp were being investigated by the New Orleans Police Department, the State District Attorney's Office in New Orleans, and the U. S. Postal Inspectors in New Orieans. The Director's letter informed Senator Ellender that a copy of his letter and its enclosures were forwarded to the Chief Postal Inspector.

On Page 272, Bideaux writes that the investigation into the activities of certain members of the Three Lakes Nudist Camp referred to by Mr. Hoover was nothing more than an attempt by the New Orleans Police Department to hide the existence of the international degeneracy ring. He adde he furnished the FBI in New Orleans with clear evidence of the international degeneracy ring and that perhaps it was forwarded to Mr. Hoover and perhaps it was not. He then aays, "At any rate, a short time after Mr, Hoover wrote the letter to Senator Ellender, the Agent in Charge of the New Orleans Office of the FBI announced his retirement." Badeaux also stated that contrary to what Mr. Hoover stated, the State District Attorney's office in New Orleans condacted no investigation.

Despite Badeaux's claim that the State District Attorney's oftice had not entered the Investigation, our New Orleans Office advised by alrtel dated 8-5-58 that the chief investigator for the state District Attorney'e oftice, John J. Grosch, had injected himself into the investigation and was being assisted by Sgt. Badeaux.

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

Aa a result of information being developed that members of the nudist movement in New Orleans and elsewhere had transported their wives interstate for "wife-swapping parties," the New Orleans Office advised by airtel dated $10-15-58$ that a White slave Traffic Act case had been opened. Thie investigation is still pending (Buflie 31-86928), although numerous U. S. Attorneys have declined prosecution.

Badeaux also devoted part of his book to Guy Banister, former FBI SAC. He stated that he was assigned to investigate organized degeneracy in 1956 by Banister, who was then Assistant Superintendent of the New Orieans Pollce Department. He indicates that he only trusted Banister, and Chapter 2 states Banister was dismissed from the New Orleans Police Department "after it was charged that Banister, a high-ranking police official, had capriciously drawn his revolver in a public place." Badeaux indicates Banister's dismissal was the first blow in a series of unfortunate incidents which blocked his inveatigation of organized degeneracy.

SUMMARY OF CHAPTERS

PREFACE

After quoting the Director regarding obscene literature, Badeaux atated that for two years while an employee of the New Orleans Police Department he investigated organized sexual degeneracy. His conclusion was that organized nudism is a menace to the moral structure of America and that nudism has decelved many into forwarding a nefarious aim which is to reduce human beings to the atatus of beasts. Budeaux remarked, however, that a week after linking the nudist movement to widespread sexual degeneracy he became the target of such abuse and harassment from official sources that he was compelled ultimately to resign from the police department. His evidence was suppressed, newspapers maintained an editorial sllence, clergymen pretended not to know what the furor was about, and a huge gambling probe was undertaken to outshine his investigation. He claims that sexual degeneracy was being practiced by some of the nicer element in the seclusion of their nice homes, which is the reason why his investigation became bogged down.

PROLOGUE

This deals with the election of deLesseps S. Morrison as mayor of New Orleans on a clean government campalgn, and the fact that actually the city government did nothing to clean up the city. It aleo attacks Provosty A.

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

Dayries, who "came to the Dapartment sufficiently bereft of knowledge and qualifications in police work to insure his complete dependence on someone cise in making deciaions." Dayries is demcribed as a tool for Mayor Morrison.

CHAPTER 1

9 . Badeaux discusses how his investigation got under way in 1956 at the direction of Mr. Cuy Banister, then Assistant Superintendent of the Nev Orleans Police Department. The Investigation was to cover sexual degeneracy, sexual misbehavior, sex crimes and pornography in general to determine whether there was any pattern or organization. He stated that just as the inveatigation began to uncover what they were seeking, Banister was dismissed from the police department.

CHAPTER 2

Badeaux refers brielly to the dismiseal of Banister from the police department and states that the police department intormation office gave out mialeading data to the press concerning the charge of the pistol-drawing incident in a public place. He states thie misleading data reflected unfavorably on Banister. He etates that Banister insisted that he continue his investigation, but that officialdom constantly thwarted his efforts.

CHAPTER 3

In this chapter Badeaux continues the discussion of how his efforts were thwarted by high officials and how he finally prosented some of his evidence betore a grand jury. He stated that the grand jury went out of office before he could make any complete and subetantial case.

CHAPTER 4
B te ux here del le wh hie efforte to place an undercover agent in a nudist colony and his final decision to use his brother. Don Bademux, as this agent, when others of low moral character were too eager to infiltrate the nudist movement. He remarks, however, that his brother was completely taken in by the nudists at the Three Lakes group and did not consider them to be immoral persons.

CHAPTER 5

Badeaux takes up further the fact that his brother is hoodwinked by the nudists and states that while his investigation revealed that one Louis

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

Stewart was the ringleader in sexual orgies, his brother sctually defended Stewart as being an upright individual. Badeaux manages to obtain poaveasion of a large collection of pornography which belonged to stewart.

CHAPTER 6

This chapter continues with the fact that Badeaux's brother refuses to believe Stewart is an immoral person, and Badeaux's efforts to obtain pornographic material which was in Stewart's posmession.

CHAPTER 7

This chapter deals with the philosophy of nudism and ite international aspects as well as its efforts to closis its immorality through a eonnection with religion.

CHAPTER 8

Badeaux attempts to identify nudism as a subtle tacet of Marxian revolutionary tactics. He points out that Christian religion and its concomitant, the sacredness of family life, are repugnant to the communists, and that nudism is the mont effective onslaught yet devised against the married state and family life. He points out that nudiot propaganda is nearly as effective as communist propaganda.

CHAPTER 9

This chapter deals with how nudists attompt to inject reltgion into their cult in an effort to make their activities righteous, and further goes into the philonophy of the nudist movement and the beauty and sanctity of the human body.

CHAPTER 10

This pertains to the record of Louls Stewart as an outstanding oxample of the exaggerated claims of nudists to propriety. Badeaux states that In 1939
, as a young boy, stewart was convicted of the crime of robbery in Virginia, and sentenced to the pentientiary for 20 years. In 1940 he recelved 3 conditional parcon contingent upo filt being removed to the Vigina hereceivec schoodtior Boym. In October, 1941, he was released from penal custody by a conditional pardon from Virginia's governor. The chapter also contains reproduetions of

applicationsfrom persons recrutted into nudism by Stewart. The remainder of the chapter deals with the bixarre and disgusting activities of some of the nudists invarious sexual orgles.

CHAPTER 11

This chapter pertains to the arrest of Stewart by Badeaux and the revealing of his true immorality to the brother, Don Bedeaux, who until this revelation had protected Stewart.

CHAPTER 12

This chapter is a reproduction of some of the evidence which Badeaux obtained and while he states that much of it is too revoling to be reproduced, that which he used is extermely disgusting, reflecting the letter:

- written back and forth between wife-swappers, showing sezual adherence as well as masochistic orgies. He reproduces some photographs of nudes and seminudes, as well as former applications filled out by persons for entry into the basest kind of sex clubs.

CHAPTER 13

This chapter deals with pornography, which is used by the nudists to stimulate themselves and to induce others to join the movement. This chapter shows they have complete contempt for God, religion, and normal sexual relationships.

CHAPTER 13

(Badeaux has two Chapter IJ's, Obvtouely an error)
This chapter deals with some of the disgusting activities of the degenerates, and Bedeaux quotes them in their descriptions of some of their experiences. He also reproducen applications for entry into sexual degeneracy rings or clubs.

CHAPTER 15

This chapter contains further correapondence between wifeswappers and their immoral semal activities.

CHAPTER 16
This deals further with the efforts of the officials to euppress the evidence Badeaux had obtained.

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

CHAPTER 17

Chapter 17 deals with the fact that some allegedy unscrupulous authorities tried to suppress Badeaux's activities by revealing that his brother was a member of the nudist camp, and talses up an arrest by Badeaux and other officers in Okaloosa County, Florida.

CHAPTER 18

This chapter dealg further with Badeaux's alleged troubles with his superiors, who attempted to suppress his information, and the fact that Police-Superintendent Dayries became highly incensed beciuse of all of the publicity which went to Badeaux as a result of the breaking up of the sex ring. Badeaux resigned from the Department.

CHAPTER 19

Chapter 19, as set forth before, deals with the fact that Badeaux did receive recognition from some quarters, and reproduces some letters pertaining to his activities. As set forth previously, one of these is a letter from the Director to the Greater Gentilly Civic Council.

CHAPTER 20
Chapter 20 deals further with E teaus's resignation and the fact that he was called before the grand jury to wstify, but he doesn't go into what his teatimony involved. Chapter 20 pertain to a write-up of the results of the investigation.

- Book Reviews
"REDEDICATION TO FREELOLI"
By Benjamin Ginzburg
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER
Captioned book reviewed by Central Research Section. It strongly attacks all loyalty-security programs, includes numerous critical references to the Bureau and the Director, and parallels views of Cooks article in "The Nation" in October, 1958. Ginzburg claims that public has now been conditioned to accept continued existence of "antilibertarian institutions" (congressional investigating committees, prosecution of individuals for their political views, and loyalty-security programs). He deplores expansion of loyalty-security programs and claims that rights of communists cannot be abridged without undermining rights of all citizens. Alleges that spurious communist menace was created by Dies Committee in 1930's as part of Dies efforts to discredit the New Deal. Postwar revelations of communist espionage lent further credence to the myth of the menace of communism. When loyalty program of Truman Administration was promulgated, the communist menace was, in effect, established by law. Ginzburg argues that loyalty-security programs are not effective in keeping spies out of Government, and he calls for their immediate and complete elimination and for a return to the Bill of Rights. Ginzburg born 2-15-98 in Russia and holds degrees from Columbia and Harvard. From 1955 to 1957 employed as research director for Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Eights. Investigations of Ginzburg by Bureau in 1542, 1951, and 1955 developed information that he is considered a "progressive," a "left winger, ${ }^{\text {" }}$ and an evolutionary, as opposed to a revolutionary, Marxist. Declared "eligible on loyalty" by Civil Service Commission in 1051. Ginzburg announced as one of contributors to October, 1008, issue of Emergency Civil Liberties Committee (ECLC) publication "Eights" which was to have dealt exclusively with FBI but which was not published.
RECOMLENDATION: None. For information. The book is enclosed for return to Inspector DeLoach in accordance with his request.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "Rededication to Freedom"

DETALLS

By memorandum to Mr. Tolson dated March 12, 1959, Inspector DeLoach adivised that Irving Ferman had furnished an advance copy of Ginzlburg's book and recommended that it be reviewed by the Central Research Section.

The "Antilibertarian Institutions"

Ginzburg's booik, published by Simon and Schuster, is an expanded version of an article by him which appeared in the July 6, 1954, Issue of "The Reforter" and which was previously reviewed (121-32694-22), Ginzburg concedes that there has been an impiovement in civil liberties since the death of Senator Joseph McCarthy. He claims, however, that the American public has been conditioned to accept the continued existence of the "antilibertarian institutions" which have developed in the past 20 years "in the name of tighting the menace of Communism." These are identified as the "public pillorying" of the "holders of unorthodox opinions" by congressional investigating committees, the prosecution of individuals for their political beliefs rather than overt zets, and a "vast network" of loyalty-security programs which "punish" individuals for their "unorthodox ideological sympathies and associations." Since these institutions will not disappear voluntarily, positive action must be taken to "shake them off." (pp. 1-19)

Freedom Is Indivisible

Ginzburg deplores the "expanding universe" of loyalty-security programs which now are applied not oniy to Federal employees but members of the Armed Forces, employees of private industry working on classified contracts, seamen and longshoremen, and individuals applying for passports and Government pensions. He claims that these programs are directed against not only communists but suspected communists, genuine or suspected former communists, members of present or former organizations in which communists are known or suspected to have been active, and all persons suspected of supporting causes champloned by Communist Party, USA, "or any other suspect organization." He argues that, since freedom is indivisible, the rights and liberties of communists cannot be abridged without undermining the rights and liberties of all citizens. (pp. 20-58)

Spurious Menace

Ginzburg claims that a spurious communist menace was created during the 1930's by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, as part of Congressman Dies' efforts to discredit the New Deal. In 1941, a "Dies-inspired" rider was attached to the Department of Justice Appropriation Bill which ordered the FBI to investigate Government employees who were members of subversive groups or who advocated the overthrow of the Government. In complying with this provision, described as "the greatest and most fateful step" in promoting the myth of the communist menace, the Executive Branch included membership in communist front groups as one of the cxiteria for determining fitness for Government employment. This led to the acceptance of the principle of guilt by association. Ginzburg concedes that those responsible for administrating the loyalty-security programs are sincere in their bellefs regarding the gravity of the communist menace but claims that, after 20 years of "emotional warfare" against communism, it has become impossible for them to make an objective appraisal of this threat. (pp. $59-101$ )

Spy Scare

Cinzburg then claims that the spurious communist menace was afforded a "powerful impetus" by the revelations of communist espionage activity after World War II. He claims that, since Dies had by then retired from the scene, the views of the FBI and other intelligence agenctes prevailed. He charges that the FBI "enthusiastically accepted" the information furnished by Elizabeth Bentley because it provided a "retroactive justification" of the Bureau's previous investigations of subversive activity. At the same time, he alleges, the Bureau admitted (in a letter to the White House dated $2-1$-46) that it would be practically impossible to prove her charges. As a result of hearings "inspired and provoked" by the FBI, the House Civil Service Subcommittee established the principle that persons of "questioned loyalty" should be excluded from Government service and that all doubts should be resolved in favor of the Government. When this was followed by the Executive Order of President Truman establishing the loyalty program, the reality of the communist menace was, in effect, established by law. (pp. 102-124)

Loyalty-Security Programs Ineffective

As a result of the Cold War and the fusion of the communist menace with the traditional hatred of spies, the idea of protecting the country from communist espionage has developed to the point where it has become an "absolute value," which takes precedence over all other social interests, many of which are of equal or greater importance. Ginzburg claims that the loyalty program has not only falled to uncover any spies but did not prevent the Government employment of Judith Coplon and Joseph Petersen (who passed classified information to Dutch officlals). Claiming that all loyalty-security programs will become inoperative in a period of all-out war because of the delays involved in obtaining clearance, he argues that they are a "luxury" which the Nation can afford only in peacetime. (pp. 125-138)

The book concludes with a brief review of the unfavorable public reaction to the Alien and Scdition Law of 1798 and the Palmor Raids which followed World War II. In the latter connection, the Director is described as the link between the old Bureau of investigation and the present FBI. These examples are cited in support of the author's call for the American public to overcome its "moral and intellectual lethargy" and talre immediate steps to "dismantle all the antilibertarian machinery that we have erected to combat the mythical Communist menace in the United States and go back to the Bill of Rights." (pp. 139-165)

Other Charges

In addition to the above attacks on the Bureau, Ginzburg also charges that:

By tapping telephones, conducting "promiscuous" surveillances, and compiling "dossiers," the FBI has become "a law unto itself." (pp. 42-45)

The Bureau "launched a shameless and illegal lobbying drive" to reverse the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Jenciss case. (pp. 49-50)

The FBI, although unable to corroborate the information furnished by Elizabeth Bentiey, treated it as a confirmed fact. (p. 52)

The FBI is Hely to succumb to the temptation to "fabricate" evidence. (p. 57)

The Director, in spite of the decrease in Party membership, insists that the communist menace is greater than ever and characterizes those who are fighting for civil liberties as "dupes. of the Communist conspiracy, " (p.63)

The case against Judith Coplon was dismisged because the FBI had tapped her telephone and had arrested her without a warrant. (p. 103)

The FBI was able to "usurp the function of policy making on loyaltysecurity, "and the Truman loyalty program should have been named the J. Edgar Hoover loyalty program because the Director was "primarily responsible for bringing it about." (p. 106)

The FBI "lobbied" lor an expansion of its functions and powers under the loyalty program. (pe. 113-117)

> Although Secretary of State Dulles was investigated by the Bureau, "who clears the FBI"? (p, 135)

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "Rededication to Freedom"

The Director, in a memorandum to Assistant fittorney Ceneral Donovan dated October 18, 1924, admitted that the Department of Justice had no right to investigate the aetivities of communists after World War I. (p. 160)

Miscellaneous Criticism

Ginzburg is also highly critical of the use of confidential informants; the "abuses" in the trials of Alger Hiss and the Rosenbergs, and the Smith Act and Internal Security Act of 1950. He lauds Cyrus Eaton's criticism of the FBI over a national television network; describes Fred 3. Cook as an "experienced and disinterested newspaperman"; and relies heavily on Max Lowenthal's book as the source for his comments on the Palmer Raids.

Observations

Ginziburg's book shows a complete lack of any awareness of the menace of communism, Reinhold Niebuhr, who wrote the introduction, felt it necessary to point out that, in his opinion, "the Communist conspiracy was more dangerous than the author assumes." Cinzburg's complete naivete on this question is best illustrated by his claim that the extensive communist infiltration into practically every aspect of Amertcan life during the 1980 's actually "served the cause of democracy."

In view of the announcement that Ginzburg would be one of the contributors to the special issue of the ECLC publication "Rights" on the FBI, it is interesting to note that the views expressed in his book, "Rede iication to Freedom, " closely parallel the underlying theme of the article by Fred J. Cook in the Cctober 18, 1958, issue of "The Nations" (pp. VIII, 82-83)

The Author

Ginzburg was born February 15, 1898, in Russia and resides in Arlington, Virginia. He was graduated from Columbia University in 1919 and received his Th. D. from Harvard University in 1926. Outside of the periods 1948-1951, when he operated a radio station in Norwalk, Connecticut, and from 1855-1057 when he was research airector of the Senate Subeommittee on Constitutional mights, he has been employed in vaxious capacities as a writer. Applicant-type investigations of Cinzburg were conducted in 1042 and 1955 in connection with his' Federal employment. He was investigated under the Loyalty Erogram in 1951 and declared "eligible on loyalty" by

Re: "Rededication to Freedom"
the Civil Service Commission. These investigations disclosed that Ginzburg is regarded as a "progressive," a "left winger," and an evolutionary, as opposed to a revolutionary, Marxist but one who is not disloyal to the United States. A summary of the information available on Ginzburg was furnished to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary by letter dated October 6, 1855. In July, 1958, he submitted a statement urging the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to reject proposed legislation which would authorize the Secretary of state to refuce passports to communists. Ginzburg was listed in the September, 1058, issue of "Rights," official publication of the ECLC as one of the contributors to the October, 1958, issue of that publication which would be devoted exclusively to the FBI. This issue has not been published as yet. (77-14552; 100-419026; 121 32694; 100-384660-450)

CENTRA RESEARCH MATTER

DATE: April 28, 1959

SYNOPSIS:
Captioned book, reviewed by Central Research Section, discusses tactics used by Chinese communists in handling prisoners of war and is summarization of lengthy Army study on communist indoctrination of U. S. Army prisoners of war in Korea. In chapter entitled "Espionage for the Enemy," Kinkead indicates that some 75 repatriated prisoners of war had been "recruited to act as spies and had returned from prison with definite missions as enemy agents in the United States." Investigation conducted by Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence into this matter has completely debunked this allegation. Army has only one case with adequately substantiated or documented information concerning former prisoners of war who admitted accepting communist espionage missions. FBI mentioned on page 57, 64 , and 81 in a nonderogatory fashion.

Memórandum to Mr. Belmont Re: "In Every War But One"

Book is Expansion of Article Written in 1957

This book is an expanded version of an article entitled "The Study of Something New in History, " written by Eugene Kinkead in The New Yorker for October 26, 1957. It represents a discussion of tactics used by the Chinese communists in handling prisoners of war and is actually a summarization of an intensive, five-year study made by the U.S. Army of the effect of communist indoctrination on those of its men held prisoners during the Korean War. Bureau files reflect no derogatory information regarding Kinkead, an editor of The New Yorker. They do, however, indicate past difficulties with The New Yorker in that it has been somewhat irresponsible and unreliable with regard to references concerning the Director and the FBI. (94-3-4-230-80)

Army Study of Repatriated American Prisoners of War

In Every War But One reflects the analysis of a detailed study by the U.S. Army of almost four thousand case histories of American soldiers taken captive in the Korean conflict who were returned to us. The study began in the Summer of 1950 and ended on July 29, 1955. Its broad aims were to evaluate both the communist treatment of Army prisoners, and the various problems that this treatment raised, including its military, medical, psychiatric, propaganda, and legal effects. In addition, the study noted the possible hazard to national security posed by American soldiers who had undergone prolonged ideological pressure at the hands of the communists and had been since discharged from the service.

Korean War Unique

According to the author, the Korean War was unique in that it was the only war in which the United States has fought that American prisoners of war have posed a grave problem. The survey indicated that (1) during the entire conflict there was not a single successful American escape from a permanent prison camp; (2) twentyone American prisoners chose to remain in Korea; (3) almost one out of three collaborated in some manner with the enemy; and (4) $38 \%$ died in captivity--a higher prisoner death rate than that of any of our previous wars including the Revolution.

Well-Planned Communist Program

As a result of its study, the Army has concluded that the techniques of indoctrination, interrogation, and manipulation of the flow of prisoners' mail, "were part of a well-planned communist program which had three aims. First, the program sought to disseminate propaganda favorable to communism and unfavorable to the West across the world, particularly in the critical areas of Asia and Africa.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "In Every War But One"

Second, it sought to control prisoners with a minimum of difficulty and a minimum use of guards. Third, it sought the outright conversion of American prisoners to communism--or, failing that, at least their acquiescence to the possible rightness of the communist position. The Army believes that this program succeeded in achieving its first two aims. Propaganda was made and was successfully disseminated; prisoners were controlled with a minimum of effort. The Army feels reasonably doubtful about their achievement in the third aim." (In Every Ẅar But One, pp. 123, 124)

Some 75 Espionage Agents Recruited by Communists

Kinkead, who assembled the material in this book in an interview pattern, credited Captain Bert Cumby, who was in charge of a special interrogation team in the Army's Far East Command with stating,
"'In the Far East intelligence section, during reprocessing, we were naturally very much on the lookout for such espionage agents among American returnees. Actually, some seventyfive did turn up on initial and subsequent screening, either in the Orient or on the high seas before getting back to port in the United States. They were well prepared, we found for their assignments. They had codes and fairly explicit instructions as to how to reach and recognize their future contacts-equipment that revealed how substantial was the planning that had gone into this project and how protracted the aims the Communists had in mind for these men. For example, they were instructed to make their initial contact, in most cases, only after six or seven years had passed after their return to the United States.' " (In Every War But One, pp. 77, 78)

According to Cumby,
"'The enemy had not only re-meducated this entire group of captives to come back and spy of their own free will against their country, but this re-education was so successful that it stuck--except in the few cases of those who confessed. Fortunately for us, their confessions implicated the others. We should, I think, be careful neither to overestimate nor to underestimate this. We knew it was a possibility to begin with; and we were completely prepared for the possibility. Provision has been made, of course, for these men to be carefully watched in the future. Actually, the majority probably do not realize that they are known Communist agents. ${ }^{1}$ " (In Every War But One, pp. 78, 79) :

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "In Every War But One"

Later in the book, Cumby reportedly stated,

Abstract

"'Keeping track of known, and also of potential, enemy agents is, of course, a two-fold task. . When they remain in the service, it's fairly easy. Once they leave it, the problem increases somewhat. We certainly can't and we don't want to, keep every potentially disloyal civilian returnee under observation for the next ten years. But the whereabouts of some of them have to be known so that they can be watched. It's a matter, of course, that has been considered by the top-level security people in the Army and definite plans have been made on how to deal with the problem. "" (In Every War But One, p. 188)

Army Investigation Into Espionage Allegations

As a result of these allegations of espionage, an investigation was conducted into this matter by Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence (ACSI) and the following information in essence was brought to the attention of the Attorney General on March 13, 1959.

Allegations of espionage on the part of former prisoners of war in Korea by Kinkead were credited by the author to Captain Bert Cumby, an Army officer stationed in West Germany. ACSI, at the request of the Under Secretary of the Army, looked into this matter in detail and prepared a summary of the background of those prisoners who allegedly had a communist mission in the United States. ACSI has completely debunked this allegation since the information came from a source who proved to be unreliable and who was unable to substantiate his allegation in any part. The original source of the information is Preston E. Richie, a former Korean prisoner of war, who had a record of collaborating with the communists while imprisoned. He has now been discharged from the Army and is being considered for investigation by the Bureau. Army interrogations and investigations have also failed to substantiate the allegation.

With the exception of one case, the Army has no substantiated or documented information concerning former prisoners of war who admitted accepting communist espionage missions. There have been instances in which allegations were made that certain repatriated prisoners of war were "suspected" or "believed" to have accepted communist espionage missions, but those allegations were never adequately substantiated.

On February 27, 1959, the Secretary of the Army received a request from the House Committee on Un-American Activities, over the signature of Frances E: Walter, Chairman, for detailed information concerning this allegation that appeared in Kinkead's book. In addition, this allegation was debated on the Dave Garroway show March 16, 1959, by the author Kinkead and Brigadier General S. L. Marshall, Retired, who represents. a Detroit newspaper. ## Facts

The Army furnished us in excess of 300 counterintelligence files on returned prisoners of war whom the Army classified as security risks. We, in turn, reviewed these files to determine if we should open security investigations and also whether the cases should be referred to the Department for an opinion as to whether treason investigations were desired. Our standards for instituting security investigations of such returned prisoners of war were outlined in SAC Letter 53-15 and in practically every instance a security investigation was conducted. Also, in practically every instance the Department declined to authorize the institution of a treason investigation. A full treason investigation was conducted on each of the 21 prisoners of war who elected to remain in Korea. ( 100-400646)

The Batchelor case was handled entirely by the Army. Nothing can be identified with the unknown vice president of an oil company.

IN Western Germany, where business and industry prosper and politicians plan for when the grand old Chancellor retires, numerous citizens brood about a divided Germany and about Germany's probable role as the number one target for nuclear bombardment, if and when the sword of Damocles under which we all live falls. Among them no one, surely, broods more furiously than Hans Hellmut-Kirst, author of "The Seventh Day,"* a powerful propaganda novel that elequently champions a neutralist philosophy and pleads for peace.

It is not necessary to agree with Mr. Kirst's fundamental position to feel terrified by his book. As long as men of might threaten each oth-

Hans Hellmut Kirst er while juggling H-bombs, books like these are certain to terrify. The special quality of Mr. Kirst's book is that, although it is not distinguished as fiction, it is sardonically amusing as well as appalling.

Hans Hellmut Kirst, who served for twelve years as a professional soldier in the German Army, is one of the ablest and most popular novelists in post-war Germany. His bestknown work is a trilogy about the adventures of a humorously cynical soldier called Gunner Asch, in which German militarism is mercilessly ridiculed. That series was so popular in Germany that some people believe it contributed greatly to a general lack of enthusiasm for the Federal Republic's new army.

If "The Seventh Day" should be as popular, many Germans may feel that all is lost indeed, that some inept and well-meaning idiot is certain to start the first pebble rolling that will bring with it an avalanche of atomic bombs.

A Curious Chronicle

This is a curious novel written in a curious form. At least half of it consists of transcripts of radio broadcasts, public speeches, military reports and minutes of cabinet and NATO meetings that chronicle six days of multiplying disaster-from a rising in Poland and fighting between the forces of the two Germanies to Soviet intervention and general atomic war. By the seventh day no one is left alive, at least in Central Europe, to listen to communiquês.
The other half concerns the destinies of more than a dozen strategically located characters. These colorful and neatly silhouetted people move by so rapidly that following their affairs is somewhat breath-taking. Mr. Kirst hasn't tried to characterize them in depth, but he has certainly made them representative of many walks of life and has involved them in a huge variety of pitiful and dreadful circumstances.

"The Seventh Day" combines the bitter anger of a prophet denouncing the sins and follies of Nineveln and Babylon with the despairing pessimism of utter hopelessness. Nothing can be done, Mr. Kirst seems to say. Men of goodwill are helpless. The momentum of the cold war is too great. Statesmen, governments and peoples are too committed to prepared positions. Any small incident can launch a train of events that will destroy us all.

Dashes of Cheer Added

Such resigned gloom does not make for exactly cheerful reading. Nevertheless a certain amount of cheerfulness keeps breaking into "The Seventh Day." Mr. Kirst is fond of many of his characters. He writes about them with humor as well as with pity. And in his quotations from the jargon of government officialdom, he writes with just enough parody to be satirically. entertaining while at the same time always sounding authentic. Nevertheless, expert as his statements by broadcasters, generals and politicians may be, they do grow tiresome. There are too many of them.
"The Seventh Day" in its general account of the outbreak and spread of the third world war is coldly realistic and thoroughly believable. That it should be believable is perhaps its most terrible comment on our unhappy age. But "The Seventh Day" is not just a book of general warning; it is a ( yeculiarly German book. Mr. Kirst is parcicularly distressed by the mere existence of two German states, and the very idea of their rival existence seems more outrageouls to him than it may to American readers. And he suggests more than once that the Federal Republic of Western Germany is almost as completely dominated by the United States as is East Germany by the Soviet Union.

This idea, of course, seems preposterous from our side of the Atlantic Ocean. If neither German government truly represents the German people, Mr. Kirst suggests, a third government uncontaminated by foreign influence might be able to do so. But with the grim realism that controls his entire book, he does not allow his advocates of a third all-German government to accomplish anything. They, too, are helpless in the track of the avalanche.

The other novels about the third world war that I have read seemed to me like rather dreadful science fiction. "The Seventh Day" may not be notable as fiction, but most of it is so convincing that it doesn't seem like fiction at all.

The "Memorandum To All Bureau Officials and Supervisors" dated January 21, 1959, initiated a book review control by the Publications Desk, Central Research Section. This program is being closely followed to make it as efficient as possible. Current experience indicates that the mechanics involved in referring information regarding potential books for review to the various sections or divisions at the Seat of Government can be streamlined through the implementation of a form. The enclosed form. isirecommended as an effective means for expediting and cutting down on dictation and paper work of this kind.

In this connection, Central Research Section will continue to recommend for review books critical of the Director or the Bureau which have not been reviewed or considered for review. Books relating to communism generally, Bureau investigations, crime, law enforcement, and the like, which may be of interest to a particular section or division, will continue to be referred to the interested sections or divisions to determine whether the particular book should be obtained and reviewed.

In a little over three months, a total of twenty-six books have been routed through the Bureau for consideration as to review. These books have covered categories including the Mafia, segregation, Central Intelligence Agency and national security, proposed legal advisors for indigent defendants, prisoners of war, international communism, civil rights, corruption in city government, juvenile delinquency, sabotage, guilt by association, criminal law enforcement, and Federal committees.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the enclosed, suggested form be submitted to the Forms Desk, Training and Inspection Division, for approval.

 SYNOPSIS:
ELK REVIEWS

The Book Review Control Desk was established in the Central Research Section in January, 1959, as a focal point of information on matters pertaining to book reviews to be conducted at the Seat of Government (SOG). Through i the establishment of this desk, it is now possible to immediately determine the status of any book review which either has been done or is being done at the Bureau as well as books which have not as yet been reviewed. The main function of this desk is to keep aware of newly published books and to route the information to the appropriate section or division at the SOG for determination as to whether a book review is warranted. In the past six months twenty books have been reviewed at the sIG. The, Book Review Control Desk maintains tickler copies of these reviews for sixty days and maintains a card index concerning the books for a period of one year. Since the desk was established, it has received and resolved approximately forty inquiries concerning book reviews. The work procedure has been streamlined to eliminate unnecessary paper work, and the desk was established to function without any increase in personnel. Thus, the cost to the Bureau has been insignificant while the value of the desk as a focal point of evaluation and control has been proven by the number of inquiries it has resolved. No present changes are contemplated in the operation of the desk.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the Book Review Control Desk continue to operate as a function of the Central Research Section in its presently established form.

DETAILS:

Purpose:
The purpose of this memorandum is to evaluate the functions of the Book Review Control Desk in the Central Research Section.

Origin:
In December, 1958, Inspector John F. Malone recommended that a central control and repository for book reviews at the SOG be created by placing such responsibility with the already established Publications Desk in the Central Research Section. Inspector MaIone's recommendation was approved and the Book Review Control Desk was established in January, 1959. (100-352546-1755)

Responsibility:

The new desk was to have responsibility for (1) recommendations, in general, and evaluation of requests concerning what book should be purchased and reviewed at the SOG and which division or section should prepare the reviews; and (2) maintenance of a properly indexed record of the pending and completed reviews, assignments, and an approximate period of time.

On January 21, 1959, a memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors was distributed advising of the establishment of the desk, its purpose, and its proposed method of functioning.

Control:
(1) A main control file ( $62-46855$ ) on the subject "Book Reviews" was opened in accordance with approval of a recommendation made in a memorandum from Mr. Sullivan to Mr. Belmont dated January 28, 1959. The original or a copy of all memoranda:": on book reviews is routed to this file.
(2) A card index of all books ordered for review or assigned for review was created-and is currently maintained by the Book Review Control Desk. The card maintained on each book includes the author; title; identity of the official, section, and division recommending purchase and review of the book; identity of the section and division to which the review was assigned; and the date the review was completed.
(3). In the memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors on January 21, 1959 , instructions were set forth that a tickler copy of all book reviews should be designated for the Publications Desk to assist in the proper maintenance of an index system on book reviews. Once each monthithe main control file on book reviews is checked to assure that everyone preparing book reviews is complying with these instructions.

Policy of Reviews:

The Book Review Control Desk recommends for review books critical of the Director or the Bureau; books relating to communism generally; books concerning Bureau investigations, crime, law enforcement, and the like. Other books are reviewed upon the specific request of the Director or other Bureau officials. When the subject matter is general, the Central Research Section does the review. Where the subject matter indicates that a specific section or division would be interested because of related work interest, the book is routed for a decision as to whether a review should be done as well as for assignment of the review. The person responsible for the functioning of the Book Review Control Desk reviews daily publications and other periodicals to be alert for newly published books so that they may be brought to the attention of the appropriate section or division.

Streamlining Procedure Adopted:

The routing of books for review or for recommendation as to assignment for review to another section or division by the Book Review Control Desk initially involved dictation and paper work which it has been possible to simplify. A form was devised and approved through which the dictation and paper work have been eliminated during the course of routing books or information concerning books to other sections or divisions by the Book Review Control Desk.

Over-all Value:
The over-all value of the function of the Book Review Control Desk stems from its role as a focal point of information concerning book reviews at the SOG. Whereas formerly there was duplication of effort, such as in two reviews being conducted by different section at the SOG, and there was ofteh time wasted through the efforts required to ascertain whether anyone else at the SOG was doing or had done a review that was contemplated, today it is immediately possible to: (1) determine if anyone already has done or is dong a review of a specific book; (2) obtain a copy of a review recently done; and (3) avoid duplication of reviews by various sections.

The value of the desk in this regard is shown by the fact that in six months approximately forty inquiries have been made of the desk by other sections or divisions at the SOG to resolve questions concerning book reviews.

Reviews Conducted:
In the 6 -month period of its operation, the Book Review Control Desk has considered for review approximately 51 books which from one source or another came to the attention of the Bureau. Of these, 20 have been reviewed either by the Central Research Section or other sections to which routed. Seventeen were determined not worth reviewing and the remaining fourteen were routed to other sections for a decision as to whether a review was warranted and were rejected on the basis of the decision of other sections.

The reviews which were done are broken down as follows:

Domestic Intelligence Division - 10

Cost of Operation:

The establishment of the Book Review Control Desk has not added any significant cost to the Bureau's budget. The work was absorbed by combining the new function with that of the previously existing Publications Desk without any increase in personnel. The streamlining procedure used to facilitate routing eliminates the paper work of the new function, and the over-all value of the desk as a focal point of information has been established through the number of inquiries resolved by the desk.

Contemplated Action:
The process of maintaining tickler copies of reviews for review index cards for reference raised the question of the desirable length of time to maintain such records. Based on practical experience, it appears most advisable to maintain the tickler copies of reviews in accordance with standard Bureau instructions; that is, for a period of sixty days. Thereafter, inquiries concerning the reviews can be resolved either from the review index cards maintained or through the main control file. The review index cards have proven invaluable for reference purposes, and it appears most desirable to maintain them for one year in view of the numerous inquiries which can be resolved through them and without reference to files.

Future Action:

The Central Research Section will continue to closely evaluate the work of the Book Review Control Desk to be alert for further streamlining procedures which may be introduced in connection with the function of this desk. At present, it appears no changes are necessary as the desk is functioning smoothly. In six months another status report on the operation of the desk will be submitted.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: "SEEING THROUGH THE RED" SPEECH BY EUGENE LYONS EEVIEN

LXONS SPEAKS ON SOVIET PLAN FOR WORLD CONQUEST

On May 8, 1050, Eugene Lyons, Senior Editor of the Reader's Digcit, gave a talk concerning the Soviet formula for world domination before The Executives' Ciub of Chicago, Illinois. This speech was made available to the Burearby SACR. D. Auerbachthrough the medium of the Executives' Club News, dated 1 Tay 15, 1959, a copy of which is enclosed. The lixecutives ${ }^{\prime}$ Club of Chicago is a group of over three thousand businessmen who frcqueatly sponsor prominent speakers at luncheon meetings of the club. Among those who have appeared as guest speakers at the forums are Harry S. Truman, former President of the United States; Stuart Symington, U. S. Senator from Missouri; James D. Witchell, Secretary of Labor; Harold R. Medina, Judge, U. S. Court of Appeals; and Dr. Konrad Adenauer, West Cerman Chancellor. (34-1-12565-29)

The Director and the EBI are not mentioned in Lyons' speech.

FREE VORLD REIUSES TO UMDERETAND NATURE OF CORMTUNEN

Lyons emphasized that the great majority of the free peoples of the world have refused to understand the real nature of the communist challenge, and the Amcrican business community has been particulariy vulnerable on this scoro. In this conncction, he pointed to financicr Cyrus Eaton as one of the formost preachers of appeasement of communism today. Lyons refcrred to tho pressure applied by financial and businoss interests for ciplomatic recognition of Sovict Eussia in the thirties, the aid of thousands of foreign technicians (many of them Amoricans) for Stalin's first five-year plan, and the cordial reception universally given by American businessmen to Anastas Mikoyan, Soviet Deputy Premier, on his recent visit to the United States.

KREMLIN PLAYS DUAL ROLE

In speaking of negotiations with the Soviets, Lyons said that for the communists, negotiation is not and never can be a road to genuinc accommodation-that they are inflexibly committed to permanent revolution with one communist world as its goal. The Kremlin plays a dual role--that of heading a conventional government, and at the same time as the spearhead of a world rcvolutionary movement. Agreements entered into by Moscow in its role as a government, even

GOVIETS ATEATD OF AKMOUT WAR

According to Lyons, the Soviet leaders are ruthless but are not suicidal maniacs and actually fear a real var cven more than the Vostern powers. They bavo to reekoa with the poosibility of rebollion in the satellitea and they con not count the allogiance of their own subjects as a cortainty especially if the coaflict too's an unfavoxable buri. of fundamental policies, to the articulation of shared interests, and to the investigation of the conditions for securing such policies and interests. The task, in its preliminary aspects, is one of stock-taking, of ascertaining and assessing with as much explicitness and specificity as possible, by utilizing all the insights and operational techniques offered by the contemporary social sciences, the policies actually sought and effectively applied by different decision-makers in their external interactions. From such stock-taking might emerge a map, as it were, of the configurations of public order that in fact presently obtain on a transnational scale. In its fullness, the task involved has been aptly discribed:
(1) to develop a jurisprudence, a comprehensive theory and appropriate methods of inquiry, which will assist the peoples of the world to distilguish public orders based on human dignity and public orders based either on a law which denies human dignity or a clenial of law itself for the simple supremacy of naked force; and (2) to invent and recommend the authority structures and functions (principles and procedures) necessary to a world public order that harmonizes with the growing aspiratons of the overwhelming numbers of the peoples of the globe and is in accord with the proclaimed values of human dignity enunciated by the moral leaders of mankind. ${ }^{18}$

This is the more precise statement of the challenging opportunity thrust upon scholars of international law. It is hoped that with or without further harassment, Mr. Jenks may turn his very considerable powers to the fuller exploitaion of this opportunity.

Masters of Deceit. By J. Edgar Hoover. New York: Henry Holt & Co., 1958. Pp. 374. $5.00.

Works such as the collage, African primitivist statuary, the canvasses of Jackson Pollack, and the finger painting of talented monkeys have revived debate recently over the classic problem of æesthetics-what is Art? Philosophers have noted that there are at least three analytical perspectives from which one can approach this question-the intention of the artist, the intrinsic merits of the work, and the subjective reaction of the viewer-and that one's judgment about a controversial work usually will depend upon one's vantage point. Although this seems a singularly inapposite opening for a review of J. Edgar Hoover's bestselling volume on communism, I find these exceedingly helpful terms in which to consider Masters of Deceit.

Hoover deals with five topics. He describes the personalities and doctrines of international communism from the days of Marx and Engels to the present,

[^37]a description which includes a sketch of early American communists. He discusses communism's appeal to certain Americans and why most of these people have broken with the theory or the party. The contemporary American Communist Party is portrayed in its "open" activities and, in a separate section, in its underground operations. Finally, Hoover offers a refutation of the "false religion" of communism and presents a brief program for insuring that Americans "stay free."

The Author's Intention

Why, in 1958, did Hoover choose to write this book, and at its specific level? In his foreword, the author tells us that, since 1919 (when he made his initial "extensive and penetrating study" of the communist movement), he has been a close observer of communist ideas and activities. Now, he felt, it was vital to give the American public, without "sensationalism," the "basic, everyday facts of communism," presented "in almost primer form." Since Hoover describes Communist Party literature in the United States as "written in a simple style and slanted to the average reader," Masters of Deceit may be taken as an attempt to fight fire with fire.

His intention explains a good deal about the tone and flow of the volume. For example, the narrative of "day-to-day" life in the American Communist Party features passages such as the following:

Eleanor is washing the dishes. Her husband, Henry, has just gone to work. The two children are scurrying around the house, ready to leave for school.
Suddenly, there is a knock at the door. It is Ruth, who lives across the strect. Ruth is chairman of the East Side Communist Club. Her husband, Robert, is state secretary of the Communist Party and a full-time paid functionary.
"Starting the day out just right," smiles Ruth. "The kitchen is all cleaned up. You can come and help us." "1

Portraits of the personalities who shaped the communist tradition are in the same genre. Here, for example, is Hoover on Marx:

He was an intelligent child, but temperamental. At school his marks were superior, and his capacity for work, a trait that was to continue all through his life, tremendous. But he did not make friends easily, perhaps because of self-pride. He made arrogant remarks and wrote satirical verse. He was a "smart" young man, but already vain, bitter, and rebellious.

Strangely, his heart held an inner love for a home-town girl, Jenny von Westphalen. . . . She was beautiful, charming, and of a socially high rank, much higher than that of the Marx family. She, too, was desperately in love, but she feared to tell her parents. What would they think-the $\underset{\text { Marx }{ }^{2}}{\text { daughter }}$ of Privy Councillor Ludwig von Westphalen marrying Karl Marx ? ${ }^{2}$

1. P. 147.
2. P. 14.

Those who might wonder whether Marxist-Leninist theory lends itself to "primer" form will find this author equal to the challenge. Marx, he explains, "joined two very old ideas:"
(1) That everything in the universe, whether a blade of grass, a human being, or society itself, is constantly changing and at the same time is in conflict. This is called dialectics. (2) That God doesn't exist and the world is composed of "living" matter. Hence, man is walking dust, without spark or image of his divine Creator. This idea is called materialism; hence, dialectical materialism. ${ }^{3}$

Whether Hoover struggled through draft after draft to produce these simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people, or whether they tripped effortlessly from his pen, we cannot know. We do know that he eschewed the services of a polished ghost writer; that he set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description. Sophisticates who no longer find McGuffey's sentence structure as challenging as they did in earlier years will not derive resthetic satisfaction from these pages. They, however, do not compose the audience for which the author has written his book.

The Work's Intrinsic Merits

When primers are written about politics, however, literary quality is only one issue involved. More fundamental is the question whether the popularization has escaped the dangers of oversimplification. The author has not been altogether successful in this regard. For example, he outlines the theories of Marx and Engels but does not explain why these doctrines held so much appeal for the European radical through whom they entered the Western intellectual tradition. Hoover seems to imply that the emergence of communism was the result of a conspiracy. When he describes the coming of the Soviet Revolution, his focus is upon the small band of men who seized power in a mammoth state. Conspiracy is stressed to the exclusion of historical ripeness, war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, and the like. In describing events after 1919, he makes no mention of conflicts or modifications between the doctrines of Lenin and those of Marx, or between Stalin and Marx, or of socialists and Stalinists. It is as though Marxism were a single intellectual stream, without deviation or internal disagreement among those who embrace it.

Where these simplifications can lead is shown in several of Hoover's comments about current matters. Because he does not consider the nature of the revolutionary situation, he can make much of the point that at times the American Communist Party has had as many members as there were Bolsheviks when they seized power. And there is a table showing how few Communist Party members there were in relation to the total population of such countries as Albania and Hungary when they came under communist sway.

[^38]At least some readers will wonder whether this presentation adequately distinguishes between, on the one hand, the capacity of communist parties to seize power when social disintegration has occurred or when Soviet troops are present and, on the other, the capacities of the communists when national populations are alert to communist tactics and the social systems are basically healthy. Obviously, the existence of one situation rather than the other has significant implications for the choice of communist control policies in a democratic society. Again, Hoover gives the impression that the advances of communism in the past decades have resulted solely from the spread of a cancerous doctrine. Some readers will feel that an adequate treatment would have to apportion responsibility among Russian expansion, the example of Soviet industrial and military progress (however brutally achieved), the appeal of the Soviet egalitarian myth among nonwhite peoples, the failings and frequent missteps of opposition among Western powers, and similar factors with which communist doctrine has interacted. In short, Hoover's doctrinal discussion prepares readers more for debate along the Potomac than for the ideological clash which is actually raging beyond our shoreline.

Since Hoover has access to what probably are the best archives in the nonSoviet world on the American Communist Party, as it exists above and below ground, many readers will look to these sections as the most promising in any book authored by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. And certain discussions of these topics-for example, Hoover's account of how a typical "Committee to Save John Doe" is manipulated by communist activists, and of how an opportunistic labor leader in the Midwest is brought into collaboration with the Party-are quite interesting. At one point, in telling about persons who are "concealed communists" passing themselves off as liberals, Hoover clescribes (but does not name) several persons whose identity will be immediately apparent to anyone familiar with the causes célèbres of recent years-for instance, "the editor-in-chief of a conservative book-publishing house," ${ }^{4}$ and "the program director of a television station in a large Southern city." 'J. .ssuming, as I do, that Hoover's information is accurate, this unequivocal identification is an intriguing footnote to those episodes.

Yet, even in these pages, the imidimensional guality of the accounts and the arguable assumptions which Hoover drops will doubtless invite dissent. For example, he quotes the estimates "of communist leaders themselves" that for every Communist Party member in the United States, "ten others are ready, willing, and able to do the Party's work." ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ This assertion, which Hoover has quoted often at FBI appropriation hearings before Congress in the past decade, raises two substantial issues. First of all, its numerical basis was nothing but myth in 1958 when Hoover chose to give the figures new currency in this book. Whatever may have been the fact when Earl Browder made the obviously self-serving ten-for-one boast, such "popular front" days have disappeared

[^39]since, at the very latest, the Korean War period, and probably since 1948. That Hoover did not see the need to discard or revise this estimate is disquieting. Seconcl, Hoover's assumption accepts the comununist definition of allies, a remarkably unsafe technique and one which ignores the meaning of such alliances on the American scene. In point of fact, fellow travelers have shown a steady disposition to treat the communists like disease carriers whenever world events disclose the true nature of communism-during the Soviet purge trials, the Nazi-Soviet Pact, the rape of Czechoslovakia, the Korean aggression, the Hungarian repression, and the like. At each point, and at every moment of deep crisis in United States-Soviet relations, the temporary nature of the American fellow traveler's adhesion to communism has been demonstrated, as with Henry Wrallace's full repudiation of the communists in 1950 over Korea. Of course, popular-front movements serve to widen communist influence and to muddy the lines between liberalism, progressivism, and communism. But it is a mistake to talk as though ten or seven or even two fellow travelers per party member are simply glass-eyed zombies, under complete control on all issues and at all times, as Hoover implies. This picture simply tortures reality and even conflicts with Hoover's own description of how frequently people break from the "communist spell."

Viewed according to its intrinsic merits, then, Masters of Deceit is a study in equilibrium. For each issue that is simplified by Hoover's approach, a corresponding issue is raised by the simplification and left unanswered. Since any work which stirs the high school student and the adult primer-reader to thought about politics is a useful contribution, Hoover's text is welcome. To the extent that it is treated as Truth rather than Opinion, however, or that Hoover's special expertise in dealing with national security matiers as a lawenforcement officer is taken to equip him for political analysis, Masters of Deceit is a misleading volume. Certainly, in comparison with another recent "primer" on the communist problem, Harry and Bonaro Overstreet's What We Must Know About Communism, ${ }^{7}$ Hoover's book must be rated as distinctly inferior in quality.

The Subjective Reaction of the Reader

'This viewer has already provided decidedly subjective reactions, of course, but there is still another judgment about this book which should be offered as a personal response. The volume tells us much about the author himself, a matter of importance in light of his national responsibility. Masters of Deceit is the first of Hoover's books to deal with a subject other than criminal detection. Its pages provide an important contrast with the picture of the FBI director that tends to emerge from his statements at appropriation time or from his testimony before congressional committees on matters relating to communist-control legislation. In those moments, Hoover emerges as a man of the political right, or, at the least, as a "tough-on-communism" figure whose efforts are directed at thwarting those civil libertarians who call for restraints on the internal-security programs. While there have already been some indications of Hoover's more circumspect qualities, ${ }^{8}$ Masters of Deceit serves as an opportunity for him to enunciate his ideas about democracy, civil liberty, communism, and similar topics in full blown fashion. The effect is to present an image of a man who is much closer to the American center, perhaps even the liberal center, than most liberals assume. For example, Hoover emphatically states that opposition to anticommunist measures is part of everyone's right to free speech and does not create any imputation of communist inclination; that there is a clear line between socialists, who are democrats, and communists, who are not; that most Americans who stumbled into the Communist Party did so out of such motives as a desire for reform, rebellion in the face of discrimination against their minority groups, or similar reasons which deserve sympathetic understanding; and that society should help, not attack, former communists if America is to benefit by attracting back to our values those talented and useful people who have succumbed to the "communist spell." While deploring the way in which intellectuals have been lured into the Communist Party in the past, Hoover underscores the fact that the future of America's resistance to communism lies with the "free world's intellectuals," since it is they who must convince men of the superiority of liberal values.

In his chapter on communism and minorities, Hoover pens a strong endorsement of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and denounces those who try to assert that the NAACP is "communist controlled" or "communist inclined." In his chapter on Jewish groups, he denounces the canard that Jews have a peculiar susceptibility to communism. Because numerous Communist Party leaders claim a Jewish origin, Hoover notes, "does not . . . make them Jews, any more than William Z. Foster's Catholic background and Earl Browder's Protestant background give them standing in any present-day Catholic and Protestant communities in the United States." In one passage which is worth quoting in detail, Hoover warns against Know-Nothing anticommunism:
[W]e must be absolutely certain that our fight is waged with full regard for the historic liberties of this great nation. This is the fundamental premise of any attack against communism.
Too often I have seen cases where loyal and patriotic but misguided Americans have thought they were "fighting communism" by slapping the label of "Red" or "communist" on anybody who happened to be different from them or to have ideas with which they did not agree.
Smears, character assassination, and the scattering of irresponsible charges have no place in this nation. They create division, suspicion, and [^40]distrust among loyal Americans-just what the communists want-and hinder rather than aid the fight against communism.

Another thing. Time after time in this book I have mentioned that honest dissent should not be confused with disloyalty. A man has a right to think as he wishes: that's the strength of our form of government. Without free thought our society would decay. ${ }^{10}$

Other points which deserve notation in this regard are his discussion of the role of the FBI in disproving false charges levelled in the loyalty program, and his warnings against the dangers both of a national police force and of an FBI with evaluative powers. In his concluding section, Hoover warns that a negative attitude toward the communist issue is highly dangerous; democrats, he affirms, must be for something positive. In stressing such matters as social welfare and protection of individual dignity as the things we must be for, and must progress toward, he has closed on a note which many liberals can endorse.

It should be carefully noted, of course, that Hoover does not always apply his principles in a fashion which would bring unanimous applause from civil libertarians and his democratic credo has a few aspects, such as his stress upon religion as the foundation of democracy, to the exclusion of humanist or socialdemocratic bases, which will discomfit some readers. Nevertheless, the dominant picture which this book projects is that of a balanced and fair-minded man, one who may see more shadows in the land than others can always find but, withal, a man who mostly sees human beings and their human condition.

Viewed from this third perspective, Masters of Deceit should be a generally reassuring book for many who have been troubled about J. Edgar Hoover's ideology. Since he was not placed in office as a literary spokesman, we need not feel discomfited if his prose leaves much to be desired. Since he was not installed as our national political theorist, or as political historian of the American Communist Party, we can look to more trained and judicious writers for our volumes on these matters. Hoover holds office as chief of the nation's investigative bureau, and Masters of Deceit reveals a police officer with a high sense of fidelity to democratic ideals, one who will stand comparison with police officials in any foreign country or American state. In our society, he operates under standards set not by his own fiat but by the majority-will agencies of the nation-Congress and the President. If he at times influences these standards by what he urges upon the Congress or the President, he does so with the specialist's zeal, much as the soldier urges maximum weapons and the scientist maximum research expenditures. The wise policy for those critics who admit the necessity for some security measures (as for some weapons and some research) would seem to be opposition to Hoover's overextensions. At least, it seems to this writer that defenders of free speech sometimes appear to be angered that Hoover speaks his mind at all, rather than that he advocates particular measures. And his critics do not always take care to separate
10. P. 312.

Hoover's positions, as he enunciates them, from those of the McCarthyites who rush to praise Hoover but do not take his counsels of moderation.

In short, Masters of Deceit is most useful in showing how closely Hoover embodies the virtues and the vices of political man in our semipopulist democracy. He stops thinking at a point where the leaders and the led in our time have also struck a position of repose. We could have had far worse in an FBI Director and, given our society as it is rather than as the poets would have it, we may have done well indeed.

 Liberator or Dictator?" This book was published by Bobbs-Merrill and as issued in April, 1959.

In substance, the book outlines the background and career of Castro and traces the origin, progress, and ultimate success of his revolutionary July 26 Movement which overthrew the Batista dictatorship in January. While factual in many respects -- the book quotes at length from various speeches and articles of castro as well as from other documentary material -- Dubois betrays a definite pro-Castro bias throughout. He has apparently relied almost entirely on Castro supporters for his material and has accepted statements of Castro and his followers at face value with little or no effort to critically evaluate them. In part, this uncritical approach may stem from fact that book was obviously written and edited on crash basis in order to capitalize on sudden public interest in Castro. But Dubois clearly indicates he considers Castro to be an heroic figure, and he has consistently minimized the procommunist flavor of the Castro regime and lightly dismissed other failings of the new Cuban government.

It is not surprising that Dubois would write favorably
|regarding Castro since later has given him privileged treatment in form of exclusive interviews and following overthrow of Batista, designated Dubois as his personal emissary to Cuban newspaper publishers to discuss resumption of free press. Less understandable is the author's evident rancor against the U.S. State Department and Ambassadors Arthur Gardner and Earl Smith who are criticized at every turn for alleged approval of Batista dictatorship and lack of concern for Cuban people. In spite of Castro's prolonged delay in holding elections, Dubois terms him a "sincere idealist" who is devoted to constitutional and democratic government. According to the author, the Cuban Prime Minister is not unfriendly to the II.S'. despite all evidence to the contrary. Regarding the widely criticized executions of Batista officials, including military officers, which

As regards communtist infiltration and influence in the Castro Govermment, the book concedes the "leftist" nature of many of Castro's top advisors but insists the communists will not be able to oapture Castro, although the basis for this optimism is not clear. In response to charges that Eaul Castro and "Che" Guevara, two of the principal figures in the new regime, are procommunist and anti-U.S., Dubois quotes thes: individuals as denying communist memberskip as though that settled the issue. No denial is made of their anti-U.S. attitudes.

There follows several examples which illustrate the author's willingness to overlook inconver 'ent facts in his appraisal of Castro:

1. In discussing Castro'i background, Dubois reports that Castro proved himself a skillfu, politician even in his student days at the University of Havana. According to the book, Castro "wanglea" commanist support for his candidacy as vice president of the student body, but, once elected, began a militunt campaign against them.

those identity should be protected, has advised that Castro wecepted and worlsed with communists at University although it was not proven that he was actual Party menber himself.
2. Duboic characterizes Colonel Alberto Bayo, Castro's military advisor and instructor in the pre-revolution days, as an "anticorminist, anti-Franco fighter for freedon."

Comment: Bujiles reflect that Bayo, who served with Republican forces during Spanish Civil War, has been a professional revolutionary for many years. In April, 1959, state Department ruled that he was ineligible to receive a visa to enter U.S. in view of his "widespread" involvement in revolutionary activities.
3. Book reports that during 1955 Castro appointed Juan Manuel Marques to head his underground movement in Miami and in 1956 designated Marquez as second in command of July 26 Movement.

Comment: During March. 1956, confidential source abroad advised that Marquez had long history of revolutionary activity in cuba and was reported as a communist during 1933.
5. In writing of the arrival of Castro's conquerors in Havana on New Year's Day, Dubois described the courteous, respectful and sober actions of the soldiers.

Comment: When Fidel Castro visited the U.S. in April, 1959, he brought his handpicked entourage. Our State Department was shocked at the actions of Castro's group, noted that they ground lighted cigar butts into plush carpets, drank liquor continually, were exceedingly vulgar and were the poorest representatives of a foreign country to ever visit the U.S.

"MASTERS OF DECEIT," BOOK REVIEW
IN "THE YALE LAW JOURNAL" APRIL, 1959,
BY ALAN F. WESTIN, ASSISTAN 9 PROFESSOR OF GOVERNMENT, CORNELL UNIVERSITY
SYNOPSIS:

Above-captioned law review contains extensive review of "Masters of Deceit" by Alan F. Westin, Assistabt Professor of Government, Cornell University. Review contains some harsh critical comments, but also speaks favorably of book. Chief criticism of "Masters of Deceit" is that its style is "simple" and that in some instances political theories and facts are oversimplified. Westin talks about "simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people," adding that the Director set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description. In regard to communist theory, Westin feels Director has stressed the conspiratorial aspect of communism too much, overlooking such historical facts as war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, etc. Likewise Westin comments that "Masters of Deceit" gives the impression that the advances of communism have resulted solely from spread of a cancerous doctrine. Westin feels other factors, such as Soviet industrial and military progress, should have been stressed. "In short, Hoover's doctrinal discussion prepares readers more for debate along the Potomac than for the ideological clash which is actually raging beyond our shoreline." Westin more favorably impressed with sections dealing with communist underground, yet, even here, "the unidimensional quality of the accounts and the arguable assumptions which Hoover drops will doubtless invite ifissent." Westin critical of Director's use of estimates of Party lełders that for fy Party member in the United States, ten athers are ready, willing and able to he Party"s work. as a man of the political right, or, at/ieast, as a 'tough-on-communism' figure whose efforts are directed at thwarting those civil libertarians who call for restraints on the internal-security programs." The image presented by "Masters of Deceit" is, however, of a "man who is much closer to the American center, perhaps even the liberal center, than most liberals assume." Westin approves of many positions taken by Mr. Hoover in the book such as warning against the dangers of national police, ran FBI with evaluative powers; the right of free speech; etc. "...the dominant picture which this book projects is that of a balanced and fair-minded man, one who may see more shadows in the land than others can always find but, withal, a man who mostly sees human beings and their human condition." Westin summarizes his position in final two paragraphs of review stating "we could have had far worse in an EBI Director and, given our society as it is rather than as the poets would have it, we may have done well indeed."

The above-captioned law revien contains a rather entensive roviey of "Masters of Deccit."

After a brief introduction in which Vestin siketches the main topics which "Tiactors of Docelf" covers, ho andyzen the book undor the lollo, vins hoatings:

The Author's Intention

Westin makes mention of Mr. Hoover"s comment that "Masters of Deceit" was written "in almost primer form." In fact, he is critical of the simplicity of the style. He talks about "simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people," and adds that the Director set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description: 'Sophisticates who no longer find McGuffey's sentence structure as challenging as they did in earlier years will not derive aesthetic satisfaction from these pages. They, however, do not compose the audlence for which the author has written his book. ${ }^{\text {T }}$

The Vork' s Intrinsic Merits

More important than literary style, however, are the dangers that popularization may result in oversimplicity. Westin is critical in this regard, saying, for example, that Mr. Hoover has oversimplified communist theory and the historical factors surrounding the events of 1917-1019. According to Westin, conspiracy is stressed to the exclusion of historical ripeness, war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, etc. No mention, he says, is made of conflicts or modifications of Marxism as preached by Marx and later by Lenin and Stalin.

Jones to DeLoach  Re: "Masters of Deceit"

These "simplifications," Westin pointe out, affect Mr. Hoover's comments about current matters. Since the Director "does not consider the notere of the revolutionary situation," his statements concerning the small number of communists in a country in relation to the total population in regard to the seizure of state power, are not fully valid. "At least some readers will wonder whether this presentation adequately distinguishes between, on the one hand, the capacity of communist parties to seize power when social disintegration has occurred or when Soviet troops are present, and on the other, the capacitles of the communists when national populations ars alert to communist tactics and the social systems are basically healthy. Obviously, the existence of one situation rather than the other has significant implications for the choice of communist control policies in a democratic society."

Again, according to Westin, Mr. Hoover gives the impression that the advances of communism in the past have resuited solely from the spread of a cancerous doctrine. Westin feels the factors such as the example of Soviet incustrial and military progresse the appeal of the Soviet egalitarian myth among nonwhite peoples, should have been mentioned. "In short, Hoover's doctrinal discussion prepares readers more for debate along the Potomac than for the ideological clash which is actually raging beyond our shoreline."

Westin is more favorably impressed with the sections of "Masters of Deceit" dealing with the communist underground. Yet, even here, "the unidimensional quality of the accounts and the arguable assumptions which Hoover drops will doubtless invite dissent." He is critical of the Director's use of estimates of party leaders that for every party member in the United States, ten others are ready, willing, and able to do the party's work. Weatin says the numerical basis of this statement in 1958 was "nothing but myth," since these statistics obviously come from the "popular front days." Also, he says, by using the statement Mr. Hoover "accepts the communist definition oi allies, a remarkably unsafe technique and one which ignores the meaning of such alliances on the American scene." In Weatin's thinking, fellow travelers are often highly unreliable and hence the Director's comments are unrealistic.

Westin comments:
" Viewed according to its intrinsic merits, then, "Masters of Deceit" is a study in equilibrium. For each issue that is simplified by Hoover s approach, a corresponding issue is raised by the simplification and left

Abstract

unanswered. Since any work which stirs the high school student and the adult primer-reader to thought about politics is a useful contribution, Hoover's text is welcome. To the extent that it is treated as Truth rather than Opinion, however, or that Hoover's special expertise in dealing with national security matters as a law-enforcement officer is taken to equip him for political analysis, 'Masters of Deceit' is a misleading volume. Certainly, in comparison with another recent 'primer' on the communist problem, Harry and Bonaro Overstreet's 'What We Must Know About Communism,' Hoover's book must be rated as distinctly inferior in quality."

The Subjective Reaction of the Reader

Under this heading Westin sets forth some personal reactions. "Masters of Deceit," he says, tells much about Mr. Hoover, "a matter of importance in light of his national responsibility." The book provides an important contrast with the picture of the FBI Director which tends to emerge from his statements to congressional committees on appropriations or matters relating to communist-control legislation. "In those moments, Hoover emerges as a man of the political right, or, at/least, as a 'tough-on-communism'figure whose efforts are directed at thwarting those civll libertarians who call for restraints on the internal-security programs." "Masters of Deceit," however, gives him an opportunity to enunciate his ideas about democracy, civil liberty, communism, etc. "The effect is to present an image of a man who is much closer to the American center, perhaps even the liberal center, than most liberals assume." Among positions taken by Mr. Hoover which Westin vews favorably are: that to oppose anticommunist measures is part of the right of free speech and does not create an imputation of communist inclination; that society should help, not attack, former communists; that the intellectuals of the free world have a responsibility in combating communism; warnings against the dangers of a national police and an FBI with evaluative powers; protection of the dignity of the human being.

Although, in Westin's opinion, Mr. Hoover does not always apply his principles in a fashion to bring unanimous applause from civil libertarians, "the dominant picture which this book projects is that of a balanced and fair-minded man, one who may see more shadows in the land than others can always find but, withal, a man who mostly sees human beings and their human condition."

Jones to DeLoach

Re: "Masters of Deceit"
The final two paragraphs are quoted in full as they give Westin's summary of Mr. Hoover as viewed through "Masters of Deceit":
"Viewed from this third perspective, 'Masters of Deceit' should be a generally reassuring book for many who have been troubled about J. Edgar Hoover's ideology. Since he was not placed in office as a literary spokesman, we need not feel discomfited if his prose leaves much to be desired. Since he was not installed as our national political theorist, or as political historian of the American Communist Party, we can look to more trained and judicious writers for our volumes on these matters. Hoover holds office as chief of the nation's investigative bureau, and 'Masters of Deceit' reveals a police officer with a high sense of fidelity to democratic ideals, one who will stand comparison with police officials in any foreign country or American state. In our society, he operates under standards set not by his own fiat but by the majority-will agencles of the nation -- Congress and the President, If he at times influences these standards by what he urges upon the Congress or the President, he does so with the specialist's zeal, much as the soldier urges maximum weapons and the scientist maximum research expenditures. The wise policy for those critics who admit the necessity for some security measures (as for some weapons and some research) would seem to be opposition to Hoover's overextensions. At least, it seems to this writer that defenders of free speech sometimes appear to be angered that Hoover speaks his mind at all, rather than that he advocates particular measures. And his critics do not always take care to separate Hoover's positions, as he enunciates them, from those of the McCarthyites who rush to praise Hoover but do not take his counsels of moderation.

Cuba: Island of Paradox by Ruby Hart Phillips is personal history of Cuba by correspondent for The New York Times. It covers revolution of 1933-34, career of former dictator Batista, and successful revolt led by Fidel Castro. Author cites United States diplomatic blundering for rise of anti-American sentiments in Latin America and flatly contradicts. Herbert L. Matthews of The New York Times who has attempted to whitewash communist influence in Castro regime. Author declares whether future of Cuba and of all Latin America shall be decided from Moscow is a question in which the United States can and should be the decisive factor.

Cuban Correspondent

Ruby Hart Phillips, the dean of foreign correspondents in Cuba, has just written a book which recognizes the real and urgent communist threat to Cuba. (Cuba: Island of Paradox, McDowell, Obolensky, New York, 1959) Mrs. Phillips is an old hand on the Cuban scene, having spent some 28 years there. She had been an assistant to her husband who was The New York Times correspondent in Cuba. Upon her husband's death in 1937, she became his successor. She wrote Cuban Sideshow in 1935 which dealt with the revolution of 1933-34. As early as $\overline{1945,}$ Mrs. Phillips wrote articles for publication which stressed that the Soviet bid for influence in Latin America had made Cuba one of the focal points of communist propaganda. in the Western Hemisphere.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Cuba: Island of Paradox
Eyewitness Report
This book is a personal history of Cuba seen through the eyes of a foreign correspondent. It deals with three eras of recent Cuban history: the 1933-34 revolt which toppled Gerardo Machado's dictatorship; the career of Cuba*s "strongman," Fulgencio Batista; and the successful revolt led by Fidel Castro.

As a personal chronicle of events and episodes in those critical years of Cuban history, the book is absorbing reading. But, the events and episodes are told simply as isolated items and there is too little of the correlation, explanation, interpretation, and editing which could have made for a more cohesive, meaningful picture. Despite this drawback, the book succeeds in scoring some telling points.

Diplomatic Blundering

Mrs. Phillips writes bluntly that rising anti-American sentiment in Latin America is "the harvest being reaped from years of vacillating, hesitant and cowardly policy by the United States government." She says that our objective should be "to weld the Western Hemisphere into a solid bloc through common interests--commercial and political--and the creation of an awareness in Latin America of the need for mutual defence." In her view, the United States is confronted with a problem of survival in the face of a Soviet military conspiracy to gain control of the world by force. She attributes much of the anti-American sentiment in Latin America to the failure of the United States to support and encourage the establishment and maintenance of democracy in those Latin-American nations "where people are striving for participation in their national affairs. " (pp. 418-419)

The book is a sharp indictment of United States diplomacy. Mrs. Phillips attacks the "policy. . . in sending political appointees to Latin America as diplomatic representatives," describing it as "one of the great hindrances to friendly relations with these countries. " She is equally upset by the professional diplomat who is too often concerned only with furthering his own career. Mrs. Phillips observes, "He is afraid to express an opinion or take a definite stand on any question in which the United States State Department needs guidance. Unfortunately, his career does not depend upon positive results. Instead, it requires that he make no mistakes; this, in turn, requires that he make no important decisions. 'If I do nothing, I can do nothing wrong!'" (p. 422)

Re: Cuba: Island of Paradox
Mrs. Phillips touches a particularly vulnerable spot when she declares, "One of the major reasons for the blunders of the United States Department of State in Latin America--as in the rest of the world--is the lack of accurate information upon which to base its policy...If trouble is brewing he (the ambassador) should know it and know the reasons behind it. The surprise so often expressed by our State Department reflects the incompetence of our representatives in foreign countries." (pp. 422-423)

Sharp Disagreement

Turning to Fidel Castro and his expressed lack of concern about communist influence in Cuba, Mrs. Phillips observes, "What Castro does not realize is that in a small country, determined and dedicated Communists can get control of a surprising number of posts in key positions, thus exerting a disproportionate influence in national affairs. Furthermore, propaganda directed to the uneducated masses is more effective than in the United States and Great Britain, where the educational level makes it difficult for the Communists to win followers by stereotyped arguments." (p. 417)

Perhaps, the most significant contribution this book makes to the current scene is its flat contradiction of another New York Times staffer, Herbert L. Matthews. It will be recalled that in a front-page article in The New York Times of July 16, 1959, Matthews, in effect, attempted a whitewash of the red-tinged Castro regime. The contradiction between these two New York Times correspondents is evident from these samples:

Matthews

"This is not a Communist revolution in any sense of the word and there are no Communists in positions of control. . ." (The New York Times, 7/16/59, p. 1)

Phillips

". . . There is no doubt that the Communists wield tremendous influence in the Castro government and in the labor unions. Their methods of placing men in key posts are extremely effective." (p. 417)

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Cuba: Isiand of Paradox

Decisive Factor
Recognizing that communism is a very real threat in Cuba and in the rest of the Western Hemisphere, Mrs. Phillips concludes her book with this sobering thought:
"Whether the future of Cuba and of all Latin America shall be decided from Moscow and not by the countries of this hemisphere themselves is a question in which the United States can and should be the decisive factor."
(p. 425)

Jones to DeEoach memorandum

Police dragnet goes out and numerous criminals are picked up for questioning. Billy Kendall, who participated in Denton Transfer robbery, walks into police station with alibi and convinces Deputy MicGarrity that he (Kendall) had nothing to do with the holdup. Kendall mentions having seen Wiseman and another man shortly before Denton robbery and McGarrity, believing the Denton job to be an inside one, asks Kendall to accompany him to the Denton building on possibility that he can identify one of the employees as the man he said he had seen with Wiseman. Arriving at Denton building, Kendall is introduced to an auditor named Floyd Robbins whom Kendall recognizes as the man that he and Michaels tried to "shake down" in hotel room.

FBI enters case since some of loot is. Federal funds. Local officials believe Denton robbery staged by same gang which pulled the Styvesant robbery a few years prior. One of the Styvesant holdup men, identified by witnesses, is serving prison sentence and because he has not been "taken care of," he requests to talk to two detectives. Morgan, Kendall and others involved in Denton robbery begin to "sweat" as it appears that individuals involved in Styvesant robbery will be hauled in again and Michaels, a former member of another mob, will probably be questioned and he knows about original plan to rob Denton ${ }^{2}$ S. Stabile and Bastone mob is prime suspect and Morgan, Kendall and Harvey decide to dismantle truck used in robbery and plant pieces near Stabile farm.

FBI Agents keeping Stabile and Bastone mob under surveillance and as Federal Statute of Limitations about to run out, U. S. Attorney makes. presentment to Grand Jury. Based on rulings of Coplon and Gubechey case regarding wire taps FBI case is destroyed, but FBI decides to continue investigation. Nichaels and two other hoods hold up gambling joint, and Morgan hires professional killer who kills one of trio and wounds Michaels. Michaels and Irving Cross decide to leave town.

They are later arrested in Pennsylvania for possession of firearms and while in jail, FBI Agents talk to Michaels. Agents tell Michapels they know he was in on the Denton job, offer him protection and suggest he may collect a part of the reward money. Meanwhile, Kendall approaches Jimmy Preston, narrator of the story, inasmuch as he is also interested in reward money and the State Statute of Limitations is about to run out. Subsequently, at trial, defense attorney decides that if he is unable to break Michaelst story, he will call Kendall to the stand. Michaels has been tutored and trained for the court room appearance, and when defense attorney is about ready to call Kendall to the stand, Morgan and Harvey turn Kendall's estranged wife against him and defense attorney, although doubting guilt of his clients, is afraid to call Kendall to the stand because he fears. Kendall's wife will destroy his testimony.

Numerous references to FBI throughout the book, but pages 190 and 191 contain paragraphs which infer that FBI does all the cooperating, most detectives are envious and jealous. of FBI Agents and the old-timers would enjoy making a fool of an FBI Agent. Reader who is familiar with Brinks case may doubt whether FBI arrested right men in Brinks case. Book contains page wherein local SAC accepts police officers ${ }^{t}$ judgment, and Kendall who was really in on the robbery stays. ".... at large, free and unmolested."

Dinneen also author of "Anatomy of Crime" which was fictional take-off on Brinks case and was alternately favorable, impartial and unfavorable to Bureau.

Letter from Boston Office dated $2-21-56$, reflects. Dinneen spoke at Communion Breakfast two days prior and praised FBI for work on Brinks case. Dinneen, in his speech, stated that in his opinion there was an "inside man" involved. This book, "The Alternate Case," makes it appear that Dinneen may still hold this belief. In reference to Dinneent speech, Director noted "I want none of his praise! H." (62-100848)

DETAILS

BACKGROUND:

Reporter Onllar Globe

You instructed that we review the book entitled "The Alternate Case, " written by Joseph Fy Jinneen. The book was sent over to us by Miriam Ottenberg of the evening Star." As you recall, Miss Ottenberg stated that this book was a take-off on the Brinks case and intimated that the FBI had schooled and tutored certain witnesses. Set forth below is a brief review of the book.

GENERAL STORY:

Miss Ottenberg was correct when she stated that the book is a take-off on the Brinks case.

Dinneen writes the novel as seen through his eyes, i. e. the story is told in the first person and the narrator goes by the name Jimmy Preston, a crime reporter on a Bay City newspaper. Although a fictional work, the author builds his story around the Brinks robbery using the case as a nucleus.

The novel centers around the activities of 2 confidence men by the names of Chester H. ("Honey"). Michael and Billy Kendall, both ex-convicts. At the beginning of the story Michael and Kendall, with the assistance of one Russ German, also an ex-convict, are getting ready to set up a "Shake down" episode by using a waitress Rose Moline as bait. Rose works in a. restaurant and has " set "up" a man to meet her after work. Michael, Kendall and Germain precede Rose and the man to a hotel where they wait in a room adjoining the room where Rose will lead the man. At a predetermined signal, the 3 ex-cons, posing as police officers, barge into the room and confront the man and Rose in bed. German acting as a police Lieutenant orders Rose to get dressed as he is going to take her down to "headquarters."

The man on the bed is led to believe that if he can raise six thousand dollars, he will be let off the "hook." The man gives the con artists his name (which later turns out to be the name of a man already deceased) and tells them that he will meet them at a particular restaurant the following day. Arriving at the restaurant, the man confronts the three psuedo-policemen with the fact that he has checked out their names at the police department that morning and found that no such individuals were on the force. He also confronts them with the fact that as an auditor with the Denton Transfer Company, he is allowed to carry a weapon which he then displays and advises the three that either they will listen to his proposition or he will put them in jail, and if they get any ideas, he will use the gun right there without fear of being embarrassed or ruined by the previous night's incident.

Explaining to the men that he knows how they can rob the Denton Transfer Company, one of the men confronts him with the possibility that perhaps he wants it robbed to cover up a misappropriation of funds. The auditor will not admit to anything; however, he convinces the three men that the home office needs to be taught allesson regarding protection of the offices on the Eastern Seaboard. An agreement is finally reached, and the auditor goes his way while the 3 con men go theirs.

After thinking the matter over, the three men decide that this "operation" is too large for them to handle and so they present the plan to Tommy Morgan, controller of all the rackets in the Metropolitan District. Morgan has ". . . to have a part one way or another in every big-score holdup. ..." Morgan decides that Germain, Kendall and Michaels will be in on the "job," but Michaels decides that he wants no part of the "heist" inasmuch as he was once involved as a suspect in a killing, and he is afraid to carry a loaded gun. Morgan decides that since Michaels was originally interested in clipping the auditor for six thousand dollars, he pays Michaels six thousand and tells him he is "out" on the Denton Transfer Company job.

The next step is to line up a full crew for the robbery, and to have Chester Harvey, ". . . crisp and businesslike. . .ex-convict. . ." contact the auditor and discuss the various aspects of the robbery and study the layout of the building. Subsequently, the gang members steal a truck; go out of the city to buy guards' uniforms; rehearse the entire operation in an old barn; make timed runs between different points in the city and building to be robbed; purchase some Halloween masks; and secure the rubber-heel soft soled type shoes.

Prior to the robbery of the Denton Transfer Company, Michaels, who has been "cut out" of the Denton job runs into a couple of ex-convicts, one of which is Willie Wiseman, who have "cased" a Bay City hotel in view of stealing the payroll amounting to about forty-five thousand dollars. The 3 men carry out the hotel robbery. The gang lined up to rob the Transfer Company decides that it had better make its move immediately, as "The cops will be busy with this one (the hotel robbery)." On January 19, 1950, the Denton robbery is staged, and the story of the actual robbery follows much the same pattern as the incidents surrounding the Brinks theft, i. e. the men move in dressed as guards, they wear the Halloween masks; they tie up the tellers in the vault; stuff the money into laundry bags; and disappear into the night.

While the gang is counting the loot which comes to a total of $$ 764,328$. , a news commentator reports over the radio that "A battery of auditors. . . report that the total amount of money taken by masked bandits... is one million, two hundred thousand dollars." Russ Germain, one of the gang members states, "You mean the guy (referring to the auditor that they had tried to "shake down" in the hotel room) gave us a fast shuffle and took out four hundred grand for himself?"

As different members of the gang are picked up for questioning, Billy Kendall who has acted as an informant for the local police in the past, decides to save the police the trouble of picking him up and presents himself at Deputy McGarrity's office on the morning of January 20. Kendall has the alibi of having been at a movie and leads McGarrity to believe that he (Kendall) had nothing to do with the hold-up. At the same time, Kendall casually mentions the fact that he has recently seen Willie Wiseman about town with another man a few weeks before Christmas; and there had been a rumor among the underworld that "Đenton's was ready to go." McGarrity has reached the conclusion that the Denton hold-up was either ". . . an inside job with outside help or an outside job with inside control." He has reached this conclusion because: "1. Of the four men wearing glasses in the counting cage, the Number One gunman had taken the glasses of the only key man who could give a quick estimate of the amount of money stolen. He was all but blind without them. 2. The gunmen knew enough to take the bill of lading on the last shipment to prolong the confusion. It followed that he must have had inside information." McGarrity asks Kendall to accompany him to the Denton building on the possibility that he may be able to identify the man that he had seen with Wiseman. Arriving at the Denton company, Kendall is introduced to a Floyd Robbins whom Kendall recognizes as the auditor that they previously had tried to shake down, and whom he knows by the name Farman. Kendall flips through the company's identification book on the pretense of identifying the man he had seen with Wiseman. As he flips through it, he runs across a photogrdph of a man named Donald Farman with the notation "Died September 21, 1949." Farman is the name that was given by Robbins, the auditor in the "shake-down" attempt.

The FBI enters the case inasmuch as some of the loot included ". . . Federal funds. . ." By this time, the Denton robbery had reminded some of the police officials of the Styvesant robbery in which one of the masked bandits sneezed during the robbery and blew off his mask. This bandit was later picked out of a police, line/ $/ \mathcal{P}$ witnesses and goes by the name of Anthony Stabile. He is serving 12 to 15 years and has refused to "sing". However, he has started ". . . to burn. . ." because his friends have spent no money, politically, to have his sentence reduced, thus making him eligible. for parole. Two detectives are sent to talk to Stabile but no information is given out concerning the subject discussed. All of the gang begins to "sweat" as the members of the Stabile mob are likely to be hauled in again, and among the members is "Honey" Michaels. who knows about the original plan to rob Denton's. Inasmuch as the Stabile mob has been picked as a hot suspect, Morgan, Kendall and Harvey decide to cut up the truck used in the robbery and plant the pieces of it near Stabile's farm. This is done, and "... within an hour (after the pieces are discovered) state detectives and FBI Agents were crawling all over the place. "

As the story continues, FBI Agents are keeping their eyes on all members of the Stabile and Bastone mob. Finally, the Statute of Limitations is about to run out, and six weeks before the expiration date, the United States Attorney makes a presentment to the Grand Jury. A large part of the FBI's case is made up of wire-tap and tape-recorded testimony of conversations between "Honey" Michaels and another hoodlum, and in these conversations they have been referring to "the big heist" which is actually the hotel robbery, but could apply just as well to the Denton job. However, the decisions ". . . by a New York Federal judge --ruling on the cases of Judith Coplon and Valentine Gubechev--who held that the FBI had no right to tap phones or record testimony. . " destroys the FBI's case. Although the Statute of Limitations has run, the FBI decides to carry on the investigation. Although. this is a reflection on the Bay City Police Department, their attitude is "They're (the FBI) asking for it. . . let them have it."

As time goes by the FBI continues to keep the members of the Bastone and Stabile mob under surveillance. "Honey" Michaels and two other hoods, running out of money, decide to stick up 6 gambling joints. Morgan decides to hire "Burp-gun McGuirk", a psychotic killer, a former paratrooper and expert professional assassin with a machine gun. McGuirk kills one of the robbery trio and wounds "Honey" Michaels. McGuirk is later apprehended but is aided in an escape from jail by Irving Cross, who is an expert locksmith. Michaels is afaid of being killed by the mob, Irving Cross becomes "hot" because of his reputation of being good at opening locks and so Michaels and Cross decide to "disappear." By this time, from all outward indications, Michaels is wanted, again for questioning in connection with the Denton Transfer robbery. While Michaels and Cross are driving through Pennsylvania, they are stopped by a motorcycle patrolman for possession and transportation of firearms which they recently stole from a sporting-goods store. They are held in a small town jail and soon FBI Agents arrive to talk to Michaels. The Agents advise Michaels that they know he was in Denton's on the night of the robbery and advise him that one way or another they are going to take him back. The Agents offer Michaels protection and he decides that "... F. B.I. guys are on the level. When they say they'll protect him, they'll do it. "

The FBI builds the case around Michaels' willingness to talk and as time goes by Michaels is trained and tutored in what to say, what to do and how to handle himself on the witness stand. Michaels names different members of the Stabile and Bastone mobs and goes along with the FBI plan. Michaels is also interested in the state attorney general's announcement that any one who came forward with information concerning the Denton robbery would be given immunity and a share of the reward. What Michaels did not realize is that the state attorney general who made this statement is not presently in office and the present incumbent is not obligated by any promises by his predecessors.

Meanwhile Kendall has approached Jimmy Preston with information on the robbery because the State Statute of Limitations has about run out and he is aliso interested in the reward money. Prior to this, Preston knows that Kendall was definitely in on the robbery, but he cannot get any information out of Kendall.

At the trial, Michaels appears as accompletely different person on the witness stand. He is polished, intelligent a "... gentleman and unfortunately a criminal." The attorney for the defendants decides that if he cannot break Michaels' story, he will call Kendall to the stand. However, Morgan and Harvey--knowing that Kendall is out to collect part of the reward-go out to see Kendall's wife who has been living in poverty. Supplying her with plenty of money and clothes, they persuade her to show up at the courtroom in order that if Kendall should be called to the stand, she could "blast" him off the stand. By this time she has a deep hatred for her husband who has practically turned his back on her, and she is intent on destroying his. testimony. It is decided to keep Kendall off the witness stand all together, and:out of the original gang which staged the robbery, only 3 are brought to trial with the Stabile and Bastone mob, and this is because they have belonged to many different gangs.

SPECIFIC REFERENCES TO FBI:

Although there are numerous references to the FBI throughout the book, it is noted that on pages 190 and 191, the following references appear:
"The Federal Bureau of Investigation tries its best to cooperate with state, metropolitan, city and town police departments, but more often than not this cooperation is a one-way street; the F.B.I. does the cooperating and receives little of it in return. Detectives of all ranks. are inclined to be jealous and envious of F.B.I. Agents. They are better-trained and educated. They are paid more money and they have expense accounts. The Bureau has been doing an excellent job in breaking down this prejudice by accepting patrolmen and police officers from cities and towns throughout the country for special training in the Academy of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington. It is an effective but slow process (about twelve hundred of them were then so trained and more have been added since), but it has hardly reached the case-hardened old-timers, veterans of the forces, usually executives by reason of seniority--the old dogs who cannot be taught new tricks. One of these would delight in tripping up an F.B.I. man to beat him to the arrest:"

The author conitinues by saying that the FBI will not always confide in all local police officers, regarding an arrest, because it "...knows the character of policemen in some precincts and divisions. Crime reporters shudder at what might happen if they were so warned. . . "

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS:

To the reader who is familiar with the background of the Brinks case, this book is liable to raise some questions of doubt as to whether the Brinks case was really "solved;" i.e. did the FBI arrest the right men. As can be seen from the above, and from a reading of the book, Dinneen has presented the FBI as unknowingly going along with the local police department's theory that the gang that was framed was responsible for the robbery. Even when McGarrity goes to the local SAC, and tells him that Kendall is ". ... a faker, a phony, a chameleon. .. "n and couldn't possibly be connected with the Denton Transfer robbery, the book states, "The agent in charge accepted McGarrity's judgment. Kendall was now at large, free and unmolested."

INFORNIATION RE DINNEEN:

You will recall that Dinneen is also the author of "Anatomy of a Crime," which was a fictional take-off on the Brinks case and was alternately favorable, impartial and unfavorable to the Bureau. $\square$

By letter dated 2-21-56, the Boston Office advised that Dinneen had spoken before a Church Communion Breakfast on $2-19 \div 56$. Reportedly, Dinneen devoted the last 15 minutes of his talk to the Brinks case, and praised the FBI in very glowing terms. He stated that he felt the FBI had caused the arrest of the appropriate persons in the Brinks case. It is noted during his talk Dinneen pointed out that in his opinion there was an "inside man" involved. Dinneen believed that such a robbery could not be perpetrated without such aid and guidance. Based on his current book, it appears-that Dinneen still holds this belief. In reference to the letter from Boston dated $2-21-56$ concerning Dinneen! s speech, the Director noted "I want none of his praise! $\mathrm{H}_{\bullet}$ " (62-100848)

SYNOPSIS:

Guthman's book is published by Harper and Row, Publishers, and is a 330-page 'hatchet job" designed to glorify former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy at the expense of the Director and the Bureau. The book is replete with references both to Mr. Hoover and the FBI, some of which are favorable, most of which are n neutral, and many of which are critical either intrinsically or by innuendo. As a forecast of things to come, Guthman states in his "Author's Note" that his book does forecast of things to come, Guthman states in his "Author's Note" that his book does subsequent chapters.

No pertinent references to the Director or the Bureau, other than asides, h $^{4}$ are found in the first five chapters. The author subsequently claims the Director 'urged" Kennedy to become Attorney General and alludes that solely as a result of Kennedy's intervention the number of black Special Agents employed by the FBI was substantially increased. In chapter 9 he alleges again by innuendo that although the FBI had information that the Freedom Riders in Alabama would be attacked by the Ki Klux Klan we withheld this information from the Department and advised only the local authorities and as a result the Freedom Riders were. attacked. The book also repeats a number of old canards relative to the FBI not investigating organized crime, prior to the Kennedy Administration and reiterates the Kennedy "myth" concerning wire tapping.

The bulk of the criticism is found in chapter 12 entitled "Johnson and Hoover" which alleges the Director's Office leaked information to the press concerning former President Kennedy's assassination despite explicit instructions from the Department that the first assassination report was to be reviewed by the Warren Commission prior to disclosure, that Remedy raised the mondale of the FBI by visiting $\because$ Field Offices, and relates what is obviously a fictional confrontation between the

RE: "WE BAND OF BROTHERS".

RE: 'WE BAND OF BROTHERS"

DETAILS:

Edwin Guthman was formerly a "Seattle Times" newspaperman for 13 years. He won the Pulitzer prize in 1950 for national reporting. He was, of course, former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy!'s Special Assistant for Public Information in the Department of Justice and also served as Kennedy's first Senatorial Press Secretary. At the present time he is national editor of the "Los Angeles Times," Los Angeles, California.

Chapters 1 through 5 consist of the author's description of his initial meeting with Robert Kennedy, Kennedy's subsequent activities as an investigator and/or counsel for Senators McCarthy and McClellan, the 1960 presidential campaign, and the subsequent election. There are no references to the Director, and the FBI is mentioned in these chapters only as a means of identifying other members of Kennedy's entourage as former FBI Agents. These men are former SA's Carmine S. Bellino, Francis Flanagan and the late James McInerney, none of whom are or were friends-of-the-Bureau:-

In chapter 6 entitled 'We Happy Fiew," Guthman stated that Kennedy was reluctant to accept the post as Attorney General because of possible criticism alleging nepotism and that he therefore sought advice from Senator McClellan, the Director, and Justice William O. Douglas. According to the author, MicClellan and the Director "urged him to become Attorney General." Douglas suggested he look elsewhere for employment.

The next reference to the Bureau and the Director is found in the same chapter on page 104. where the author claims the FBI had less than a dozen black Special Agents 'including two who served as attendants in Hoover's office-out of a total of almost six thousaind, "at the time Kennedy became AG. A footnote states that ten years later based on Department of Justice employment figures the FBI had some 51 blacks among the total of 7,910 Special Agents.

Guthman states the Director asserted the FBI was having difficulty finding eligible young blacks and Kennedy advised his staff and U.S. Attorneys nationwide would provide the names of qualified blacks from their home areas. The author states, "The number of black FBI agents increased." No additional mention of the Bureau or the Director is made in the remainder of this chapter or chapter 7.
M. A. Jones to Bishop memo

RE: "WE BAND OF BROTHERS"

A number of references to the FBI relating to our Obstruction of Justice investigation of New York State Supreme Court Judge James Vincent Keogh are found in chapter 8. Guthman states John F. Malone, Special Agent in Charge (sic) of the FBI Office in New York did not want to give the Judge a lie detector test and the Director supported Malone. After continued insistence by the AG, Guthman said the Director remaried, "Sherlock Holmeses must have their fun." Upon completion of the lie detector test which was inconclusive, Guthman said the Director noted, "See, that shows I was right."

In chapter 9 entitled "The Freedom Riders, " Guthman reverts to his "backdoor" attacks by innuendo by stating a Klan informant advised the FBI in Alabama that the Freedom Riders' buses might be attacked and he acknowledges the Bureau alerted the Birmingham and Anniston, Alabama, Police. He states the Bureau did not, however, notify anybody in the Attorney General's Office and as a result no local officers were on hand to restrain the Klansmen and the mob beat the passengers for about ten minutes. The remainder of this chapter and chapter 10 are without pertinent references to the Bureau and the Director.

Chapter 11 contains the old canard of criticizing the Bureau for contacting newsmen at 5 o'clock $^{\prime}$ in the morning during the steel crisis. Guthman: states a meeting was held in the Department attended by himself, Kennedy and his staff, and former Assistant Director Courtney Evans. The decision to have the newsmen contacted was reached at approximately $6 p_{0} \mathrm{~m}$., April 11, 1962, but according to Guthman it was not until after midnight that this information was cleared through the FBI Office in Philadelphia. Guthman stated Kennedy took full responsibility and stated, "I get some credit when FBI agents do something good. I'll take the heat when they goof."

Chapter 12 is entitled "Johnson and Hoover" and contains the bulk of the criticism of the Director. Guthman states by way of introduction that when he came to the Department he had considerable respect for the Bureau and a good deal of high regard for the Director. However, after ".. seeing Hoover at close range it was a revealing and ultimately embittering experience." He acknowledges that when he left the Department after almost four years his esteem for the men of the FBI and respect for the Bureau's capabilities were largely intact. The crux of Guthman's criticism relates to what he calls "the extreme coolness" with which the Director allegedly treated Kennedy immediately following the assassination of former President Kennedy.
M. A. Jones to Bishop memo

RE: 'WE BAND OF BROTHERS"

Guthman alleged former Chief Justice Warren requested the FBI's first report on the investigation of the assassination not be made public until the Commission had examined it and that this request was made known to the Director by former Deputy Attorney General Katzenbach, but within a few hours the report had been leaked to several newsmen. He states all the indications were that it had been leaked by the Director's Office.

Guthman stated that during the early part of Kennedy's administration Kennedy defended the Director when there was public criticism of him, visited most of the FBI Field Offices and as a result "raised FBI morale and was highly respected by many agents. " Guthman goes on to relate the old criticism that the Bureau had not engaged in investigation of organized crime prior to the Kennedy Administration and, of course, completely ignores the absence of $F$ BI jurisdiction prior to enactment of appropriate criminal statutes by Congress. He also delves into the newspaper morgues in an attempt to resurrect the alleged innocence of the former Attorney General concerning wire tapping. Guthman alleges nothing which has not been previously categorically and absolutely refuted.

He does quote William G. Hundley, former head of the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Criminal Division, who states that when he asked the FBI about wire tapping and electronic bugs ". . . the top brass of the Bureau would flat-out lie to me."

The final shot taken by Guthman at the Director and the Bureau is found in a footnote on page 266 which relates an incident which allegedly occurred at a party wherein Ethel Kennedy, referring to former Los Angeles Chief of Police Parker, stated to the Director, "Don't you think Chief Parker is a wonderful man? Don't you think that if you ever retire he'd be the man to replace you?" Guthman goes on in his insidious manner to state the Director reddened and replied meekly, "Yes Ethel."

There are no further references to either the Director or the Bureau in this work which is notable for the absence of any correlation between truth and fiction.

 information that the Freedom Riders in Alabama would be attacked by the Klan; which information was furnished only to local authorities and not to the Department. As a result, the attack took place. The Director inquired "That are the facts of this allegation?"

BACKGROUND:

On $4 / 24 / 61$, information was disseminated by Bureau to all offices with instructions to alert local authorities concerning the plans of the CORE, a Negro organization favoring integration, to conduct a "Freedom Ride 106I," 号eportediy to make a nonviolent attempt to complete integration of bus service in related public accommodations in the south. The group was to arrive in - Birmingham, Alabama, 5/14/61. On 5/10-12-13/61 we received information. that local authorities might allow disturbances to take place. when the group arrived in Alabama and that the Klan intended to take violent action against the group when it arrived in a bus terminal in Birmingham 5/14/61. Memorandum Posen to Parsons 5/13/61 stated, "fe have alerted all authorities concerning the information furnished by our informant including the Chief of police of Birmingham police Department who is a National Academy graduate. $\because$. A Memoir of Robert F. Kennedy
by Edwin Guthman

No request was received from the Department for specific investigation concerning "Freedom Ride 1961" prior to the outbreak of violence and we were providing intelligence data to the Department as received. By letter 5/15/61, the Department was advised this Bureau was conducting investigation into the acts of violence which occurred in Alabama 5/14/61 and that information concerning possible violence had been $!$ furnished to Birmingham authorities prior to $5 / 14 / 61$.

By letter 5/18/61, Assistant Attorney General Burke Marshall acknowledged Bureau's intent to investigate captioned matter under character of "Racial Matters; Destruction of Aircraft and Motor Vehicle" and set forth nature and extent of Department's interest.

OBSERVATIONS:
These were fast moving occurrences and our primary concern at-that-ti-me-was-to-notify-local-authorities who could prevent violence. We did advise local authorities in time for them to prevent the attacks which took place, however, local authorities failed to take the necessary action.

Jones to Bishop Memo
RE: REVIEW OF "FAMOUS DETECTIVES" BY EUGENE B. BLOCK

Chapter three, which is entitled "Chief of the FBI" sets forth background concerning Mr. Hoover and the FBI and details our activities in connection with John Dillinger. Block begins this chapter by stating "Ask anyone to name the most famous detective in America today and without hesitation he will answer: 'J. Edgar Hoover, of course. He's the boss of the FBI. '"

Material for this chapter was furnished to Block by the Bureau. Block met the Director on 10-21-66.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the attached letter be forwarded to Block thanking him for the generous sentiments expressed in his autograph.

wiretanning and cavesdroppir: by Federal agencies. No Cor:gressional committee in the 1950's or carly 1960's had ever been able to pry this account from Federal -agencies ar: make it public.

First, the subcommittee: :s talented chief investigator, Ray:mona C, Cole Jr., sniffed around law enforcement circles and talked to the nation's leading private wiretapping experts. Since Federal agencies must buy their equipment with Government funds supervised by Congress, Fensterwald obtain ra the lists of listening and $\mathrm{r}^{\prime}$ cording equipment approved if. the General Accounting Office for Federal procurement. The subcommittee then wrote each manufacturer and asked which Federal agencies the equipmont had been sold to. Armed with this information fa few: threats of subpoenas were necessary to get the facts), the subcommittee then wrote each Federal agency which had purchased the equipment and asked for a report on the use being made of it. The choice was elfthe to respond or else to contend that the equipment was not being used at all, an admission of waste that no Fedaral agency would be likely to make to Congress.

To supplement this line of attack, the subcommittee also drew up a general questionnaive asking each major Fedaral agency (apart from the PF.B.I, military intelligence, and C.I.A.) to list all the eavesdropping equipment it owned and describe how it was being - used. Since the word was out in Washington that the Long subcommittee had already been to the suppliers, the pressure was on the Federal agencies to give accurate replies. Only when these questionnaire reports and some stormy interviews with Federal agency spokesmen had provided them with a clear pictore of Federal use did the Long subcommittee staff move to public hearings in 1964.

With a well-developed sense of political timing, the Long: subcommittee did not start its hearings by taking on that fortress of influence on Capitol Hill, the E.B.I. Instead, it opened its hearings with wiretapping and bugging practices by the Internal Revenue Serveice, a move guaranteed to trigger spasms of alarm down the spines of the nation's taxpayers. The subcommittee then moved to eavesdropping by the Food and Drug Administration (intensifying fears in the bustness community) and to the Post Office, whose "mall corers' put the nation's basic symtem of correspondence under scrutiny and whose peephole and camera surveillance of postal employs stirred labor unions to full concern.
With these disclosures having laid the groundwork, the Long subcommittee turned to the FF.B.I. Using its own sources and the disclosures that emerged from the Bobby Baker case, the subcommittee exposed bruch patterns of F.B.L praclice as the leasing of telephone lines and, most damaging of all, the use of eavesdropping. liny the F.B.I. in tax-evasion and gambling investigations. The carefully created image that the F.B.I taps and bugs only in cases involving national se-. curity or situations directly ampriting human life was nally and publicly destroyed.

What "The Intruders" provides is a collection of the Long subcommittec data in one handy volume for the nonspecialized reader. The crse against unchecked government and industrial use of clectronic surveillance is made particularly well. Given the Scnator's legal and pollicy focus, the book generally takes it for granted that Americans know what privacy is and when it is improperly invaded, thọugh these issues are not always as simple when social interests are openly weighed. In addition, there could have been a more extended discussion of debate over law enforcement claims to the need of certain limited surveillance pownrs, if only to explain the basis on which Senator Long rejects these arguments.
Despite the points on which $i$ one would have liked further discussion, the Senator's policy: suggestions on wiretapping and eavesdropping controls are carefully presented, and deserve the most thoughtful consideration from the press and Congress. His position calls for lim-. iting Federal "thind - party" wiretapping to a narrowly defined set of national security investigations (and forbiading : all use of wiretap evidence in court): restricting Federal and state witetapping to sturitionis in which one party to the converstion agrees to the monttoring; and providing a similar participant - approval limitation on law-enforcement use of bugging devices. In fact, this is very close to the stand taken by the Johnson Administration, embodied in the Administration bill just sent to Congress. There are still knotty legal and policy issues involved here, and some observers will feel that the better solution is a new system of controls rather than such a complete denial of eavesdropping authority in cases of conspiracy and violent crime. One hopes this issue will be fully discussed in Congressional hearings on the proposed bills.

Since the Long subcommittee is scheduled shortly to hold such hearings (as well as hear-等解s on the J. Edgar HooverRobert Kennedy dispute over who authorized electronic cavesdropping during the Kennicdy Administration); Senator Long is sure to be well-supplied with "Big Brother items" in the ncar future. Mcanwhile, his book is a welcome source of information showing how far elcctronic eavesdropping has spread in our soclety, and how negligent our courts and legislatures have been in not supplying the necessary legal con-. trols to assure that the individual's right to privaicy recetves the same care 23 his: right to property. $\therefore \cdots$

A decade has gone by since that tormenting national fever subsided which began with the creator oft tie Dies Committee in 1938 and reached its peak with the Senates censure of Joe McCarthy in 1954. The time now seems ripe for an assessment of this period by critics who are free from emotional involvement in th and when the tensions about the internal threat of commonism no longer inhibit public discussion.
Earl Latham is undoubtedly right in saying that the temper of those years was suspicious, excited emo tonal, pathetic, and hard. There was rage and out rage, accusation and defiance; a Babel of shouting anger. "There was worse-an erosion of that mutual trust which; is: the essential cement of any society Mc Garth himself-or what came to be known as McCarthyism- was'the culminating symptom of the national sickness. In Latham's wordstis.
Other political figures have been coarse and overbearing, loud and rude , without exerting the anxiety McCarthy.
generated. There was something else in' his manner-a. latency that it yielded moore meaning than the sum -of his words a sense of willingness to perpetrate gross assault without decency or restraint, if it served his ends He could literally unhinge the timid because he wrenched them from their confidence in the normal barriers that protect the personality from violation -courtesy, respect; and the due process of custom and law. McCarthy's power, "like a desolating pestilence," sickened the first two years of the first Eisenhower administration and, like the pox left ineradicable pits and scars and
Behind the rage and the recrimination however thy a deeply troubling reality, An American Communist Peaty Which was a docile tool of' the Soviet Governtent had taken advantage at every turn of American tolerance; idealism; and Constitutional protection of political protest And there can le no doubt that it had succeeded in infiltrating into public positions of responsibility and trust a number of persons who, at best, believed they could serve their country by serving Soviet interests or who, at worst, were agents of Soviet espionage.
These two books complement each other effectively Both are solid works of scholarship, clearly defined in aim and written with detachment, verve, and style: Frank $A$ Warren book is concerned wholly with the intellectual history of the 1930 s , as it reveals the radical Liberal thought of that decade with respect to commutism. By an exhaustive study of the polemical essays of a wide range of writers in such magazines as the Nation the New Republic and Common Sense he is Reader is likely to appreciate.

The main trouble with this approach, however, is thatramost every articulate political critic anctecons mentator in the 1930 s could be considered a liberate And this means, obviously, that the rubric covered a bewilderingly wide range of opinion. Because of the very nature of liberalism, moreover, the opinions of almost all of it's representatives, during a period of social upheaval, were in a continuous state of flux, and the range of their thinking was really too broad to permit valid generalization.
Liberals who became antiliberal and called themselves' conservatives "came to indict their former lassoCoates as dupes of the Communists and as guilty some:

how of betrayal of their own primelp cause ithey ,yeveriofas quick as they meht have bewto condemn the excesses and outrages of the Soviet system. But this Wás a condemnation that ignored the fact that libetalism naturally took a hopeful attitude toward the Russtin Revolution and toward the whole experiment of a classless society Wären quotes Roger Baldwin:
For 15 years I looked with hope on the Soviet Union as a pioneer in creating an ordered and planned economy in which compulsion would gradually disappear. My support of the combined factors represented by the Soviet Union varied from a high at one time of about $80^{\circ}$ per cent to a low of litle over per cent until finally, after 1936 when the great purges began, it dropped to a point where the evidence against the promise of the Soviet Union outweighed my hopes ${ }^{\text {b }}$ -There surely nothing discreditable in this position. Some libetals were disililusioned earlier, some field on to their hopes until the signing of the Nazi-Soviet Pact in 1939 . Some were slow to accept the harsh truths about Soviet tyranny, tending to dismiss such reports as rabrications of a hostile press; some condoned these outrages as an iniescapable cost and consequence of the revolution Some shrewd sensed the danger of collaborating with Communists in a Popular Front some disregarded this danger out of a sense of confidence in the integrity of their own purposes. During the Popular Fiont period, Warren reminds'us, the marked infuence of Communism Tésulted from an ideological and evotional appeal attuned to the liberals need for ideological explanation and emotional astsirance." As Warren goes on to point out, "the liberals-did not respond simplys innocent dupes. It was part of their creed that vadious groups, différing in methods but agreéng in general principles, could work together.":
princt, important to remember that throughout this peritit the Tiberals were engaged in: their own vital program of social reform under the New weal. They "were busy building labor unions and prömoting racial equality fand advancing social welfare; and if the Communists waited to tag along in these undertakings, most liberals were willing to let them. But in simple truth it was the Communists, not the liberals, who were the fellowtravelers sin this arrangement.

Le'tham's book presents a larger cenvas, which depicts the whole complex picture of the beginnings of Soviet espionage in America, the sensational. chazges and discoveries of the House Committee on Un-American, Activities , the development of the Federal LoyaltySecurity Program, and the impact of McGarthyism. All. this is done with objectivity, farness, and judgment: Latham has aimed, and" with considerable success, at a history of the period, nemen or an atrack;

Tand view the characterat bis drama with detachment. Heprovites the new generuto of people who have no memory of the tensions of that period with a balanced account of events that gains in perspective. what it may have lost in passion.

- My main reservation is that Gatham gives too much credence to the testimony of Whittaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley. He remarks that "I have come across: no argument against the credibility of the main stories of Bentley and Chambers that seemed to me convincing enough to susperid the tentative conclusion that most of what they said was correcte But one could with equal fairness put it differently and say that muth of thieir testimony has not yet received the corroboration that enables us to accept it.
Behind both of these books lies the question of res spönsibility and guilt. In his concluding chapter, Warfen quotes this criticism of liberal conduct from 1952 : Did not the major segment of American libetitism as a resuit of joining hands with the Communists in a Popurlar Front, go on record as denying, the existence of Soviet concentration camps? Did it not give its blessing to the "liquidation" of millions of Soviet "Kulaks?", Did &itnot apologize for the mass purges of $1936-38$, and did it not solemnly approve the grotesque trials of the old. Bolsheviks? Did it not applaud the massace of the non-Commupist left by the GeU during the Spanish Givil War?
Ali,these questions deserve an outraged "No" Many liberals, it is true, were slow-or slower than they should. have been-to recognize that the monstrous tyrany of Stalin had smashed their hopes for the Rus: sian Revolution. But with very rare exceptions, they neither applauded nor condoned any of the aspects of this tyranny. They were guilty of no more than a periz sistent hope that the principles to which they gave fealty would emerge from the rubble of revolition.

But what of the guilt of those castigators of liberalism who betrayed its principles-who were quick to ory that dissent was entitled to no Constitutional protection if it could be labeled disloyal and who were ready, in the service of an hysterical anti-communism, to jettison the very institutions of democracy? Theirs, in trüth was the ugliest and most dangerous form of subversion, for they struck at the foundations of the American society:
By "and large, despite much diversity of opinion among them on specific issues the men recognized as the leaders and champions of liberalism in the postewar years held a reasonable and réalistic view of commit nism. They, contained the Soviet Union, and yet spared the world An Armageddon; they reconnized the Com munist movement for what it was, and yet refised To Sacrince civil tưerty:

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont

 Re: "The Deadly Silence"Mrs. Burse also identifies Frank Costello as the late Albert Anastasia's "first assistant" (whereas the two had actually been "bosses" of their respective "families" and "Commission" members for a number of years prior to Anastasia's assassination in ::1957). Nor is there any substantiation for her statement that Joe Profaci was then "the Big Boss," since reliable sources have advised that Genovese-mafter ordering Costello and Anastasia shot--personally called the meeting, set the agenda, and approved the site where it was to be held.

Still two other errors appear in the reason Mrs. Burse offers for the holding of the meeting and the number of persons present. The theory that underworld leaders had come from as far away as the west coast to decide the fate of a New York City hoodlum who had been accused of trying to "muscle into another man's exclusive jukebox territory" was first advanced by Lieutenant William Mooney, of the New York City Police Department, who later advised that he had no factual? proof for the statement.

In saying that 45 men were detained by the New York State Police after leaving the Apalachin meeting, Mrs. Burse also proves that she did a minimum of research on her book, aside from contacting Giordano and other representatives of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. If, for instance, she had read Sergeant Edgar D. Crosswell's testimony before the Senate Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field, she would know that a total of 60 were actually detained.

Bureau files reveal that Mrs. Buse was appointed editor of "True Detective" magazine in September, 1951, and that we have enjoyed a limited, but friendly, correspondence with her since that time. In April, 1952, she was afforded a special tour of the Bureau's facilities at the Seat of Government.

ACTION:

For information. Mrs. Burse's book will be forwarded to the Bureau Library for permanent retention.

Vic Brown, attracted physically to Ingrid, a young woman who works in his office, thinks he loves her, and after a very short time of dating and love making, realizes that "there isn't the magic there was at the beginning.". . "I don't love her, and that's the awful truth."
"how can I tell her I've been taken in because sex and a dream have got all mixed up inside me?" . . "I'm caught and that's a fact-oh, what a fool; what a bloody, bloody fool!'
Through the eyes of Vic, Mr. Barstow sees the universe as a Godless place of blind necessity and inexorable law, and seems to ask us not to weep, not to laugh, but to understand the misery of the "life sentence" Vic drifted into through his own weakness. Some of the inchoate philosophy of Vic is in such a passage:
 can't allow for that" p. 309).
After living through a series of unhappy and sometimes tragic events Vic realizes that the adventitious charms of Ingrid, who is now his wife, have disappeared. He hopes that together they can find a real love that will come with shared living. As he says, he hopes so, "because its for a long, long time."
Although the theme and the plot are as old as the sin that is described, the language, a combination of Yorkshire slang and profanity, is new (to me at least) and there is no denying that Mr. Barstow is a virtuoso of rhythm and accent.
There is much humor in the racy dialogue:
"She was a bint with the neatest pair of gams I've seen" (T. 83).
"Teeth, all sticking out of the gums any-old-how like gravestones in a mouldy old church-yard" (p. 70).
"The trouble is there's two sides to everybody and Ingrid brings out all the worst in me instead of the best" (p. 209).
This is a novel written on a purely personal plane in the comic tradition of pure criticism. It is extremely witty and sad by turns, permeated with echoes of universal ideas: I have the distinct inppression that Mr. Barstow knew Chekhov's line "Mantwill only become better when you make him see what he is like."

> Clara M. Siggins, Ph.D., Boston College, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts

This beok is Endsville, as the teenagers say, in the field of obscene, vulgar and profane words. You may have wondered at times just how far it would be possible to go in that field? If you read Valhalla you will rest secure that the ultimate has been reached.
In this book you have a literal transcription of the talk and actions of a group of Marines who, after a session in the Korean War, come to Japan for an interlude between wars. If there are any punches pulled, you can't imagine what they are, except perhaps in the field of abnormality. This "realism" is going to count against the book, which is unfortunate, because the book is worthwhile. It has a very important message. To have toned down the language and the descriptions would have deprived the book of much of its power.
Let us start by saying that this is an adult book. Secondly let us say that the realistic language is not put in as a lurid detail to lure a curious reader. The language is an essential and substantial part of the book. You might say that the book should not have been written, but you can't say that it should have been put through a kind of moral wringer.
From the book the first thing that we learn is that there is something wrong with the Marine Corps. They seem to be a group of men without ideals; they are men trained to kill; they are men who have turned sour. The general idea seems to be that they join the Corps under false inducements. Once in the Corps they are flooded with hypocrisy, e.g. a chaplain talks to them and contradicts what he says by shacking up with a Japanese girl in an area remote from the group. Their idea about things back in the USA is that the Capitalists are in power and that they are exploiting the poor. Speaking of Pretty Boy Floyd and Dillinger, one of the Marines says:
"The goddam insurance companies screwed them . . . , took their land, and everything they owned. Just like they're doing today. And they never committed half the crimes they were accused of. But Old J. Edgar Hoover took advantage of this, sce? It was a good gimmick to ger his start and build a name. After that," he sidid with contempt, "after they got a few of the big ones like "Gillis, Floyd and Dillinger, you couldn't stop the glory boys."
"There's your goddam robber barons," Poke agreed, "The F.B.I."

Another thing which is evident from the book is the evil of a standby army. The ennui, the doing of things which have no meaning, (standing guard when there is nothing to guard), these things really drive the men. The author makes you feel the terrible tensions which build up in men separated from home life and the pathways of cultured man. (This Marine division was not part of the occupying force, just a division standing by in the event of further trouble in the Far East.) Perhaps this thing is necessary. Something should be done, if it is, to change things, e.g. screen out borderline maniacs and provide those remaining with some possibilities of family life.
There is a horrible account of life in a Marine Brig. The way the men are treated can not be duplicated, we hope, in jails for the worst criminals run in the worst way in the USA. And this treatment is for offenses which are minor. In the case of the man described in the book, it was for leaving his guard post and then going berserk. If this part of the book is true, there should be some investigation. This is by far the worst part of the book. A similar account in From Here to Eternity is tame compared to this. You are surprised to find that the Marine Corps could contain personnel so sadistic; secondly you are amazed to hear that they are not only tolerated but encouraged in their activity; and, lastly, you wonder how the men who command the Marines, can be so deaf to the rudiments of modern penology.
If there is a hero of the book, it is the Japanese people. When you recall that this is an account by a man who has no interest in building up these people, you are amazed to find out how friendly and likeable they are. Most of the contacts were with the women, with a sexual background; but looking beyond this it is surprising how kind they were, interested in the welfare of the men, understanding of the stresses they were going through, never trying to victimize or swindle them. The Marines seemed to travel easily, even in civilian clothes, all over the country. This is one of the most fascinating. parts of the book.
Although this is the first book Mr. Peacock has written, he is not an amateur writer. He writes very well; he observes very closely and when he interprets the thoughts of his characters, even when they are Japanese, he does this with great skill. He is never boring. He is able to continue the narrative of the same individual for several chapters and only turns to another Marine when you yourself feel that things have gone far enough. We will hear much more of this young author. As a final word: while reviewing this book, I was present at a men's study group. The topic of discussion was a recent article in America on Catcher in the Rye which contains much profanity and sex. In line with this discussion I brought up Valhalla. All the men agreed that the language and drinking and fornication described in Valhalla are actually true accounts of life in the armed forces and also incidentally in many of our modern factories. In other words this is the state of affairs that our younger generation is headed for. To shut our eyes and bury our heads in the sand is not going to answer the question that Mr. Peacock is asking.

Dayan, Yaël
World. Jan. 17, 1961. 187p. $3.50. (IIa)
The interest in-this-stimprovel lies mainly in its picture of life in an Israeli, yiffage, situated close to the border and within earshot of hostile rifles. Itsyoung author, Yaël Dayan, should know whereof she speaks, since she is the daughter of General Moshe Dayann, former commander-in-chief of the Israeli Army, in which she served two years, after enlisting in 1956 at the outbreak of the Sinai war, and where she earned hof commission as a lieutenant.
The settlers of this pioneering colony of Beit-On are refugees from Europe, jealously wedded to their land and resolutely befit upon its defense. Save for the gentle old cobbler, Rabbi Lamech, and a handful of old folks, the faith of these rugged people reposes not in the God of their fathers but in the ground they till and the guns they carry. To defend the acres they have wrested from the flinty hills they feel they must rely solely upon their own strength, tenacity and courage. To this end weakness and fear must be bred out of their sons; and cowardice must be banished from their midst as the evil of evils.
In this Spartan environment, in a secret spot in the hills, we meet young Nimrod, a strong, sensitive handsome boy of eight, playing the favorite game of the youngsters of the village, "Who is strong?" Each in turn must respond to the challenge by undertaking a feat that proves beyond doubt his fearlessness and strength. Nimrod excels in this kind of competition and under the tutelage of his father and the goading of Gideon, the village hero, quickly puts behind him the fairy tales, toys and fears of childhood to become $a$ hardened, lonely uncommunicative young tough, bent upon proving himself a-hero and patriot. If we were to judge his case as fypical, it would appear that there is danger Israel imay be-rearing its own homebred type of Nazi. However Gideon falls victim to his foplhardy recklessness and in his crippled and embittered state realizes how badly he was misled. He attempts in yain to open Nimrod's eyes 'to' the errors of his ways, which have brought unhappiness to his family and threaten to wreck his marriage with Elli, a gentle Hungarian refugee. But it is not until he is engulfed with an overwhelming wave of fear for the safety of his" own son, now playing in furn the game of "who isftrong?" that Nimrod realizes'that courage is rather the knowledge of what is to be feared than the fear of fearitself and that there may be after all, grounds to envy the frightened. For adults who are interested in the conflicts and developments in Israel, this story, simply and artlessly told, with its mofal that fearlessness can destroy a man, may prove of inferest.

Wright, Richard
World. Jan. 23, 1961. 250p. $3.95. (IIb) Eight Men When Richard Wtight died two monthstago in Paris, he had reached the position of Ameriça's best-selling and most widely known Negro author. Born in poverty in the South, folding countless jobs to support himself and his family, undergoing constant abouse and mistreatment, this sensitiye and gifted man told much of his personal stofy in the classic Black Bay. So many episodes in this autobiography are memorable; yet, perhaps, the mos't characteristic incident in the book was Wright's fattempt as a youth to borrow books from a Southern library. Borrowing the library card of a friendly white man, Wright had to pretehd that he was really obtaining the books for the white man. From such episodes as this, it is not difficult to see why Wright eventually exiled himself to France, where he had freedon from prejudice and where the could be accepted as a human being. A tragic and bitter story was Richard Wright's life, and, yet, the bitterness which permeates much of his literary work is purlfying. This bitterness is bothla lament and a cry for justice. Above all, this bitterness is the truth speaking in genuine sincerity.
This present book is'a collection of eight narratives, one of which is more an autobiographical essay than a short story. All of these tales are written in simple, straightforward prose, which is generally effective and always moving. Sincerity and impassioned feeling constantly earmark Wright's style. At its best this style is a powerful and perfect medium for his down-to-earth people who are caught in fundamental situations. At its worst-in a story such as "Man, God Ain't Like That"-this style becomes schoolboyish and inept.
Most of this collection is devoted to Negroes, both in the South and in Americah urban society. One tale is set in Copenhagen, another in Africa and Pafis. The nonAmerican locale stories are considerably inferior to the American natiatives, both in meaning and in conception. Wright is at his best in "The Man Who Saw the Flood," a story of Nedro tenant farmers victimized by a flood; "Man of All Work," an episode abqut a decent occur, it t is essential that steps abe taken to prevent communism from radiating outward from dis Cuban base and to help the Cuban pen: pletely opposite views of the Castro revolution.

 UR point of view regarding the hat ture of inter－state relations between the socialist and capitalist countiles has been set forth a number oftimes．Wh gistof it，in brief，is，first，that the form on state organization and the form of social organization of any particular country must be decided by the people of that coun－ try themselves，secondyy that no state or any external forces can or should inpose on other nations their way of life or their politiel or social system；thir dy Sincemans sociar development takespace Tong an aseending line， 1 inevitably，gives riseto hetu forms of ilie for society：caphant states， ChWhat does this principle méan practice？It does not demand that the capitalist states renounce their exist ing system．or ideology．Naturally，acceptance of this prin ciple will notlead to the immediate elimination of disputes and contradictions that are inevitable under conditions when different states exist．

- But this principle demands that the states，in setting outstandiningissues＇st between them，shoild reriounice the use of force in any：form，including military force；and seek thie peacefult settlement of possible conflicts respecting the mutual interests of the parties concerned ac：Peace ful cf existence also prestupposes the＂complète and unquadit fied inon－interference of states in the internal affairs of one hanother with a yiew to changing their＇system or way 0 ilié or for any other feason．
4 I think that the meaning given to the term peaceful coexistence will now be clearer to you As you＇see，we staind for a healthy and realistic basis for relations bee theen states with different social systems The principle of yeaceful coexistence does not place any indidividual state or any group of states at an advantage over other states and does not infringe on anyone＇s interests，ititis of benefit to all who desire peace，not in words，but in deeds： editor of the：Melloourne Herild，Jüne T1， 1058

- The Soviet Union stands for the establishment of friendly relations with all countries regardless of itheir social and political systems, and we see no obstacle to the broadest development of all types of contact between tog socialist a capitalist countries. We do not however close our eyes to the fact that there are bound to bepoints of difference or, as you term them clashes of opinions and interests, between the socialist and capitalist countries Shut we consider that these differences and clashes shoud not le dito war. It must not be forgotten that an our age, the age of atomic energy and inter-continenta rockets; any country which attempts to settle international disputes by force of arms hazards its own existence by so doing, Those in the West who do not want to uinderstand this and wh still console themselves with hopes aboutthe poyer of aircraft carriersand bombs are thinking initerms of the last century Only political manacs and suicides conconsider war as a means of setting intenationatis putes wid differences.
The only rational way of setting international differences and disagrements is through negotiations and mutaily acceptable agreements which take notacount thenterests of ali the parties concerned
IKAs I have already said; the socialist countries con. sistently adhere to the principles of peacefulcoevistence Butfor peace to triumph, the policy of peaceful co exist ence should be recognized and pursued, iffinot by all; then at lieast by the majority of countries, and abdve all by: those apon whose policy the question of peace or wat
 p. The rulers of the United States, Britain and their partners' must renounce their policy from positions of strength and their claims for domination oy other countries. The soger the jllusionswand emotions of the Western Powers give place to réality and common sense; the better will be for everybod and fort world peace, . LAS magds the ideological differences between the eapitalist and socialist countries titis today nothing short oftradness to attempt to impose ohes own ideological opinions on others by force of arms. We are fully convinced that in life's disputes those vews and conceptions wili triumph which most faith fully reflect the objective laws of mankind drsocial de velopment and the requirements not of the minonity but of the majority of people In our opinion, Marxism-Lenins ism is such an ideology: Reality day by day and hour by hour continues to confirm its correctress.
countriestis orference in the internal affairs of other countries is one of the basic principles to which our coun tiy adheres in its foreignipolicy: Eyery people is master in its own house, and it alone has the right to decide what shall be its internal system

We resolutely condem the use of the diktat in international relations.: The puinciple of non-interference in the affairs of othe countries must be observed by ain countries, not only in words but in deeds.

Relations Between East and West: Let Us Improve Our Relations  $J$, And Strengthen Peace

We have always said and continue to say now: Let us improve our relations, let ús trade, Tet us' develop scientific, cultural and sports contacts. Let us meet and discuss préssing international problems in abusinessilike máner. We have proposed and we proposénow that an end be put to the cold warend the arms race, that the "policy of strength' be renounced, that the policy of intimidatio by war be abandoned' and that our relations be built on the basis of peaceful co-existence

The Soviet Government is seady to discuss any quest tions designed to strengthen peace and establish greater confidence among the states, to disčuss these questions withits partners

Mr. Eisenhower; for Instance, recently put forward in one of his speeches the deatof pooling the efforts lof the Soviet Union and the United States to combat such scourges of mankind as cancer, tuberculosistand malaria. We believe that one can agree with this. One could list many other questions, such as the strugtle against poliomyeititis, locusts, glanders and footeand-mouth disease We are successfully co-operating with Iran and Afghánistanin combating locusts. There are many other matters regarding which, far from hindering ico-operation; we are doing our utmost to extend Although not all the ese problems are acute or dangerous to our country, we are nevertheless ready to co-operate with countries where such problems are particularly pressing: *We shall be pleased to pool our efforts with those of other countries frisolving such problems:

Co-operation Leads to Gonsolidation of the Cause of Peace

It may safely be said that although certan circles in the imperialist countries are clinging frantically to the bànkrupt:" pósitions of strength" policy; the próspects for the relaxation of international tension and the develop ment of economic óoperation and scientific and cultural exchanges between countries with different social systems have now become more fayourable.

Take for instance, the-tagreement on the development of cultural contacts concluded between the Soviet Union and the U. S. A. It is a big step forward The socialist countries have made definite progress in the development of cultural contacts twith the capitalist countries.
ance Indeed, every socialist countryis, doing sits utmost to extend cultural relations with other countriess the Polish People's Republic among others, having done much in this direction: One can only welcome this de velopment of cooperation, this strengthening of friendy ties between peoples, for it lèads to better understanding and the cônsolidation of the caúse per pe. . , \%,

It is well known that the socialist countriesthave established economic ties with many capitalisticountriest Recently busiñess\% circles in copitalist countries have been making more frequent statements in favouit of the extension of the se contacts Today there are few poople in the West who believe in the efficacy of the bankrupt policy of economically blockading the socialist countries. The world socialisteconom is able to prodice every thing needed for its fưrther de velopment and no banns imposed by themuling circles of certain countries on trade with the socialist countries can prevent ur from contin uing to advance as successfully as we are now doing

If anyone stands to lose from these prohibitions, it is the business circles of the Western Powers. Their:interests call for the extension of trade with the socialist coun tries For our part, we also welcome the expansion o trade between the socialist and the capitalist countries The socialist countries havedalways stood for the at

Peaceful $\mathbf{C o}$-Existence IsHardReality:

We considered and still consider, that Ideological differences are no way an obstacle to the deyelopment of mutualy profitable trade betweensocialist and capitat
 F. T would recall that even m the eary 1920 s miny Western ountries, because of economic expediency despite ideological differences, established trade relatitns with the Soviet Union. Since then trade between the Soviet Uion ard capitalist countries, except for eertain relatively brief interruptions, has continued to develop stédilyt - In 1957 for instance, our trade with capitalist coung tries increàsed (at comparable prices) approximately tyo fold as compared with 1930 But can his growthtre considered adequate and correspondind to the interests oot thédevelopment of xond trade? a I think you willagree with me that trade has a more Than economic significancel Trade is the most normai Qay of estabishing good relations between countriest

Trade and economic ties create a good basis for the con solidation of intermational political relations: THe Soviet Union today has trade treaty relations with 45 countries with all the socialist countries, almost dil the countriés of Western'Europe, including Britain, Brance, Itäly, Austrin Svitzerland, Greece Sweden, etc, with the majority of Asian and African countries, includ ing India, Indonesiaj Jpan Iran, Afghanistan, Burna, the United Arab Republic and many others Wealso have trade a grements with two countries of the American continent - Canada and Argentina:
Y With a number of countries ye have agreements. Whech provide for the deyelopment of exchange on the Dasis of agreed lists of commodities for reciprocal ded Heriés.
Many, Western countries are showing an interest in the development of trade with the Soviet UnWon on the bisis of longern agreements Thatis why the Soviet Union has in recent years concluded longferm agreed Hents on reciprocal deliveries with a number of capitalist countries, for instance, asfiye-year arreement with Fin14idand longterm agreements with Norkay Iceland and Denharie 整 Itr 1957 alone we concluded such long term agree. ments with France Italy Austria, Afghanistan and Tran Negotiations are in progress on a long term agreement getwen heUSRRand the Federal Republic of Germany. Alithese greements provide for a substantial increase in Tade ft The United States of America is now the ony Great Power and one bf the few countries of the world with which the Soviet Unioh does not have frade treaty relay tions. If the Goyernment of the United States expresses addesire to conclude a trade freaty or agreement with the USSRT Tcanassure you of a favourable response from the Soviet side:
WhWe advocate tye lifting of all restrictions and bans ontrade between the capitalist and the socialist countries not only becaus we hope itivould promote the establishiment of confidence in the relations between all nations and bring about a relaxation of internationial tension but also because discriminatory restrietions led to uncer tainty in commerce and mistrust bêtween the partners in traden Connected as you are withobusiness circles, you should know full welf how much confidence means th commerce and how adyersely its absenceaffects the ded

THE Solviet Union is an irreconcilable opponent of the shameful system of colonialism and gives support to all peopies who are fighting for their nationalibera tion, for the strengthening of their nation independence. We know with what difficulty the new is born. The old forces not only do not want to recognize the new but do eyerything possible to nip it in the bud.

The Great October Socialist Revolution struck a powerful blow at the entire system of imperialism and colonialism. The past 40 years have séen tremendous changes throughout the world. The defeat of the aggres sors in the Second World Wax, the victory of the Peoplet Liberation Revolution in China; the formation of a whol Aroup of socialist states in Europe and Asia - all this deal年other crushing blow at imperialism. One colonala empir fter another began to tumble dôwn, and moresand more independent states are emerging in the world. $\angle, 2$, tr The Soviet people rëjoice at the liberation of the pooples of Asia and Africa from the yole of colonialism We, for our part, are ready to do everything to facilitat the complete likeration of the colonial and dependen countries.
While establishing friendy retations with othercountries, we have never forced on them, nor do we want to force on them, our system of government, nor do we aim to derive privileges or any special matedial benefits

Our people are used to earning their own living; we respect the labour of all peoples and believe that'every man and woman and all nations have the rif hit to dispose of the fruits of their work and of the wealth of their country.

The Colonialist Policy of Imperialists: Is Tottering and Breaking Up,

These are good times in which we are living. As dur ing a great spring flood the ice is now breaking up, every thing is blossoming, everything is moving aheadin its his: torical development. The age-old ice of the colonial regime also has cracked and is breaking up before our eyes in quite a number of countries. The peoples are casting off and are breaking the chains of colonialism.

In wain are the efforts of those who wouldike to curb the liberation struggle of the peoples who have riset against agèold colonial oppression. As the spring waters break the winter ice on frozen rivers, so the peoples of the colonial countries and imperialist dependéncies are brea ing the hatěful order established in their countries by alie enslavers. The colonialist policy of the imperialists is to fering and breaking up and this drives them to violent fury. Wh We revolutionaries, followers of Marx, Engels and inni, rejoice that the colonial peoples have risen in r) solute struggle against their oppressors, against the colohialists and that they wish to be masters of their own des tiny We hail their movement, sympathize with them in their liberation struggle and want to do everything to help them achieve their legitimate and noble alm-the liberation of their countries and national independences. We wish the peoples of these countries to be masters of their own national wealth; that these peoples ensure for them selves a state structure in their own countries dictated by their national interests:

The Arab.peoples who have risenin resolute struggle against timperialismare wáging this struggle not under the Marxist banner, but under the colours of the national libeeration movement. How they will order their life after wards is their own affair. We greet them as they are today fighters against colonialism; against imperialism, who demand that the jackboots of the alien invader should not trample upon,their soil.

The Colonialists Will Surely Fail To Halt This Struggle

 is a matter of life and death for the coloniál peoples: But those who are accustomed to being coloniälists do nót want tounderstand that at all. Morever atimes it is not un derstood ven by poople who consider triemselves progres sive and free thinking, and who condem violence They have beecome accustomed to a situation in which the im perialists of this or that Westernistate lord it over a num ber of countries of Asia, Africa; and South America by vir-tue of bein tue of being more "developed and highily civiilized," as if destined to fulfill a "noble mission," to "bring civilization and culture" to the peoples of underdeveloped countries.
o. Such explanations are untenable. There are no arguments, nor can there be; to justify the preservation and ome other Western poople boast that in Britain and in Higher than in other countriés, we must not forget ot whose expense this has been achieved. It became possible at the expense of the millions of people who were sacrificed to attain that high level.

How many millions have died and are still dying bday in colonial countries so that colonialists may be able make huge fortunes out of the blood, poverty and suffering of the peoplest is not civilization and culture that the colonialists bring to the countries dependent upon them, but oppression, violences poverty, backwardness and ent slavement:

THE imperialists who extract oil and other wealth; practically for nothing, from the colonial and dependent countries, ignore the fact that owing to this, millions upon-millions of people children and adults-perish in those countries. This does not, disturb them the least: They say that the Asian and African peoples have always lived in greater poverty, and fared Worse thanithe popula tion in the Western countries.

Can the peoples of Asia and Africa reconcile them selves to such prospects? They are fighting, and will con' tinue to fight for their inde endence, for the right tot dis. $+$ pose of their countries' wealth themselves. The peoples of Asia and Africa are wáging a determined struggle for the national independence of their countries The colonialists will not be able to halt this struggle " It began despite the wishes of the coloniatists and it will reach a successfur con clusion."
se As forrelations betiveen the socialist countries, on the one hand, and the former colonial countries and the Cot onial countries. whichere liberating themselves on the ther, here there is complete clarity It is necessary to strengthen in every way the relations between these coun tries, both along governmental lines and alongsocial lines: To exchange delegations, to render eachother assistance in economic and cultural matters and in the developmento indústry.

Economically highly developed countries should help, the underdeveloped countries to enable the peoples of those countries to utilize the available possibilities for pro moting their economy, culture and science and for raising the standard of living of the population. I thing that rel tions of just such a kind are developing at the present tim In tuture, too, they should develop in the sam direction:

I believe that all socialist countries understand their Hole precisely in the following way: To trelp one another, o heip the socialist countries, and at the same time also to elp the countries which are throwing off; or have already hrown off; the colonial yoke, not to interfere in the in. ternal affairs of those countries, but to help them in their development, in the consolidation of national independ. ence and sovereignty CCORDINGEY, itis al ways necessary to be guided by the well-known Five Principles which are now recog. nized by many countries: Mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty, nön-aggression, non-inter ference in one another's affárs, equality and mutual bene fit, peaceful coexisténce and economic cooperation. Such a development of relations provides the only correct way It will promote the strengthening of the forces of progress, the strengthening of friendly relations between countries, and, consequently it will help to ensure lasting peace, , As for my wishes for the Indian peopie, they have always been, and they remain, most sincere and opent hearted. First of ally heartily wish that the people of India may enjoy all the fruits of the independence India has woth in her struggle againtst the colonialists. It is our wish thit India may develop her economy; because independence can only be retained when the national economy is de veloped to a high level, making it possible to provide abundantly for the needs of the people.

If we do not achieve a solution to the problem of whit versal disarmament, a country must possess the means to defeñ its freedom and independence.t
W If colonialists were to attempt to re-establish their colonial domination in your country, you would not tolerate that, would you? In order to retain the national ine dependence, which many countries have now, achieved fter having driven out the colonialists', they should de; elop their national economy in every possible way.

From interview with indian jouirnalists, Jily 20, 1955.

TTh he pressin Western states devoted much space to countries We are in favour of such assistanceveloped compete in this field : But such aid must be rendered as to enable the country assisted to really develop its econs omy and to rid itself of dependence on e eonomically stronger countries, actually ensuring its independence It is precisely such assistance that the underdevetoped countries need.
must be dond in a way tountries are to be helped, this must=be done in a way to enable them to increase theis. economic potential, in order to strengthen these states, and help them stand on their own feet But the imperialists cannot accept this because it contradicts the es? sence of imperialism.

- 5 The imperialists haye pumped tremendouswealth out ofthe colonial and dependent countries Let them returno at least a portion of what they have plundered They are under obligation to do this.
t 0 ur country has taken no hand in conialy plunder From the moment'Soviet power was proclaimed tenin dét clared that our state was vigorously oposed to the im perialist colonial policy the enslavement and oppressibin of some countries by others. And our state has undeyi-2 atingly carred out and will continu to cary out suthan policy
, wo Aor the Soviet Union, it has helped and will continue to help underdeveloped countries disinterestediy by lending direct assistance. We come to ternis on anhonest basisswith those countries which need suchassistance, As. everyone can see, "ur assistance therefore fundamentally differs from that "aid" which the imperialists are render" ing underdeveloped countries

There is no force on earth which could halt the move. ment of the peoples fighting for their independence, for their liberation.

Soclalist Coundies Do Not Need War

The goyerningecircles of the timperalist poprers aim theftedolicy against peaceful co-existence: There are tatemen in the capitalist countries who deny the ned 4t peadul coexistence But what does thatmean? It Heais gomg to war There is no other alternative.
We to not ne de war The soclalist countries are gawiz lapidly deyeloping countries. They are young Soundand strong, and the future inevitabiy belongs to the oung the growing We need peace to build the new so ciety oum countries have all the requisites for it t, CLike a grevously sick man prepared to do anything o prolong his life, capitalism, too, fatally ill as it is, seeks Falvation in such things as the armaments race war prep arations hydrogen oobos, and military blocs, hoping thereby to checkrein the developmentof socilism and prolongits owin existencea.

Certain in the triumph of sociallsm, certadn that the future belongs to it, we resolutely oppose the cold wat Socialism doesnot need atomic or hydrogen bombs to es eertitself like sound seed thrown on good earth 1 o g millions of people all oyer the world:

Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons As Only Way Oüt of Deadlóck

Mentif they want to retain their bonds with the people Gititho longer be able to turn a deafeare to this universal demand of our times, ath, even if they do not reach sut agreemét among themsetyes, they wil be compeltat udidaterally to discontinue the production of atomic and fyarogen weapons:

Jith Isuch required in the present tenséconditions and with the existing suspicions, for the accidentaly appear ance of foreign plane for a bomb "acidentally" drop ped by it to cause military conflic which may turn into a general war?
Strange as it may sem there are some persons on Official positiouns in the United States and Britain whô are trying to prove that flights of bombers carrying hydirgen bombs are aecessary. The more planes with hydrogen weapons are flying in the air the less the room that is ileft for the doves of peace and the more for the machinations of the demon of war.

The level of amaments in some countries is nowat guch a stage that a moment is evidently coming perhaps Hias already come when these countries themselves, trespective of whether an agreement on discontinuing he manufacture of atom and hydrogen bombs is reached or not will have to say Enoughy

In the pastobsolete weapons, and military equipment were replaced as new nodels were developed but today evidently, a stagé has been reached in whichit is difficut to invent a more powerful, weapon than; the hydrogen bomb, since there are no, limits to its power. It is not by ehance that scientists so far timidy it is true are ex pressing the opinion that if the accumulated stockpiles of nuclear weapons are explöded this can poison the atmosphere of the entire world

The appalling consequences of nuclear weapons for all mankind aré realized not only by scientists But also by the broadest sections of the public by hundreds of mile ilonsof ordinary people throughout the world

They are increasingly demanding of the govern ments, and above all of the governments of the countries Dossessing nüclear weapons, that anis end be put to the tests of these beapons. Common sense suggests to the people the only way out of the deadlock on the disarme fent problem And this way out lies in the complet rotibition ofnuclear weapons $\quad$ ?

Therefore it necessary to recognize the historical fáct that"two states, with different social systems"existin Germany the-socialist German Democratic Republicand the capitalist Federal Republic of Germany With the aim of peacefully unifying the country the Government of the German Democratic-Republic has made a reasonable proposal first to create a German confederation, which would be a unon by treaty of two sovereigh states, in order to pursue a common policy on a definite range of external and internal questions
Whe Soxiet Union has more thar once set out te wiew on this question declaring that the German question can be solved only by the German poople themselves. The Sovief Union, forits part vill do every thing to help the reunification of Germany.

 BY NIKITAS. KHRUSHCGEY, DOW Let us turn to the Geman ques tion. As soon as the des siability of a summit conference is mentioned the governing cincles of certan Western Powers consider it neessary to push the so-called German question into the fores ground and demand that precisely this issue be discussedby an internationalconCerence.
Whut whatis the German queston. in present day conditions? It is, above au, the question of relations between the two soveres states with different social sys. tems now existing on German onil Itis the probfemolontacts raprochement and anifications bne form or another of the two states, with the fim of restoring the national unity of Germany as single peacefut and democratic state:

Peace Treaty Is Fundamentat

 T To Settlement of German Problem+ 4
4 we care aware that the probtem of a peace treaty profoundyy agitates the minds of Germans. And that is undeestandable More than 12 years have elapsed since the end of the Second World War, but the German people are stillewithout a peace treaty which would wite finis to the war and its consequences. The problem of peace treaty wit the proplem of restoring Germany's complete sovereignty and independence, the problem of its fronTiers and of the withdrawal of foreign troops from its teritoryw It is therefore natural that no ersatz agiee ments suchas the Paris Agreementsj can take the place of a peace treaty: Such decisions can only bé of a transit torynature, because they do not spring from the national giterests of the two German states and are in direct confict with the interests of the security of a nuber ofstates, above al thase that took part in the war agans Hitler Germany
*Rutat is one thing to end the state of war with Gen maty which has also been done by the Soviet Governmen In vey of the Western Powers opposition to the conclu

Ton of a peace treaty with Germany, and another to con lude a peace treaty, which defines the external condit tons through the observation of which Germany s entire development could be protected from every kind of ex traneous interference During the entire postyar period the Soviet Government has been working for a funda mental settlement of the German problem through the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany. E Bearing in mind that there are two sovereign states InGermany today The German Democratic Republicatid the Federal Republic of Germany itis important notito postpone the drawingup ofidraft peace treaty in order to give the German people cleataea of Germany spros pectslfor future development:

Nẻedess to say, the Germans themselves the Ger man Democratic Republic and the Federal Republio of Germany must take part in the drawing up of such a draft treaty And here again, in my opinion, it is theproa posal of the Government of the German Democratic Re public to set up aerman confederation that offersithe most realistic possibilities for the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germanyyy.

In that event apeace treaty could be concluded both With the organs of the confederation and with the governhents of the states within that confederation
W We believe that both German states must unconditionally renounce all kinds of weapons of mass destruction, that is to say renounce both their own production of atomic, hydrogen and rocket weapons and also the equipping of their armed forces with foreign-made weapons of this kind; and prevent the building of atomic" and rocket bases: belonging to other powetrs on their territory ${ }^{\text {an }}$ Both German states, atter embarking on thè road of reeestab: lishing national. unity, mist renounce membership of the military groupings of the Powers. to which they beilong. at the present time.

And lastly, the levels of the armed forces of the two German states must be established in in onfornityzwith their requirements for self:defenserand for: ensuring tin tetrnal security, through an agreement between the Goveriments of the German Democratic: Republic and the Federal Républic of Germany.

Indeed, the present situation in Berlin cannot be regarded as normal. Berlin is ' of course, thie capitall of He German Democratic Republic, while the'iwestern pari tof the city, namely, the: American, British and wrench ectors, reptesesit a kind of island within the Germat Democratic Republic:
es The military authorities of the Westerm Powers in Berlin in every way stress their prerogatives as occup tion authorities: Whereas in West Germany some of the restrictions of the occupation regime which affect the Germans must have been lifted; in West Berlin these restrictions are still in force:

- it is also well known that West Berlin ts beinge ex tensively used for subversive activities against the Ger nuan Demiocratic Republic and other socialist countries: IThust sady franitiyy that as a result of the policy of the United States; Britain and France, and also of the Fed efal Republic of Germany; West Berlin has pecome one of the most painful sores of the cold war:
4 German publisher Alex Sptinger, editor of Die Welt, Jans 20; 1958 .

European Security Must Be Ensured

T T also want to make a few emarks about the so called German question. At one time we made persistent efforts to 'settle this's question in complete conformity with the Crimeañ and Potsdam dec larations. It is not our faut that this' was not achieyed. The Western Powers were interested din reviving 'German'militarism instead of creat ing a a united; dempecratic añid peacéful Germany:
W. The situation has radically changed since then Tyo. sovereign Geriman states have been formed and they themselves have to find the way to atrapprochement We maintain normal diplomatic relations with these two states- the German Democratic Republic and the FederaT Republic of Germany -and we refuse to interfere in their thternàl-affairs: Y If there is really a desire to do something useful in this sphere, the question of concluding a peace treaty with Germany should be discussed, Tf the Western Powers are against that, we shall not insist on in inclididing it in the agenda But we caninot agree to the fact that some people tie up Eüropean seciurity with the German"question, as is done in the State Department's zide-memoire, Such a tie-up häd its history, but those days aré 'gone,
The main thing now is to ensure Europeanis security But a solution to this important problem in the way pros Dosed by the United States and some other We sitern couns tries will by no meañ strenethen peace in: Euriope', and; consequently, will not strengthen world peace, either Need it be said that this will bring neither a more stable peace nor security to the Germanis, whether in West Ger mañy or in Eást Germany:
WThe German probiem is an importantione for the Ger man nation. But we tiust proceed from the interests of einisuring the security of all the European peoples; includ Bing:the German"people Let us, therefore, begin by stet Fhing the problem which concerns all Europesand thy Intire world, and this will facilitate the sosilution of thi Ferman problema as well:

When Europe stops being a theatre for military com
etition between the two blocs, when foreigh troops go ack homé when the threat of war is eliminated, that is to ay, when European securitysis ensured and tension has been eased, all the peoples of Europe, and for that mafter not only of Europe, will only gain by that: Would not all this help the German people who now live in two states with different socila conditions, to find a way to contact, to rapprochement and to the solution of the issues that cause anxiety to the populations of both those states? Any other way will lead, not to the solution of the Ger man question, but to worsening of the situation and even to war

From speech at a meeting of the electors of

Why the Soviet Union Suggests the $\psi^{t}$ Ending of the Occupation of

W.Why the question of ending the occupation status of Berlin has arisen, and why it has become necessary to settle this question at this particular time?: This is explained by the particular relations which have developed between the Great Powers or, as the press would say ybe tween the West and the East
We have taken many steps towards relieving the ten: sion in international relations, paving the way för a entente, developing normal relations between states ansuring peaceful co-existence and solving whatever differences may arise by peaceful means, without allowing matters to lead to conflict.
We have undertaken no few measures to find methods of approach to this problem; that is to say, towards the establishment of a normal situation through中ut the world and, above all, in Europe, towards ansuring inderstanding and peace among the states which fought Igainst Nazi Germany. And enough time - more than 13 Wears hàs elapsed since the war.

3 The obstacleto the conclusionof a peace treaty with Germany' that accounts for the attitude of representatives of the Western Powers and the particular persistence of West Germany, consists in their unillingness to recog nizerthe realities of life. An the actual reality is that there are two German states in existence - the Federal Republic of Gërmany, which bases itself on the principle of private capitalist ownership and the German Demo cratic Republic, which is growing and developing on a socialist basis and moving in the direction of socialism .
$\therefore$ If we accept this reasoning which is often regarded in the West as valid then it is necessary to perpetuate this situation Indeed, the German Democratie Republic Would hardly be able to persuade Herr Adenauer and his Government that West Germany should adopt a socialist trend in its political activity That would, of course, be desirable both for the Germans of the German Democratic Republic and for many of the Germans in West Germany, as well as for all progressive mankind, and we; as Communists; would welcome this very much
But to think that Her Adenauer and the ruling circles of West Germany will agree to it would mean in dulging in wishful thinking.

N THE other hand, certain circles in West German and, to my regret, Chancellor Adenauer and other do indulge in this sort of wishful thinking as the re hoping for some reason or other to get the German Temocratic Republic to renounce its socialist system and th adopt a capitalist system This, the say, yould be the Wasis for the "reunification" of Germany, that is to soy for the monopoly circles of West Germany to absorb the German Democratic Republic and thus create a united Germany on the same social basis prevailing in west Germany And only after this will it become possible in their opinion, to conclude apeace treaty. 2. Are these hopes realistic? Of course not They must be described as fantastic, sinice the woiking people of the German Democratic Republic will never agree to give up their socialand political gains in favour of exploiters and monopolists. monopolists.

One must proceed from the real facts There exists adivided Berlin where the occupation regime is still manin: tained. The war was ended more than 13 .years ago Ifeel What every normal person finds such a situation abnormal is necessary therefore, to find a solution that will end His abnormality because the present existence of the tcipation regime servés no positive purpose atall. The ferpetuation of such a situation would be to the advan tage only of a party pursuing aggressive alms,
To the Western Powers West Berlinis a conventent place for conductifif an aggressive policy against the Ger man Democratic Repubicic, and against the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist camp. In view of a definite policy of the Western Powers to whip up revengeful sentiments in West Germany and to encouráge the re sival of reactionary fascist organizations and forces there, Vest Berlin has been turned into a kind of cancerous fumor. And if it is not eliminated this threatens to become danger that may lead to quite undesirable consequences:
d d is precisely because of this threat that we have de cided to perform a surgical operation, ie eto terminate the occupation status of Berlin and to create conditions that will help to normalize relations between the Great Poivers of the former anti-Hitler coalition. We wish tb estabish a normal atmosphere normal conditions; in which the relations between our countries will become What they were during the war against Hitler Germany, We are convinced that all peoples whostand for ending the cold war, for establishing normal conditions in the mutual relations between countries, for ensuring the peaceful coexistence of countries irrespective of theirtsystems and for ruling out friction and conflicts between countries-all these people will welcome the Soviet Union's proposals for the solution of the Berlin problem.

- At the same time, we realíe perfecty well that cer tain circles who are in favour of continuing the cold war, stand for utilizing West Berlin as a hotbed of discord tor kinding a hot war. These circles will naturally be dis: pased with our peace proposals and will oppose them B But we are convince t that such people constitute minority in the world The overwhelming majority pople want peace in the world and therefore we cou on the support of these people
From press ooniferancein Kremlin, hetd by No Khrushichev, Chairman of the U.S:S $\cdot R^{=}$Council of Ministers, Nov:27, 1958 .
apout the restoration of the country's unity would he then energe as the leader of a campaign for continuing the Cupatioh of West Berlin indefinitely? Why is he doing this? In any case, it is not being done in the interests of the West Berlin population, who have to put up with the occupation regime: Nor is it being done, of course, in the interests of a detente and the establishment of normal relations betwen neighbouring countries
Worletus take the question of a peace treaty with. Ger: many It is indeedunbelievable that the head of the gove ernment of one of the existing German states does not Want to conclude a peace treaty through negotiations with the Soviet Union and the three Western Powers - the leading participants in the anti-Hitler coalition and with the participation of the two sovereign German states which have emerged on the territory of Germany,
- Chancellor Adenauer, like his NATo partners wap. parently striving for some other peace treaty which would actually abolish the German Democratic Republio But no sober-minded person can expect this to be accepted What grounds are there for raising the question of abolish ing the German Democratic Republic - the first workers and peasants state in the history of Germany? For that matter, the Germans in the German Democratic Repubit could suggest the abolition of the Federal Republic of Ger nany and reunify the country on the basis of the socialist rinciples on which the German Democratic Repubic is ased But it is obvious that neither of these two ap roaches to the question is realistic

Thene ony practical possibility of solving the German question once and for all is through a peaceful settlement With Germany In concluding a peace treaty with Gelrmany the existence of the two German states must undoubtedly be taken into consideration and they must invited to take partin the negotiations of the four Great Powers This would be the most reasonabie solution to the problem and would be welle one ed by the people of all countries, whoyearn for the reláation of tetnsion añ for

Tu But if the Federal Chancellor insists on something else, it signifies that he is pursuing other aims but not those which guarantee peace. It means that he is pursuing andangerous"; positions of strength" polioy
He wishes to createanarmy and to amit with atomic weapons he wishes to pursue a policy of force Thusit follows thiat Chancellor Adenauer is pursuing a policy, which may lead to disaster, to the collapse of West Ger many, sincéunder present conditions, with he existence of modern weapons of mass destruction, War would be of a devastating nature. This is monstrous of course but it is a fact dnd we must not shut our eyes to it We would iike, to believe that the sound patriotic forces which exist int West Germany and are concerned for the destiny of their people will correctly understand this in goodtime and do everything in their power to prevent the unleash. ing "of a third world war.

From intervteio given to A Micponala, foreign editor of The London:Times, on Jan: 31, 1958 .

The main thing to be borne n mind is the noble aims and principles of Commuism, Under capitalism man is a wolf to man. Every capitalist wants to snatch more for himself, caring nothing about the interests of other people or the interests of society, and he spies upon his neighbour in order to steal his secret and use tit for his owin ends. Such are the laws of capitalist competition

Nothing like this exists kinder socialisim Under so ciatism there are no oppressors or:oppessed all men and womenlive by their own labourfand atl have equal rights and duties to society, At the highest stage, under communism, the full satisfaction of maís needs will be en sured : And these are not dale words Under socialism mants a friend to mañ, regardless of the language he spgaks and the God to whom he prays Religion is matter for each person to decide for himself.

Socialism is the most just and noble social system under which the efforts of the whole of society are aimed at promoting the welfare of the people and the constant development of the economy science, culture and art, at ensuring that the people livelbetter and better, It is well worth working for these ofty aims, sparing neither effort nor knowledge, In the language of Westerngusinessmen, Gne can figuratively describe the firm of Communist con: rruction as sound and tipright:

Under socialism the products of labour are dislibuted in accordance with the quantity and quality of Work contributed by each member of sociéty, ie accord ing to the principle From each according to his ability, to. each according to his work Under Communisin díl tribution will take place according to the principle: Froth each according to his ability to each according to hil needs.

In order to speed the advance of all the socialist countries to Communism, we must do everything possible for each socialist country to develop its economy and ins crease its labour productivity more rapidy Each ofiour countries muist render geniunely fraternal aid to the other socialist countries, By uniting our efforts, by promoting cooperationand collaboration, our cointries areachieving greater successes in economic development, At the same time each socialist country must-make the best possible use of its internal potentialities for developing its nationat economy

In the process of buitaing Communism all socialist countries will equalize their economies, eliminate differerices inleyelof development without taking the relatively. underdeveloped countries as their criterion This equaliza tion will not take place by lowering the level of the coun tries that are economically highy developed. By no means. The equalization should and will proceed through the more rapidadvance of the countries that are relatively less developed economically by bringing them up to the level of the most developed counties. Thus, alt the social ist countries will march it a common united front along the road of socialism, along the road of building commu. nist society.

The Red Menace in the Uniens.

COMMUNISM IN AMERICAN LABOR UNIONS, by David J. Saposs [McGraw-Hill, 270

 pages, $7.50]."At present, Communists are embarking on another program of trade union penetration."
The warning of David J. Saposs, a lecturer and professor in the field of labor relations, comes at a time when government agencies and Congressional committees have vainly been trying to alert the public to the menace the left wing unionists have started in an all-out organizational and representational campaign.

Saposs says the inertia to the danger of the Communists displayed by leaders as well as union members indicates the need of shock treatment to induce action. Some years ago, he recalls, those who were alert to the infiltration of communism in vital labor organizations and who attempted to do something about the situation were criticized as labor baiters. The same situation exists today, and the author calls for an aroused public opinion to bring satisfactory results in combatting subversive elements that infiltrate and attach themselves to individual organizations and the labor movement.
He tells how the Communists are "planted" in labor organizations, mostly on the lower levels, and wortheir way up. He says these 蒖durdarals complete-

He warns of how the well educated and highly trained technicians conceal their identity by falsifying their place of birth, formal education, and references of previous employment.
"This tactic, used previously in the 'colonization' of followers in unions, vital industries, and various civil and political organizations, is now being expanded," he says.
"These concealed Communists studiously avoid participating in the consideration of broad social issues or in maintaining contact with overt communist activities and agencies. They concentrate on siding with dissident elements in the unions, instigating discontent, subtly planting and circulating rumors, and even resorting to other means of discrediting the current leadership. In this manner they hope to rise to leadership and power. Some of them have already achieved that aim."

And the author points out that this is not a new method used by Communists but that their greatest success was achieved by operating under cover when the country was prosperous and the inhengavement was growing to unprecedented proper tions. To contend that the decline of communism is attributable chiefly to an extraordinary prosperity is erroneous, he adds.
Saposs has presented a full revelation of the methods. used by the Communists, their methods of infiltrating and amassing power, their appeal to the rank and file, and their successes within the qo and AFL.

Office Me

In connection with the inspection of the Records and Communications Division, it was recommended and approved that the Publications Desk, Central Research Section, create a central control and repository for book reviews, thus establishing a book review responsibility under the supervision of Inspector $W$. GXSullivan. The procedures to be followed are set forth in the enclosed memorandum to Bureau officials and supervisors. These procedures are focused upon (1) eliminating duplication in purchases and reviews and (2) establishing a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for review.

It is anticipated that after a 6-month period Central Research can review its experience in this regard and recommend procedures for streamlining or otherwise improving the handling of this matter, including such questions as to the length of time the book review index cards should be retained.

RECOMMENDATION:

It is recommended that the enclosed memorandum to Bureau officials and supervisors be approved so that this program may be placed is effect immediately.

BOOK REVIEW: XDVISE AND CONSENT BY ALLEN PRURY (DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY) CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

Captioned book is a lengthy novel about Washington politics and is an obvious attempt to "cash in" on the recent publicity surrounding the Senate's rejection of Admiral Strauss as Secretary of Commerce. There are two passing references to the FBI, and a number of snide remarks about various Government agencies and people associated therewith. No characters are identifiable with actual persons--either living or dead--but a number of similarities have been noted. In 1953, author Drury interviewed Miss Gandy in connection with her 35th anniversary in the Bureau. Bureau files not derogatory.

Reference is made to the memorandum of Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolson, dated September 11, 1959, in which reference was made to the fact that Central Research was preparing a review of above-captioned book.

Book-of-the-Month Club Selection
Advise and Consent, by Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company), is a 616-page novel of Washington politics, taking place at some undefined period in the immediate future and involving the general question of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. It was the Book-of-the-Month Club selection for August, 1959. The title is derived from Article II, Section 2, of the United States Constitution, which provides that the President, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, " shall nominate certain public offictals for Government positions.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re :
Book Review: Advise and Consent
By Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company)

Cabinet Appointee

The plot of the novel--which indicates that Drury is either an extremely fast or else an extremely lucky writer, since it capitalizes on the recent Senate rejection of Admiral Lewis L. Strauss as Secretary of Commerce-concerns an ailing President, near the end of his second and last term, who is intent on replacing his Secretary of State in order to facilitate negotiations with the Soviet Union. His choice as successor is Robert A. Leffingwell, who is a dedicated public servant, but who is a controversial liberal and, therefore, is unacceptable to the conservatives.

Leading Figure Accused as Communist

At Senate hearings on his nomination, Leffingwell is charged by a former student of his at the University of Chicago of having been affiliated with a campus communist cell while teaching there years before. It is later brought out that Leffingwell lied to the Senate subcommittee in denying his former communist connections. The senator who heads the subcommittee is himself vulnerable, and he takes his own life when his political enemies revive a homosexual episode in his wartime past. In the end, Leffingwell's nomination is rejected by the Senate and the President dies suddenly.

Characters Resemble Real People

The leading characters in the book are never clearly recognizable, although they do possess more than a few traits of well-known political figures of the recent past and present. The President, for example, bears considerable resemblance to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt; the Vice President is reminiscent of Harry S. Truman; Senator Orrin Knox is cast in the same mold as the late Robert A. Taft; and Senator Fred Van Ackerman has many likenesses to the late Joseph R. McCarthy.

Mercorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re:
Book Review: Advise and Consent
By Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company)

References to the FBI

The FBI is mentioned only twice in passing. The first time is at a party given by a prominent Washington hostess where "the director of the FBI (not otherwise named or described) was chatting genially with the Secretary of Commerce and his wife." At the same party was "the director of the Central Intelligence Agency and two of the primmer male members of his far-flung crew of motley misfits." (p. 108)

The other reference to the FBI occurs when tourists are described as "viewing with suitable awe, " among the many popular sights in Washington, "the blood-stained relics of the FBI." (p. 277)

Snide Remarks

The book contains a number of snide references to Government agencies and people associated therewith. He refers to the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee as the "biggest fool in the Senate" (p. 82); the Vice President as "an awfully nice guy" who "certainly had not been equipped by temperament or nature for. . . the role he had to play" (p. 73); the Postmaster General as "a man whose qualifications for running the public mails were decided decisively in the last Presidential campaign when he contributed the surprising sum of $$ 150,000$ to the President's cause" (p. 143); and the Senate chaplain as "one of those ministers who go around slapping God on the back. A small, bulgy man with bad breath. ... getting older and bulgier and more odorous and more obnoxious." (p. 72)

Background of Allen Drury
Allen Drury, the author, is about 40 years of age. He has been assigned to the Washington Bureau of The New York Times as United States Senate correspondent since 1954. A native of Texas, he was graduated from Stanford University. Since that time, he has been a journalist, primarily as a Washington correspondent for various publications, working first for the United Press, then for Pathfinder magazine, and later for The Evening Star of Washington, D. C. (100-400370-22, p. 4)

While on The Evening Star, Drury interviewed Miss Gandy in 1953 on the occasion of her 35th anniversary with the Bureau. (94-8-24-386)

In February, 1959, a Bureau representative was scheduled to appear on an interview program with Drury over Radio Station WRC in Washington, D. C. This appearance did not materialize because the Bureau representative was out of the city on the day of the scheduled program. (94-1-31274-32)

There is no derogatory information in the Bureau's files relative to Drury.

Soviet Trade Challenge Cifed in New Book,

By CHARLES IUCEY
Soripps-Howard staff Writer
NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV'S oft-repeated promise that communism will eclipse the American way makes timely an arresting new book on world economic affairs by Clarence B. Randall, foreign economic policy adviser to President Eisenhower. It is published today by Little, Brown and Co. in association with the Atlantic Monthly Press.
The Randall book is titled "The Communist Challenge to American Business." It centers on the vast new economic force the Soviet Union is bringing into play in its drive to expand and foster the communist system all over the globe.

Yet it is broader than this, too-it is a fresh and authoritative view of the new challenges facing the U. S. in all world trade by a man in exceptionally good position to know what he's talking about.

HARVARD MAN

Clarence Randall is a Harvard Law School product who rose to become president of Inland Steel. Then; a decade ago, he began a series of major government assignments -perhaps most notably the chairmanship of the Randall Commission on foreign econmic policy. Since 1953 he has been "continuously immersed in the ever turbulent stream of discussion of our foreign trade."
"For those who will listen," writes Mr. Randall, "an alarm bell is ringing in the eastern world. It tells us to watch the Russians. It calls to arm those of us who believe in free enterprise, and stridently proclaims that a new industrial challenge has suddenly come from behind the Iron Curtain."

The danger of military war

DEDICATED

Russians work with religious zeal, he contends, not driven but dedicated. The Soviet production rate is formidable - "an American businessman would be mad indeed to delude. himself into believing that there is something his company can do which the Russians cannot duplicate if they wish."
In Russia, he reports, there is no featherbedding, no made work, no job not contributing directly to output. He commends Soviet research and says that at the industry and plant level more effort probably is devoted to this field than in the U.S. Thus, Soviet output is based solidly on continuous scientific inquiry.
The author has many positive suggestions as to how American businessmen, by themselves and working with the U. S. Government, can help meet this rising challenge. He stresses the imperative need of less insular thinking by business, for greater awareness of pres. sing problems that lie ahead.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

The Text and The Purpose
The author, Giuseppe Boffa, who from 1953 to 1958 was Moscow correspondent for the Italian Communist Party newspaper L'Unita, relates his impressions of the Soviet Union during his 5 -year assignment. "I needed to know," he states, "how the USSR had become a world power, how it had won the war, what was the secret of its transformation, whence came its moral and political force." His reporting is alleged to comprise the true picture, devoid of hatred and misunderstandings.

According to Boffa, Soviets are not "Martians" but real, genuine human beings who were motivated by the very highest ideals to bring into being a better way of life for all mankind. Whereas some Soviet leaders and officials have caused "harsh sacrifices" for a few people, these acts are excused by the very part these men played in the "dramatic events" of history.

In the first chapter, Boffa creates an air of suspense, excitement, and adventure as he first hears the "voices" in Moscow and loses himself in the "fairy-tale atmosphere" of turreted walls, palaces, and imperial balls. Throughout the book, he leads the reader through the shocks and effects of the 20th Congress, back into the origins of Stalin's "cult of the individual, " lightly through World War II, and into the post-Stalin years. The greater part of the book deals with the achievements of Khrushchev and the Soviets since the death of Stalin. The author "exposes" their social betterment, their great strides in attaining the only true democracy, their position as leaders in science, their accomplishments in education and culture, and the all-around perfection which they have attained through the trials and tribulations on the road to communism.

Boffa categorizes the year 1954 as the year of the thaw; 1955, the year of decision; 1956, the year of passion; and, 1957, the year of reforms. The bloodthirsty activities of the Soviet Union which have stunned the world since the Bolshevik onslaught of 1917 are transformed into actions of "revolutionary value." It is obvious that the author has done all in his power to stir in his readers the approval and admiration which will force them to identify themselves with the "we" who "are today capable of continuing to transform the world, thanks to the successes of the USSR, thanks to the successes in a series of other countries, thanks to the struggles which we all wage in our own lands. We can, and we will, extend the civilization that was born in October, 1917."

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re:
BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

Better Than You

The I-can-do-anything-better-than-you attitude seems to be the impetus for all of the bustling and frantic Soviet activity toward industrial, agricultural and cultural superiority. Certainly it was evident to this Italian communist who threaded it through his eye-witness report. It is not fair, according to Boffa, to compare the Soviet Union and capitalist countries from the same standards. In a short span of 42 years the. Soviet Union has leapt and bounded to second place among world powers. It offers a better and more democratic way of life. It was the first champion of world peace and constantly strives to see the settlement of all quarrels between men. It is the heart of individualism because no where else can a man enter the world so safely, have his childhood so sheltered from "sacrifices," be so educated, live his life so free from the worries of unemployment and illness, and die so without fear. Today, they do not need what they do not have; tomorrow, they will have it.

Go East, Young Man

Everything is greener on the other side of the iron curtain. Even the Five Year Plans outstrip the pioneers of America's Far West. "How much more exciting," Boffa exclaims, "were the adventures, how much greater the dedication and the courage of those engaged in that enormous pioneering effort, the Five Year Plans!" The Soviet Union is a country of pioneers; "it is not a literary conceit."

Only Good Democracy Is a Red One

"The freeing of men from class exploitation, class injustice, class inferiority--is clearly superior to the so-called 'free world,' " says Boffa. Democracy in the capitalist United States is severely restricted, but Soviet society "bears a vigorous democratic imprint." There are few distinctions between one man and andher. There is a great simplicity in social relations and a strong disapproval of any small manifestation of the abuse of power. Soviet democracy is in a phase of expansion--an expansion further and further away from capitalistic democracy, and toward the "most authentic civilized democracy the world has ever seen--the absolute democracy of communism."

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re:
BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

Snow White and the Seven-Year Plan
According to Boffa, it is what has transpired under the leadership of Nikita Khrushchev that has brought the Soviet Union to its pinnacle of transformation. It was Khrushchev who saw the errors which had influenced all of Soviet life. It was Khrushchev who set about to correct them. He dispensed with Malenkov, Beria, Molotov, Zhukov, Kaganovich, Shepilov and others who rocked the Kremlin. He electrified Soviet industry, agriculture, science and education. He dared to denounce publicly the failings of the great Stalin--'the full courage of an action which wiped out an important patrimony that had been built up over the years." Like a sheepdog, he growled and snapped at the heels of the citizens of the Soviet Union spurring them on to greater and greater socialist achievements. At the 21st Congress, Khrushchev stood before the Russian people and outlined for them the great plans for the great advancement during the next seven great years. He promulgated 'ideas about the new equilibrium within the Soviet economy, about the extension of democracy and the lessening of the state, about the new transformations in the countryside, about the laws of the Socialist state, about international perspectives. " No one or thing can ever again stand in the way of communism, for didn't Khrushchev say. "there are not in the world today enough forces to restore capitalism in our country. The danger of a capitalist restoration is excluded; not only has socialism won, but it has won for all time."

Unadulterated Soviet Propaganda

Inside the Khrushchev Era, from cover to cover, is sheer, unadulterated Soviet propaganda. It is filled with the usual brags and lies. Every opportunity is grasped to eulogize the Soviet Union and berate the nations of the West. The past, the present, and the future are maligned as only communist propagandists are capable of doing. By direct accusation and inference, the United States, categorized as "the eternal class enemy," and the other countries of the West are depicted as jealous, war-mongering nations whom the peace-loving Soviet Union must always fear and constantly appease. "Hardly emerged from the conflict, emaciated, lacking everything, literally drained of human blood and of economic wealth, the Soviets had to face a new and formidable threat--the atomic blackmail of the Americans." Continuing his "history," Boffa states that the "far-from-casual" coincidence of the aggression against Egypt and the anticommunist violence and vigor released in the West jolted the Soviet people out of their naive "trustfulness." "They seemed to have forgotten whom they were dealing with." But they learned not to "lower their guard."

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

The publication of this book was manipulated to coincide with Khrushchev's visit to the United States. At a time when Soviet leaders are slithering around other societies, and communist parrots are screeching about the dissolution of mistrust between East and West, a book such as this might find a larger and more receptive audience, and, at the same time, might root a few ideas in certain unplowed brains.

Munsell is identical with Alexander Ector Orr Munsell, a Security Index subject. He was a member of the Communist Party from the early 1930's until at least 1948 or 1949. During the late 1930 's and early 1940's he was treasurer of the Communist Party of Maryland. He has received vast inheritances from his grandfather and his mother and has been reported over the years as a substantial contributor to the Communist Party. He has participated in the affairs of numerous communist fronts and took refuge in the Fifth Amendment in testifying before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee in June, 1956. (61-10392-69)

RE: "COMMUNISM IN AMERICAN UNIONS"
the noncommunist affidavit provision of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947, pointing to the difficulty caused by the present-tense wording of the noncommunist affidavits and mentions the conspiracy indictments at Cleveland and Denver involving the use of noncommunist affidavits. The author traces the policy of the $C P$ during the past few years that all labor unions should be a part of the main stream of American labor (the AFL-CIO) to the clause in the Communist Control Act of 1954, which provides that unions affiliated with a national labor body shall be presumed not to be communist infiltrated.

The book, which appears from the most recent events discussed to have been prepared in 1957 although it bears a copyright date of 1959, concludes by pointing out that the communists are again stressing that the labor movement is the vital channel through which to enlist mass followers, disseminate propaganda and promote their objectives; that the communists in labor will uitimately be forced to reveal themselves in order to champion communist and Soviet policy to the maximum; but that lest they do considerable harm in the interim, all concerned should remember "eternal vigilance is the price of iiberty."

The FBI is mentioned in only two places. On page 49 reference is made to a handwriting examination by the FBI Laboratory as part of the evidence at a congressional hearing. On page 265 a news article is quoted which refers to a refusal by the FBI and other Government agencies to make their files available to private groups.

The author, David Joseph Saposs, was born 2-22-86 in Kiev, Ukraine, and has a lengthy history of Government employment in the labor field, apparently retiring from the Department of Labor in 1954. Saposs was the subject of an Internal Security - Hatch Act investigation in 1942-1943, a European Recovery Program investigation in 1948 and a preliminary inquiry under Loyalty of Government Employees in 1948 (Bufiles 101-471, 124-1543 and 121-10759) based on reports that in his writings he had advocated a change in the Government of the United States and that he had associated with various allegedly "radical" organizations. One person interviewed reported that early in the 1930s Saposs had favorably compared communism with capitalism, and another reported that in 1935 Saposs had favored an alliance between socialists and communists to prevent war. All other persons interviewed indicated that Saposs was definitely opposed to communism and was a loyal American, although he was described by some as a socialist, liberal or "somewhat radical."

STREAMLINING BOOK REVIEW CONTROL
On January 21, 1959, this function was implemented by a memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors. The procedure set forth was focused upon:

1. Eliminating duplication in purchasing and reviewing of books at the Bureau and
2. Establishing a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for the Bureau.

Since the inception and establishment, the book review control function has been closely followed and evaluated in terms of practical efficiency. Some of the main features of streamlining the functions of book review control have been:

1. Setting up a main file (62-46855) in which a copy of all book reviews should be placed. Thus, book review material would be more readily available to those having an interest.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review Control
2. The use of a new form ( $5-103$ ) to simplify the routing of information regarding the desirability of purchasing for review books which may be of interest to various sections or divisions throughout the Bureau.
3. The development of close working cooperation of the Publications Desk, Central Research Section with the Administrative Division and the Bureau Library Unit of the Crime Research Section relative to the functions of purchasing and cataloging books desired for review.

PROPOSED ADDITIONAL STREAMLINING

Our experience in recent months indicate that still additional streamlining of the book review control function can be accomplished. In connection with this streamlining, the following matters should be considered.

1. From the viewpoint of the Central Research Section the book review control function has not been costly as the functions have been absorbed by a clerical employee already engaged in handling security and intelligence publications matters.
2. Book review control was a big step in the right direction as it:
a. Eliminated duplication in purchasing and reviewing of books at the Bureau and
b. Established a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for the Bureau.
3. There is a further streamlining step which could be taken at this time based upon our practical experience of the past few months. This streamlining could be effected by placing the book review control function in the Crime Research Section or perhaps, more specifically, its Bureau Library Unit. This is based on the following considerations:
a. Currently a minimum of three divisions are generally involved in the purchase of a book for review:
(1) Bureau Library Unit of the Crime Records Division, to avoid duplication of books in the Bureau Library;
(2) Administrative Division, to control funds a make a desired purchase; and
(3) Central Research Section, Domestic Intelligence Division, for initiating and coordinating requests for book purchases as part of the book review control function.

The only division which could logically be deleted from this purchase-and-control transaction is the Domestic Intelligence Division. This could be accomplished by placing the book review control function in the Crime Records Division. Then, of course, Central Research Section or Domestic Intelligence Division would generally be involved only when the books related to their fields.
b. Crime Records Division, during the course of handling matters relating to books sent to the Director and related correspondence, gains a firsthand knowledge of books which may be of particular interest to the Director and to the Bureau. Thus, Crime Records Division is in a position to take immediate action relative to obtaining these books for review or reference without routing to the Central Research Section to perform a book review control function.
c. Miscellaneous books, as well as related literature and advertisements, coming to the Bureau would naturally gravitate to the Bureau Library. This helpful information usually is not available to the Central Research Section and its Book Review Control Desk until it is routed there by the Bureau Library. This imposes on the Bureau Library Unit additional routing responsibilities.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review Control
d. At the Bureau, books are considered for purchase:
(1) For "reference" - this involves the Bureau Library of the Crime Research Section; Administrative Division; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining the book for reference.
(2) For "review" - this involves the Publications Desk, Central Research Section; the Administrative Division; the Bureau Library, Crime Research Section; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining the book for review.
(3) For "reference and review" - this involves the Bureau Library, Crime Research Section; the Administrative Division; the Central Research Section Book Review Control Desk; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining a book for these purposes. Currently the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section, is primarily interested in "reference" and the Book Review Control Desk of the Central Research Section is primarily interested in "review." Often, books are useful for "reference" and "review." This whole function could be streamlined if "reference" and "review" were combined and handled in the same section. Routing could be minimized and coordination streamlined.
e. Books purchased with Bureau funds and having a reference value should be available to all Bureau officials and supervisors through the medium of cataloging in the Bureau Library. Thus, books purchased for review generally have a reference value to some supervisor or official at the Bureau. Books purchased for review are sent to the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section, for cataloging. This function could be eliminated in many instances if the books for review and reference were obtained through the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section.

RECOMMENDATION:

Our experience has shown that the book review control function has contributed to the efficiency and handling of book review matters. Central Research Section feels at this time that the book review control function could be further streamlined by relocating this function in the Crime Research Section. Therefore, it is recommended that the book review control function be relocated as described above.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review Control

Soviet meddling with our internal affairs continues with captioned article, appearing in Soviet "literary and socio-political magazine," which attempts to use two of the Director's speeches to prove the Marxian contention of 100 years ago that, under capitalism, "crime is growing even faster than the number of the population." The article claims that the Soviets have the answer to crime in the "humanist" approach of the 20th and 21st Congresses of the Communist Party, Soviet Union, and states that this approach has brought about a "great unrest" among the criminal element which has resulted in a large number of them wanting to start a "new working life."

The article contends, of course, that cases of law violation in the Soviet Union are a result of survivals of capitalism in the minds of people.

Bureau files indicate the author may be identical with an L. R. Sheinin who, in 1947, was the Chief of Inquiry for the Department of Prosecutor's |Office of the Soviet Union.

REC. 3

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. BelmontRe: Article Entitled 'Man and Law' by L. Sheinin, Appearing in Russian Magazine October, Issue for August, 1959.

Attack on Director

The Director and law enforcement in the United States are attacked in captioned article. This magazine, described as a "literary and socio-political magazine, " is published in Russian by the Pravda Publishing House as an organ of the Writers' Union of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, USSR.

Snare Planned
This article attempts to place the Bureau on the horns of a dilemma by stating that while the Director is recognizing and making statements regarding the growth of crime in the United States, he is confirming the premises of Marx, published one century ago in the New York Herald Tribune. Marx allegedly wrote:
'Probably, there is something rotten in the very heart of a social system which increases its wealth, but, at the same time, does not reduce poverty and in which crime is growing even faster than the number of the population."

Two Speeches Mentioned

The article refers specifically to observations made by the Director regarding the growing crime problem in connection with his speeches before the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at Charleston, West Virginia, and the American Legion at Atlantic City. Also, in connection with the crime problem in the United States, the Director is allegedly quoted by one "Don Eadon, " New York correspondent for the Daily Mail, an English newspaper, as saying that "Juvenile crime is the most important problem which confronts the American people." A check of Bureau files reveals that answers to questions re-

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont Re: Article Entitled "Man and Law" by L. Sheinin, Appearing in Russian Magazine October, Issue for August, 1959.
|garding crime were given to Don Iddon, New York correspondent of the Daily Mail, on April 9, 1946. Our written reply to a question regarding juvenile delinquency read in part:
"Juvenile delinquency is a problem that is affecting many nations today.... The problem of juvenile delinquency is a local one which must be met at the source...." (94-8-1738-4)

"Humanist" Solution

The article October claims that the Soviets have the answer to this problem which plagues not only the United States, but other "capitalist" countries as well. October states that a great unrest is spreading among Soviet criminals, many of whom are presently characterized by a sincere and ardent striving to break with the criminal past and to start a happy new working life. This "miracle" was engendered by the atmosphere created at the 20th and 21st Congresses of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. This atmosphere apparently is related to the contention that in every man there is a better side which must be activated through the cultivation of "humanism," a boundless faith in man. This article does admit that there are hopeless, hardened and inveterate criminals. Of course, the cases of law violation in the Soviet Union are a result of survivals of capitalism in the minds of the people and some miscalculations in the struggle against these survivals.

Rehabilitation Stressed

Recently adopted Soviet principles of criminal legislation, according to October, carry out the theme that punishment is not only retribution for the crime committed, but also has the purpose of correction and re-education of the convicted in the spirit of an honest attitude toward work. In this connection it is pointed out that the Soviet courts also have a function as propagandists and agitators. The strong implication is given that this could not be carried out in the United States because of incompetency and the "profit" motive.

Knrashenev Refated
The attack on the Director and the criticis: of our internal law enforcement affairs certainly expose oace agaia the perennial bit of propaganda about tiae Soviet Union not interfering in the affairs of other countries. Following the United States protest relative to the Seventh Congress of the Comraunist International, Alexander Troyanovsky, then Soviet Armbassador to the United States issued a press release on August 26, 1335, in which he protested that his governaent would not interfere in the internal affairs of the United States. Karushciev repeated this bit of fiction during his recent toar of the United States. (Foreign Relations of the United States, U.S. Governeent Printing Office, 1952; New Yori Herald Tribune, September 30, 1959)

Soviet Official

Bureau files do not contain any information positively identifiable with the author although they do contain references to an L. R. Sheinin, who was Chief of the Inquest Division, Prosecating Magistracy, Advisor of Justice, 2nd Ranis, in 1945, and who was Chief of Inquiry for the Department of Prosecutor's Office of the Soviet Union in 1947. The files further reveal that one L. Sheinin wrote an article entitled "Civilized Savages" (referring to lynchings in the United States) in Literaturnaya Gazeta, No. 43, October 14, 1947. ## SHMSETEON FROM RUEETA

MA 日 AM M

Dy L. SHETMIN
An almost improbable and, moreover, most instructive event ocourred in June of this war in an American city of Charleston. The Dircotor of the American political police, the FBI, $M$ r. HOOVER, puhltely, openly and quite officially marked, without himself withing it, the centenary of an article by Hart, Ne Population, Crime and Pauperism," published as we how in the newspaper "The New York Daily Tribune" exactly one century ago, namely, in 1859.

Moreover, Mr. HOOVER, cited in his speech figures which fully confirmed the preside notated by $H A G X$ in this article.

HARX wrote in 1859:
Probably, there is something roster in the very heart of a social system which increased ste wealth, but, at the sane time does not reduce poverty and in whtoh crime is growing even faster than the number of the pontic. Ration."

HoOVER adapted in 1959:
"....Crime in the U.S.A. is growing at a horrifying poe and reached an unprecedentedly high itwal in 1958, showing a frightful increase in comparison with 1957.. is "Figures for 1958," HoOVeR further stated, "are unfortunately exactly like that - shooing.... The total cost of crime to the entire country ta now reaching a figure of 22 billion a year, i. e., it represent h almost one-third of the total budget of the Federal Government for a year!..."

Thus the Director of the Fill oheraatertzed the state of orin in the O.S. ti. in 2950.

TRANSLATED BY:
TATIANA NIKONISHIN: bjm October 2, 1959

But over a year ago, it pas liktetee he, speaking at a conuention of the American Legion in ithantio Oity, who esteblished the terrifying growth of orine in 1957. MOOFER admitted at that time that, in the last eleven years alone, the number of big crime $a$ omattied in the USS.A. inereased from 1,0es, 203 to $2,653,150$ and oontinues to grow from month to month.

Both in the spech delivered in 1958, and in the speeoh delivered the other day, hoobin noted the enormoue growth of crime among youth.
"The forcee of the world of ortme," satd Hoovia in $h$ is last speeoh, "tain ted ohe lives of thousands of young men and women. Juventle orime has never shown a oingle deorease in the last few yearet it hat been steadily growing.... We are dealing not with the chance violators but with aocomplished young ertminals...."

Thus Hoover involuntarily conftrmed the prophetio mords of MARX written by him one hundired years ago.

The fact that words of MARI are oonftrmed these days by Amertcan reality even in detalls, Is eeen also, apart from HOOV R's speeoh, from a book of an American journalist B. SIAE "A Lillion Jfenses" published in the U.D.A. in 1957. The author of this book asserts on the basis of officicl statistioal data that the growth of orime in the U.. . $A$. is four times that of the pooulation.

American crimin logists, sociologists and journalists possibly did not read, or pretend that they did not read MARI. At any rate, they do not like to rejer to him and, of oourse, are quite remote from an intention of admitting that whioh he uncierstood and foresaw eadctly a century ago.

Neverthelese, some of them have been ooming out in reoent yeare with a more "flexible" coneeption: Marxism, they asy, may till be useful for applioation in E'urope but it is absolutely inacoeptable for Ameriod....

HOOFER Itkemise did not refer to the article by MARX when apeaking in Gharleston, but whether he wanted it or not, by this spesoh of his he marhed a kundred year. annivermary of this artiole and very oomvitaingly and uividiy confirmed its basig prinelpal concluston, threatening the "Amertcan way of 1 ffa," whioh turns out to be, alas, apolicable to Amerioa as wall...."

For the acke of fairness, let us note that HOOVEW was not alone in getting into such a strange postston. On Tebruary 6 of last year, an English bourgeots newepaper "The Daily Mail" whioh could never be repracohed with propaganda of Marmian, published an artlele by tts New York correspondent DOU BADOW (phon.) devoted to the mores of the contemporary Amerioan youth. Here ts what this bourgeois journallat notes:
"This morning, eo owf other morning, New York tralk not about an American sotellite but about the orime among the acolesoente.
"The satellste was a one-day eensation. Terrorism by teen-agers and the growing wave of orime is a daily sensation. Police ars discmeelng at proent the question of launching patrol heltcopters over the Oentral Park whioh is sttuated right on the side of Fifth Apenue where I live in on apartment house. But not one of the people lifing in this big house and in a long row of small houses in the vioinity goes to the perk after whight. Thousande of New Yorkers avald going there oven in the broad daylight. Central Park grew to resemble the timgles. Poltament are riding in automobiles in pairs and they have machine guns in the back seats, as mell as revolvers....
"....The st tuation in sohoola ts cuen more terrible. At present, poltaemen are being plaeed th sohool corridors... ...Attendance of puhlle schools becam te dangerous for the girls that their parents kesp them at howe and boycott the schools. Many tecohers fear for thetr Ituele Last wosk, a school orincipal GEORGE COLDFARE himped aff the roof of his home to his death in a fit of despatr tndueed by the sohool crisis....
".... Psychiatriets say that ortme wave among youth and disorganixation in schools are emplained by the aisappearance of the folling of seourtty tn the oountry, whioh, in the turn, wa brought cbout by atomio and hydragen bombs and has swollen through the ignoranoe and hypoorisy of polttiotans.e.."

Thus mptet an English jowrnalist who litewtse does not otte MRI but also unvittingly oonfirme his worde.

In his long article SADO解 fur ther reports that "over 60 per cent of drug addicts in Ameriac are people under 80 years of age" and that MooVSR in hse talks with BADON told him: "Juvenile crime is the most inportant problem which confronts the Aiarican people."

We shall not dispute this statement but will only supplement it: Amerioan people are not the only ones confronted with the same problem these daye. In a number of other oapitalist countries erime among youth is growing. Thus, for axample, in west Germany an enomous growth of ortme is noted and many Fiest German newspapers and magaxines write with alarm about it.

Again, they too do not oite MARX, but, in their turn, they agree tith him in sptbe of themselves.

Thus, disoussing these subjects, a German magazine "Review" wrote that "the broad oiroles of the population are alarmed and are inquiring about conditions in aur economically flourishing country, " and this, as the nagaptne states further, "makes one think to what extent our asphalt culture is butit on the swomp,"

How triking is the resemblanoe of these foroed admissions with the prophetic formula to the effect that "there is something rotten in the very heart of a soctal system which incroases its wealth bat, at the same time, does not reduce poverty and in whsch the orime is growing even faster than the number of the population."...

Of course, a. 11 stated above does not at all nursue the natue atim of comparing orime in the capttalist countrites with the orime in our country for a hoppy conclusion: look, how bad things are with them and how comparatively good they are vith ug!....

Of ourae, from the point of visw, let us say, of the very same Hoover, our hooltgans and pickpochets appear in the morst oase as the taohievous but likeable ohildren from a model kindergartan. But for us the "Amerioan scope" ts cntirely unneessary in this field and toe justifiably regard the hooligans also ae real oriminale.

Recently, an taportant American litio offoici, who wa: in Moaco and utstted a norby correettonal-labor colong, was greatly surprised on finding there a eertain young man convicted for a druntret brawi involving the breaking of dishes at a restaurans.
"I beg you to explain to me, gentlemen," satd the Amerioan fudge, "why did you imprison this likeable gentleman, partioulerly, sinct, saoording to hin, he paid for the broken dishesp Neally, you and I have different tdeas about las...."

Ideas are indeed different and not in the field of law alone. If, for examite, the Chtef of Koacow Police appltes to the Momeve City Comscil with a request to prouide for him heliooptore for patrolling the Gentral fork of Culture and Reat or would send militia gare with machine guns tnto the otreets, sueh a "uelushle" idea would eause a great deal of emusement in meny poople, sxoept in its author....

On the other hand, Hotter would, naturally, be genutnely aurpriaed if anyone would advise nim to tronsfer a conelderable portion of the functions of Amerioan police to the publite, fithout cuan the rubber stione, let alone mach ine guns and revolverte. And se will platniy ay that it would not be diffioult te onderstand his aurprise, conetdering thit etec of Amemban reality..

411 this ta true. There are not any and there cannot be any woh orimes and sueh oriminele in our country, as there are now in Ameriea. But th ta pointless to make comparisons of thit sort and esult because in loseove or any of our other oftiss there is wo need for poltoe helicopters, police machine gune, nor police poats in sohools....

No. we not have any drug addiote among school children and hardif ony in govirial; we have no houses of prostitution, gambitig dens, counterfeiters, or kidnappers, no gangster truete or specialiste in melting (aio) bank aafes. Te have me trade in narootios, no publishete of smut, no opitw dent, no professional pimpe, no circulation of millions of coples of notorious and soul-destroying "comlce," and only on the bests of Ainericen books, and very vaguely at that, can we inagite the racketecre who aoguired suoh a fontastio power in the largest oftles of Aneriva, so that entire banks and the most otbetemtial of bustnesa firma are obediently bowing down to thos toilgnediy paying them a fixed monthly tribute....

No, there ts not anything like that in our country; there cannot be and could not be anything like that, for the very stmple reason that it is preoluded by the very nature of our soctal oyetem, our cocial law and order, all the conditione of our life and cuttons, and, finclly by the very nature of our social and produetion relationships.

Conaequently, the absanoe of all these festering sores is $e$ nomal and notural, di reet and inotitable fruit, result, one of the many, of our new warla, our soolalist sootety; in short, of all that for what we have bean fighting for over forty yeare already and whet we have achieved in thia struggle.

Let this be a source of wonder for bourgeots oriminologists and sociologists, who mereover are afraid to interptet corrootly that which surpriace them. We realize their position and maderstanc that it to excesdingly amboard and equiveeal. As the caying goct, toe sympathize but oannot help.

As for ourselves, it would be more useful for us in every respeot to refleot why we till do have orime, why $w$ still do have relatively numeraut ambemelements, thefts, rowdyism; jes, numerous from our pelnt of view, although stritingly few from the Amerioan one.

Then, should we, the Soviet peoples approach this problem with the Amerioen yardetick, though in this oase it would flatter our egop

No, of ourse, not.
It nould be far more uesful thersfore to examsne every case of law violation, not only as a result of survivals of capitalism in the mince of the people, but likewtse as a bitter result of some nisaletalations in the struggle againet these survivale, or, to atate it more simply, in the aystem of upbringing and re-aduation in the fomily and sohool, a Young Comanist Lagaue organtzation, or in a particular ofty, pertioular distriet, pertioular collective ferm, or, finally in the orgeniantion of the syetem of the soctal strugole agcinst orime.

It was etrll V. I. WGHIH who pointed out that it was necessary to re-edueate "in a prelonged struggle, on the basis of diotatorshtp of the proletariety the pelletarians themselves; who do not get ric of thetr of amall-bourgeots prejudices at once, through a nitacle, by order of the Holy Virgin, through injunetion of a slogan, resolution, or decree, but only in a long and diffiowlt masa strugle a, inst the mas smail-bourgeols influences." (V. I. LsNIN, Forke. Volume 31, page 94.)

Thus, it is worth while to speak once more about corbain aspects of this long, difficult mass struggle, und artue, if neoessary, because 3 is a vast and complicated matter and there is still agreat deal to be done in this field, we beliteve.
3.

First of all, it is necessary to repeat an 01d truism to the effect that the oroblem of gelme cannot be solved at all through gunishment alone, as some people still natuely lmagine.

Let us ofte HAEX again: ".... Hfatory and such a soience as atatisties, prove itith exhaustive olarity that from the times of GAIN no one hos ever suoceoded ot ther in tmproving or in frightening the world by punishment."

That is why, as MARX wrote in another case, "a wise legislator will prevent crime, so as not to be compelled to punish for it."

This, of course, does not mean at all that there should be no punithment following the orime. on the contrary, a ariminal should not have the silhatititinundation for honing that segtet plonacei by him util remain unsolued and therefore, undunirhes.

That is why UENIN stressed that the tmportant thing in the prevention of orine is not the fixing of severe punishment for it, but the faot that not 6 single oose of crime would go unsolved.

A devalopment of this idea is that in order that the court centenoe, e. e. punishment determined by the oourt, would have a preventive signifloanee, it is important that not only the convict himself, but his relatives, friends and neighbors, as well, know mhat he wat oonvsoted for; for in an oppostte casea quoting MARX again, if "the people see the punishment but do not see the crimes" they "osase to see the orime where there is puntshment."

How unfortanate it is that we sometines in the post forgot the profound signtficance of these worde and therefore gave inexouscbi littie publiotty to the activities of our court, truly the first pecole's court in the history of mankind!....

As a result, court reporting has almost disappeared from newspaper ages; visitin assizes of the courts in workers and collective farm clubs became an exceedingly rare event; court verdicts have been litile discussed at the workers' and employess' mevtin s; we have tnexcusably few books, novels, stortes, plays or filas about the people of the Sovtet curt, prosecution, or milttia; our radio and television bcshfully avoid these subjeots in thetr broadcasts.

Fincily, our lat propaganda whioh should become the foundation of the legal educction of the people, articularly youth, was completely incaequete. In the neanuhile, is it necessary to prove the usefulness of a persistent, intelligent, and notient populcriaetion of our crimincl, otuil, family and labor law?

A pouth araduating from a seoondary school and recelving matriculation certificate leaves tit with quite a broad field of hnowledge of the laws of nature, phystes and botany for examole, but ho knows nothing about the bosic laws adolted by society which he te ontering as a full-pledged citimen.

Finally, our literature and art - theater, cinema, radio or television - tell little about the role and aims of sootety th the struggle against ortme; about the fact that in conditions of our society the oriminal is always and inyoriably dooned, no matter how olever and adrott he may be; about the fact that every violation of the law inevitably oripples the life not only of the law-brwater htmself or of his viotims, but likewise the life of his family, grovely and sometimes irredarably.

Anch nost important of aflhe about the foot that grime has nouer uet brought hapoinegs to anuon anvehere. but instgad, alwous ravaged the soulh rulned the life and destroyed the reputation and future.

And yet, it is not only useful, but simply indspensable to talk and vertte about ali this, to inculaate, to train in a man from childhood, from youths a respect for the law and fatth in $i t$, revulston against oriate and realization of its consequences for all of us together and everyone of us individually.

And te tt not olear that auch a legal tratining of the poople, and particularly you就, is a part of the enttre problem of commaniat edueation, the problam ahtoh the 31 st Party Congrass ut Defore the puthle as the chief, most deotstue and most tmoortant tash?

How diffloult it $1 s$ in the light of this task set forth by the Party, Headly and speetfioally, as never before, to understand that, for instanoe, in our great country, where thousands of nemspapers and magazines are published, tnoluding speoial nagaztnes and newspapers for butlders, polar explorere, chentats, doctors and teaohers, for the blind and deaf-mute, for fiahermen and hunters, for sportsmen and ohess-players, for estomobile drivere and tourists, and many, many otherty, there has not betn as yet a oourt or judialal nowspaper of a mass magezine, equally tnteresting to ohemists and butlders, sportsmen and doctors -in a word, interesting and useful absolutely to everyone:

And yet, we oannot loubt that as soon as subsoription to suoh a newspawer or a magafine would be announoed, tens of thousands of pople uould take place in line near subsarfotion centers, because there ts a legttimate interest among the sroadest strata of the population toward our laws, the mory of our courte. ond proscoutton and toward the problems of lam in the bewdest sense of this word.

That ta why it is a high time to oreate such a printed organ, particularly beousea, cs MARX wisely noted, for the one who ts gutded by lews the law becomes a second noture.

Let us then meme our lans, our sootalitat law, a "second nature" of every Foviet man and thus bring oloser the time phon we wid have to aspend the saw effort for finding a thtef or a hooligan for purposes of demonstration which ar being mow expended, for inetanee, th medieal schools for a demonetration to etudents of a freith case of the syphilis!

And if these lines will cause a distrustful and derisive smile in some of cur skeptioal raderay let them reocll that not $s 0$ long ago there were peple who did not believe that in a fow vears, a fresh case of syphilis would be regarded as an almost museum rurity.

Hust we repect then miatakea of this sort of Deoole

But while we succecied in the liguidation of stich an suil as syphilis, ane thile a sybhilitte is actually a rarity in our country, there are still enough moral "suphilitics" here anc the time hats come to deal seriously with this evil clso; an old saying that "syphilis is not a shane but a misfortune" should be ohanged wien appliesi to mural "syobilis": it is both a shame and a mtsfortune; a shame for the one afflicted ond a misfortume for those who surround hin.

The prover the illness, the harder it is to cure it. But, the longer the sickness has been neglected, the more cangerobs it is anci the mora neoestary it is to oure it. These 3 imule truths aoply not only to medicine, but also to such a secialised field as the struggle against orine.

In adaition to the "asthods of traatment" mentioned above and whioh basically belony to the fteld of prevention of the "diseasea," whtch zs, of course, Etremely important, it is neoessary seriously and broadly to apply one more ne thod, the method of "ralying on fatth."

Yes, it is necessary persistently, concrately, and actiently to cultivate the faith in the faet that tt is never too late in conditione of our socletye ven for the people who comnitted arine, while they are still betng able to breathe, see, und think, to return to an honest worting and happy life.

It is imposithle to overestimate in thita sense the profounc signtficance of the speteh of Comrade N. S. ATA SHCHIV at the Thirc Congreso of Irtters of the USSR.

It wil2 be written about this speen and its signtfioance as opregram for further development of our art and literature agein and again.

But right now we are speaking about that portion of the spesoh th which NTHMFA SARGSEVICH told obout his meeting and conversation with a habitual thief who appealed to hts in a letter.

The entire speeoh moved us, delegates to the Congress, by many things: by tte wonderful sincerity and frankness, by the respect for the uritere' work revealed and strossed in it, by understanding of the difficulty and responsibility of this work, by tw feeling of pride in the Soutet people and their woultrful aohtabements, by tte clear lock into the future, and by to gentle humor, as well as by many other things.

Aut the prinotpal element whioh permeated this spesch, from the beginntigg to the ond, was a boundless fatth in the people, in theirpotentialitites, in their talente and wiadom, in theirmerotem and readinese for the noble deeds; ues, a boundiesefaith in the people, in the man and in the human heart.

Essentianly, the epteode with a thief related th thts spech aleo was an expreallon of suoh fath in a man whioh indeed forms the foundition of true humanism.

The foree of humanisk is stranger than the force of the atom. This was onee ege in revealed at the Third when HIKITA SARGESTIOH saidi EIn order to put this man upon the right path, another approach te neceosary; it is negesasty to belfeve in man, in his best qualities. Can thia man be an aotive participant of the communist butldingp Yes, he can, comradesi" ©nd when he uttered these ramarkable werds in the huge ouditorium of the areat Kremlin Palage in whioh the congrees was held, woh a atorm of ovations broke outy the eyes of the people shone with such a sincere emetson and pride in our Partye ouoh an unfeigned onthustasm tool pessesation of everybody, that no one of those who were presunt in the auditorium in those moments would ever forget it te:

Yes, the poter of faith in the humen heart and tts potentlalities is truly astounding:

There 1 a no need to hide it, there are atill amidst us, including we eriters, people who still quite recently mad wry faees whenever a talk started about the re-education of orfatnals, and advancetict the same time a rather threadbare and profouncly petty-bowneeots "theals" to the effect that it is impossible to make a blaek deg white by washing him.....

Yet, the writers, the "engtnetere of the human soul," of all people, ohould know that in every man there lives, Itke a mord "mother," a bettite atde, although it is dormant and stifled at times, an abpeal to which almost invariably produees a gratifying result, and that one of the tashs of true 21 terature is a cultivetion of humanism, of the trust toward people and development in a man of belief in htmeelf.

Yes, belief in himself, ofthout whioh, as without the truet toward himeolf, (sic), the lifo of a man is empty, inferior and profoundly unhappy.

IIKOLAY SERGEETIGH deservedIy remenbered ith a good word A. S. MAXARENKO, tating that "he had shown the nobllity of man, the great power of faith theman. And all of us know we11, how this futh in man was repaid.hundredfold by thuse towers whom attention and trust were shown -to former murderers and orminals."

It goes whthout saying, of oourae, that relying on falth, does not at all presuppose some sort of allm forglvences or wholescla frust toward ortindele. for ther are, after all, hopeless, harcened and inueterate oriminals, who should not be trusted and in ohon the trust shown in them arouses only a cynieal desire to mieuse th. Attempts to trest suoh accompliohed sooundmils are natve and dangerous, and the surett thingetth regard to woh revolutionary furiet UROSOV: "Bens hita head under the iron yoke of the laz:"

Yes, from the point of uiew of intereats of society as a thole, the applteatton of auch measures with regard to suoh hardened oriminala is likewise an expression of humanism beoause these oriminals ar eapable of ruining the lives of many people, let alone the foet that they are capable sometimes simply to take away theae lives....

We are not specking of these sooundrels in connection with the reliance on truat. But then, they are in the minority. We are speaking about an overwhelming majority of oriminala, anong who a gract unnest is spreading these days and many of whom are at present oharactertzed by a asncere and ardentstriuing "to tie up," t. e., to break with the oriminal past and to start new working, happy life.

Suoh feelings ar reflected, for instanee, in letters recently published in MPRAVLA," and, of course, only an insianifioant portion of letters reoeived wat otbitshed.
of course, such a "morel turning potnt" ts one of the many resulte of the generel atmoophere, the atmosphere of the grecteat national owatustam whtoh took sosseacion of our entire country after the 20th Congress of the C. $P_{*}, S J_{,}$and gatned still greater etrongth and scope after the Elst Conoreses. The re-sstablishment of Lentniat standarde in all the spheres of our life, a dectsive strengthening of souglist legaltty, a sharp rise in the proppertity of the people, g gigantio reorganization in agriculture and industry, the grendeur of the Seven-Year plans whtoh tnspired the entire Soutet people, and, finally, the real, everydey, concern for ees, conerete and perfeotiy obvious to eusryont, whtch became the basio law of our life, all this oould not help bringing on the moral orists even in the people, who, at some the, made a urong step and ment along a criminal path.

The author of these limes devoted many years of his life to these problems, at first, as a orminologist and, later, as a writer. That is why he is familiar with this complex and pecullar world; that te why he meetues hundreds of letters, both from oriminals terving sentenoe and from oriminele who have elready sarvad tt or, who, due to fortunate oombination of atroumatanoes have not yet aerued it.....

It is imnossible to quote all these letters in a ncgazine arttele, ven in a long one, although they are of a considerable paychologions interest. They are written by the people of the most divenee ages and Dackgrounde, with a difforent number of conviotster and difforent articles on the basis of whioh they were convioted. They are written with different degrees of literaeys in different handiortitinge, in the most diverse stute - from a natve but sincere style to a quasi-refined "atyle" whioh certain worldiy-wise "ja11-birds" like to affect.

But there is one thing common to all these letters and it is a firm resolution - and in a overwhelaing majority of oases it was born through tarart's suffering -a to enc with the $f$ criminal past.

It is even difficult to tamine the enormous response aroused in this pecultarmilicu by the apeeoh of the First Searetary of the Centrat fommittea ot the Writers' Congress. Thit speech beoame a sulybot of the most exotbad and warm disousston, not only in Moscow and other large oittes, not only in prisone and correotional labor colonies, but even in comparatively mall towns, where correspondingly, gathered five-siz local "eacles" for oolleotive reading and diseuseion of the thinge whtw "HIKITA SEAGEIVICH satd about our kind." Quite moentil, in Ghistopol on the kanc, almost a hundrec kilometers from any railroad, the Major of Militia, Comrade ZAKFiVATOV, told us how several $100 a l$ ortminals of a "provinctal oaliber" (let us hope they won't be offenced), cathering espeaially for the mirpose, read this apeech alowd and fully approved $i t$.
"Here, NIKITA SEROBEVICH understands verything about us," they satd, "he hit the nail right on the head, no question about that! .... He understood us, but will our chiefs understand us?"

Uncer"our ohiefs" the Ohtatopol oriminals meant the local oity authorittes and, an matter of foot, the abovementioned Major ZAEFVATuF.

Let us say direotly, that this question, "fill our chisfs understand us?" is not a simple que日tton and it worrie not only the Chistopol oriminale. The foct of the matter is that there are still qutte many eases when a man, who eerved his sentence and ben returnedeth an exoellent character report from the oolony where he served $i t$, mests with a number of difficulties in the way of obtaining erpioloment, regiatration, or a place to lite.

Thue, ottil in January, I reocived a letter from Leningrad, from Collade B., a lathe operator from a certain factory. At some time, he was convictad for a orime (a strect robbery), semed his sentence, then returned to Leningrad and obtatmed omployment aa a lathe operator at this factory, however, conoealing hls past. B. turned out to be an excellent lathe hand (T) learnedthit trade while serving his sentence); he became very will 1 bked in the shop, aequired neny friends and a good reputation.

And then, four and a half veara later, when $B$. himself genuinely torted to forget his past, tt oame to haunt himi his eonviction became known and wilitia oancelled his registration. The entite shop oame to his aid, but to no avall.
"I underatand and veven areatly eympathtwe with you," the chiff of pasaport smetron told htm polttely, "but I am powerless to help you: an instructione..."

The barty Committee, the director and the Pactory Gommittse of tht: large plant apocaled further, but "instruction" stood Itke a concrete block.

Then they appealed to the edftors of the "October," to me, inasmuoh as they knew $\mathrm{T}_{\mathrm{y}} \mathrm{m}$ stortes and artioles devoted to this type of subjacta.

This ls, by the way, what as wrote in his long lotter. I am quoting a part of it verbatimp oorreoting only the errors in spelling, bherever poastble:
"...sso, LEV foMaNOPICH, you see for yourseif, they are driuing me to the pits and $I$ do not went to fall in it.... For during thede years, I have acquired a family; I am doing well in my work, $I$ am like other pople in overy respeot, only the reglstrattes ts gone.... The director htmself and the mety acoretary are entirely on my side, but they cannot do anything, beesume of the inatruetion. Of oourse, I rulned my 2ife myselfy but, ofter all, I have a.lready served meentence and afteruserde I worked honestly; there must be croson why the ontire faetery te pulling for me. I am enelosing on opinion....

And he really enclosed an "optnion." A good opinton. And it wat stgned by the direator of the factory, by the party Commttee seoretary, and by the ohatrman of the Fac tory Comintteo.

I had to appeal in the name of the editors of the "October" to the Chief of the Leningrad Militia, Comrade soLOVIEV, a percestibe mon with lerge expertence, who, by the way, has always blown interest in the problems of Teha ilitation. He responded imediately and reinstated the ragistration, waining the "inctructlon."

As B. and his fluends inote later, this caused great rejoicing at the factory, rajosting for the two: "for the one, who was registered, cind for the one who ordered the registration."

These were precisely the expressions in which 4 . informed me about it and a great meaning is contained in these words!

In otting this ememple, I do not want at all to say, that inatruotions are blame for overything; but there are oases when the moet proper thing to do is to violate the rule, even if tit it a proper rule on the whole. Wuoh are the dialecties of life.

It is good that Comrcen SOLOVYEV is not the only one who understande this, but minty other workers of the MVD organs do likewtse. Thus, in hosoow, for instance, the Chief of the Hoscow Criminal Investigation Department, Gomrade PARTEMTTEV, and the Chief of the Moecow OBKhSS (sic). Comrade GRISHIN find employment for the persons who come to them with confession of their gullt and carefully follow up thetr subsequent 11 fo.

Sympathy, uith which the personnel of a Leningrad factory treated $B_{\text {. }}$ to not a singuler aase and this is Intrwiee characteristio of our sooitty Uany, factortes and collegtive farms in the Utratne, Deloruseia, and other republics hove undertaken the peteonage of correctional Labor colonies, they arrange for thoge under the tr patronage oncerte, amateur porformanoes, lecturest they help to organize atudu, ete. Later, when particular prisoners finish their sentences, these enterprisen willingly aocept former prisoners as members of thetr personnel; the old workers help them to tmproue their qualifieations; footory committees take are of proulding for them plaoes to live, etc.

Recently, in an intureating article of Comrade MONAL.OV published in the "Literary Gazette," the uords of the secretary of the Party Committee of the Chelyabinsk Thbe-Rolling Mill, Comrade A. MAKAROV, were quoted. "The readucation of prisoners," said MAKAROF," ts our business too. The personnel of a plant patrontzea a correctional labor colony for louth, sends ther the best people from the plant to give various tyra of helos begtnaing with the organization of produetion and melng with the carrying out of politioal-educational bork. F. I. GRECHKIN, fero of the Socialist Labor, and E. T. TARASOV, a penstoner, an old worker and Party menber stnow 191\%, addressed the convicts. The best eleotrionl welder, POPOV, riveter LOSMMANOW, and many other workers from the Hont taught prisoners the advaneed methods of work. IIt the aid of the patrons from the plant, guer 800 ponvicts veoame elcotrioal welders, lathe operators, pollshers, etc."

Refleot over these smple mords, and you will see behind them the truly statesmanilme end truly Soutet approach of the men of Chelyabinak to thtibtg and oogples problem.

It is neosssary to wrtte more and of toner about suoh foots; the experienoe of the men of ohelyabinok (and not in Chslyabinak alone people, are engaged in this sort of thing) should be extendet to very oity.

But there still onjpf opposite cases: a man who served his sentence and acqutted a certain trade is sent to an enterprise, and there the ohief of personnel, hardly glancing at the charocter report from the plaoe of imprisonment, immediately beging to mumble:
"Ahem.... Of course, this is very ntoe.... And the character report, ahem....not bad.....But, zou know, hers..... res.... In short, we have no vacanctes....

As a matter of faot, there is a "vacanoy"; but in this case, a humane attitude, a huan heart and the soviet approach are lacking!

Escentially, such ohtefs of personnel departments need re-education themselves.

It seeme to us, that now the Party, Young Communist League, and labor unton organs shewld take oare of finding Jobs, Wrth for the former prisoners and for persons who voluntarily appear with the statement that they have renounoed their oriminal aciuities and intend to start a new life; and that in this big and tmportant business, a sustem ts needed, flrmly anci clearly established officially on a netionwide scale, whiol nould be equally compusory for evermone.

Firat of all, there stpuld be organized, on social principles, the Al1-Union Comptite for Aid to Former Convicts, in finding employment and return to honest life, with a broad participation of the bublic, with organization of loocl branohes of thit Comitttee and onlistment in the work of voluntary active memberanis out of a number of penstoners, old Party nenhers, Foung Comuntst leagus and labor inion worbere, writers, jurbsta and techers, and court, prosecutton, and militia workere.

In the alredy-mentioned Chistopol, for example, an old oommuntst, a participant of the storning of the Finter Paldee, Comrade SERCEY Wealot, who has long been on penston, assumed a personal gutciance of two youths who lost their way. He worked with then patiently and persistently and now he received an aserd by order of the Ninister of the Interncl Affairs of the Tater AsBn for snatching the children from the oriminal world."

But even in a small Cisistopol, NazaRov is not alone. In the same place, on old oommunist VASILY popKov (By the way, he was one of the creators of the Chistopo? holsheuik organizotion) likelice guides teen-agers involved in oriminal aotivittes; a tecoher-pensioner KNYLUV is engaged in the same worit ine active worbers in the Children's lloom of Chistopel Itilitia number le people.

And in Mescow, hundreds of people are engaged in this noble work voluntarily and without remuneration.

There are many such faots and we may have no doubt that after the oreation of the proposed comititee it will not have to worry about active membere.

We will say more, many former convicts will join this active mambership and thay, paradostoal as it may 9 eem at first glanoe, will be very useful. qute recently I reoelved a letter in the current mati from a big-time robber, who was convioted last time for 25 yeare. He has been convicted more than onee in the past. His name is Kh.

This man is fairly well educated and not devoid of a literary abulity. ie enclosed his photograph with the letter, woparently as a sign of a speoial favor to the addressce. (iy the way, the custam of stnding photographo, in many cases with insortptions, is umry popular among the oriminal world, where thts is ragerded as an expression of symoathy or a sign of the movty fifined "societyic politeness. $I$ take this opportuntty to thaint him and my other correspondents for this attention.)

The letter from Kh. begins as follows:
"Dear LisV RUSiANOVIChé.
"It will soon be segen years sinee I have been in priaon. I was convicter theticlea 16 and 593 of the Criminal Code of the ESEFS for 25 yeare ITL (Correottonal Uabor Camp).
"Here fy spifitwal rabsth took place. Feeling muself a new man, I cannot help being partially grateful to my fate for this shaking-upr ay princinal gain consists of the fact that I degan oleariy to dtetinguish the borderline between right and wrong, learned oompaesion and began to feel moved to tears by performanoe of a good deed. In this sense, the colony became for me truly a correctional one."

Ah. tells further about how he tworking in the colony and engages in educational bork in his free time. He writes a columa of a lumorous verae under the title "A Conficiential Ford from a Niquintmyed $\operatorname{siouR}$, a Former Thief," in a newspaper with a yerge olroulation published in this correotional institutten. ihe column is a big success among recders. i ain quoting a few extracts:
"Hear ye, thilevea, big and small. Infant thievee and experianced ones, The trus word of Squint-cyed sGOR, A former thief.
"Only once life is given to a man, And you cannot return the years that are gone, Give up your thieuing fraterntty And come out uoon on honest road.
"Disoard the germent of childish romanticish And try alwoys o remembert
The right to lo iness in the soviet world Belenga only to the worining people!"

In his letter. Kin. does not dinn thet he was justly convicted and he is not asking (me) for dnythtng, soept one thing: to become aoguaintha with his literary works. lie also writes: "I mamorking on a dietionary of orimincl slang. The dicttonary has umppeotetyy turned out to be of such stae that tt could well be taken for an academic supolement to VALI! (Translatap'g Hote: meaning. DAL's Nictionary of the Russian languagem

This is a letter from o big-time ariminal, convioted for bandtry. But we need not doubt that this man is perfectily sincere in writing that he is on the right road to rehabilltation.

Among oriminale the re efe often onoeuntered oapable people, tith alemt minde ind goed inelinations. Every one of thon arpluad at the Itfe of orfme in his own way and every one has his own life story. Many wers ruined by vodka, whioh, of courees, ts the mother of orime, as the lack of mill power is often ite sister.

Teare of mar and oeempetion, aooemponied in a number of oases by neglect of children and absence of a nomal Soulet way of life in a number of oountry's regions oocupied by the Hitlerites, of oourse played their part, tou.

Now, when etriking natiomal upaurge has atarted, the axtetenoe of whioh is not conttsted evem dy our cnemies, we have, as never before, condittons for a sharp reduetion of orime.

An taoracingly araad partictipation by public in the atruggle agatnet orime is elie charaotertetto of reasnt years. jaople's brigadee for the preservation of publio order have orlginated quite recently, but already the result of their aotivities te olearly setn. In many oities, hooligantom ta being oherply reduced; the upabers of brigades excellently cope with the tan atefore thom and they will continue to inprove in this.

However, it would be mateous to suppoes, that Dy organtining these origades our society may constder thet cuerything neceseary has been done. No, this task must be solved consistently, broadiy, and by diverse methods.

A respeet for late and human peraonality should play here a tremendous role. The Soviet led ts the first law in history of mankind which te plaoed the the servioe of man, whioh guarde hie rights, tis dignt$y, hia freedom, and hie ldees. This law was crected by the people themselves, in the name of the people.

World's greatest writera treated In their works the ternal and tragio oonfliot between man and the law, justioe and absenee of rights, ferce and helplessness. TOLSTOF and HUGO, ZOLA and BALZAC, DIGEEWS end GORAT, SUKHOVO-KOBTLIE and CHEKFOV, DOSTOEVSEY and MHATOLE TRAMCE, and many, many other writere turned to thit oubject more than onoe in pain and angery aposing hypeerley and falsences, venality and oruelty of bourgeote "justioe" and bourgeois "lame."

CHERHOF, $3 n$ his story "In the Court," patnted a vivid ploture of a psarist court:
"Murky windowe and wa11s, the votoe of a meretary, the pose of the proseoutor - all this was permeated with bureaucratic indifferenoe and emanated cold, ss though the murderer soas a part of office equipment or was being judged not by the living people but by some inutetble machine, turned on by Lerd knows whom."

A oontemporary amerioan writer, IRA WOLFBRT (phon.). in his novel, "Tekker's (phon.) Gang," the oharaoterizes the moral makemp of an Amerioan judge:
"The judge mentally melohed all 'pros' and 'cons.' For the judge, lite any othermortal, has to take part in the bus iness game counting on profit."

This eharacterization to euon more broadly confirmed Dy another oontemporary Amstioan writar, witMAM, who writes about D. S. judges, that there la "among them a etpiting, almost unbslievable, number of inoompetent people, loafors, politioal mediocrittes, orooks and blockheade."

Before the soutet oourt are set forth, first of all, the ecueational teshs. 4 detere on courte - a deoree by which the entire syete of ruapiet "justioe" wa liquidated, rang out in the very firet daye of Ootober (RevoIution).
"Let them shout, " stated V. Is LisuIN at the 3rd All-Ruestan Congress of the Soutets, "that we, in reforming the old ceurt, summartly pulled it down. By thit we cleared the way for the real peoplits oourt...." (V. I. LEHIN, Horks, Yolume 26, page 421.)

Comparetively recently, the second eseston of the Supreme Soutet of the OSSR adopt the "Prinetples of Criminal Legtalation," where it ta writtent "Puntshment is not only the retributtion for the artme committed, but tt also has the purpose of oorreetion and re-eduoation of the convioted in the aptrit of an hemest attituce toward work."

Such ts the sotrit, the text, and the meaning of our law!

It is tmportant thet this be equally understood by those who judge and those who are being judged. It is important that the law be applied th full conformity with the opirit and meaning. It is important that the law uritten in the name of man should be hnown by svery man and that it becomes for him his own moral, imatuble law.
"I vouch," atd at age time M. I. KALIMIN, "that if the judge is able to cxamtae and deolde coeed well, he can alwaye oount on an audienot, his chamber will alway be filled with listeners. 4 judge is a ready-made agitator and propagandist. le is apropagandist of our laws, a fighter for the fulfilluent of lewe."

Yes, the oourt ohould be propagandtat and educator, but not the court elone. Pentictpation of our sooiety in the propaganda of the Soviet justice, Soviet lawe, and in the law oducation of the poople is an lmpertant and neesseary roork.

But our ootety should met only prepagandize our lawa, but 0180 should help sometitea our judiotal and militia organs in the re-edueation of law utolatore. It is necessary bolder and broader to praotioe the referrel of comparatively unimportant offonsea to the ezamination by the public. This, first of all. will reduce a number of oritinal onvictions, whioh will only tmprove the preventive algnifioanoe of convietsen and strengthen it, and, second, it will have a great educational meaning.

Prom this point of utew, cases are inexausable when the courts having the guarantet of the entire oollective for a defendant and an apolieation to entrute to the collective his re-education, refusee such an appliaation on pursly formal grounde, as it happened, for example, in one of the people's courte of Leningred. The "Komsomol Praude" justifiably attacked such an orroneous deoiston of the court.

Let us nete, by the way, that reldance upon trust presupposes, firet of all, the truet tomard a colleotive, and not only toward the deoole who eommitted a orime.

Thera ere oases known, when a young fellow, tried for hooltganism prefers to be convicted by the people's oourt rather than having his case reforred for ewamination by the publio, mottuating thts by the faot that tt is "far more diagraceful."

We have to constiler in this that the examinction of suol oases in a public procedure has a broad sducational signifficance, and not only for the offender alone.

Proeceutors and judgse, we think, hould have the right to dectde imdependently the problem of raferring such cases to the public and comrade' courts and for examination at the workers' and Young Commintst League mestings.

When militia organs transferrad a part of their funetions to the people's brigades for preservation of oublio order, thts alone produced esgnifioant result. We may not doubt that the referral by the courts of a number of cases to public organizations likevise will fully justify itself.

In a report of the Central Committee of the C. P., SV, to the 20th Congress of the Porty, N. S. KHRUSHCHEV noted that in our country "the are also cnoountered poople maliotoutiy violating the mules of toolalist communty. It is timposiste to top such ugly ocourreness without particination by the masee themselves, through aimintatratiow measures alone. Here, a large role belongs to the pubitc."

The latest omininal trial law Negulates also the role of the publite in the oourt ttself, not to mention public participation outaide the oourt in the struggie against crime. The introduction of the institute of public prosecutors and puhlic defencers is an exallent form of partioipation by the public in the discharat of justioe.

PUSKKIN yet reflectete great deal on the problems of justice and personaltty. He demanded the law to be a frutit of maty re thinking of a legislator and not of his dersonal tastes or moode. In pioturing to himaelf an ideal of suoh a soolety "where penerful lave are combined with saored liberty, " PUSHKIN sptly of the neocsetty for a careful planntng and humaneness of lates. Thue, in analyaing the lawe of PETER (the Graat), PUSHKIM wrote: THe differsnce between the political tnetitutions of PRTER the Great and his temporary deorees is astonishing. The former are fruits of a vast intellects fllled with ged will and misdom. The latter are often oruel, copriotess, and seam to be written with $\quad a$ mhtp."

Despieing the oontemporary Taartst court, PUSIIKIN wrote the moving and prephetso wards about the court, such as tt thould be. voNTiRTM Aremed about the sumality of laws for ever ybody: "俊3 ruthetr firm ohfeld is extended over everybodye where their sword held in the trusted hands of oittzens slidos over equal heade ietthout disorinination and strikes the orte from above by a just blow, and where, DSHKIN wrote, kesping in mind the tndependence of the judges: "Their hand ts not to wo bought etther by the autd avarioe nor by fear."

Unfortunately, our writers and poeta seldom turn to these subjects. In our drama literature the genre of court drama ta almost undmome although in the twenties, for example, the plays, "与owfle," of B4 koxanoy and, "Artiole 1l4," of L. NIKULY, had a very sucosesful run in the theaters.
L. N. TOCSTOY, on the boets of an actual oourt oass, told to him by the Cha immen of the Moooow Ciroutt Court, DAVYDCV, wrote hts immortal ploty, "The living Corpee," and, in another ocse, LEV NIKOLAEVICH, embodied a aubject also of an actual court case told to hia by $A_{0}$. F. K.NI, in the brilltant novel, "The Resurreetion."

Our writers seliom turn to court matertals. Yet, the role of literature in the strugale against orime in our conditions may be very signifioant.

I will perimit myself to efte a frowh examplo. in July 1, the newopeper "Literatury and Life" publithed an artiele by the kremining Jidge of the WVD LAVROV, "The Diffioulties of the Genre," thehich he, among other things, relatess "Quite recentiy, a hardened itinomant thief oame to we, confesaing his guilt. Kis moral criste began when he found a sulil worn-out volume in one of the stolen suitcoses. It was the 'Notet of an Eramining Judge' by Lu SHETNIN. " I adint, that after mailag this articie, I thought thet th this oase eum the victim mould agree that thts theft accomplished a geod deed.

ACPFB is under active investigation by ten field offices with its principal activities centered in the New York, Chicago and Los Angeles areas. Subversive Activities Control Board hearing officer in September, 1957, recommended the full Board issue an order determining the $A C P F B$ to be a communist front and ordering it to register as such; however, the final order has not been handed down as yet.

Smith resides in Hartford, Connecticut; a retired professor emeritus of Wellesley College; is a "joiner" of numerous communist front organizations in every field of communist endeavor; and is ever available for speechmaking and fund raising for such communist fronts. Her book is completely biased in favor of the ACPFB and ignores completely the organization's communist nature and communist history. It is the type of a biased thing we can expect from such an individual as Smith. Detailed review of book set forth.

RE: "TORCH OF LIBERTY"

DETAIIS:

Memorandum Mr. Jones to Mr. DeLoach, 9-25-59, captioned "Donald P. Hurlburt, Box 884, Gorham, New Hampshire," (attached) discloses Hurlburt, by letter to the Director 9-15-59, made references to the book the "Torch of Liberty" and points out that several derogatory references to the FBI are set forth therein. Mr. Hurlburt's letter was acknowledged 9-25-59 and it was further recommended that this book be secured and reviewed.

Background:

The "Torch of Liberty" is 448 pages in length; is published by Dwight-King Publishers, Incorporated, New York City, which is a publishing firm set up and financed by the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born (ACPFB); and was written by Loulse Pettibone Smith, a New Haven Security Index. subject (Bufile 100-388761). It is concerned with a history of the problems faced by Americans of foreign extraction and foreign birth during the years 1933-58. The book highlights the fact that intolerance of foreign born in the United States is not a recent development but has been present in varying degrees since the founding of the United States. The 1933-58 period, however, according to Smith, included the most concerted efforts at "repression" and it is the measures taken against this "repression" by the ACPFB that Smith traces in her book. This organization, designated by the Attorney General pursuant to Executive Order 10450, was organized in 1933 to defend the rights of all foreign-born Americans in legal battles with the Government concerning deportation, et cetera. The files of the ACPFB were utilized by Smith, who is an Honorary National Co-Chairman; therefore, the book is, in a sense, a factual record of events based upon ACPFB files.

From a review of the book, it appears the main purpose for which it was prepared was to extol the work of the ACPFB and to attack the U. S. Government and the Justice Department, particularly the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), regarding action taken against the foreign born by enactment and enforcement of Federal legislation. In connection with the attacks upon INS, the FBI is drawn into the book by inference through attempts to show the Bureau assisted INS in the enforcement of certain legislation which affected the foreign born.

Contents:

The book itself starts off with a discussion of background data concerning immigrants, minority groups and other foreign-born groups which aided immeasurably the early development of this country.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont RE: "TORCH OF LIBERTY"

It goes on to discuss at considerable length the various pieces of legislation which the book describes as "oppressive" action taken against foreign born such as the Immigration Law of . 1903 and the Laws of 1917 and 1921. The book continues its attack on the Government by alleging that punitive measures during the years 1920-40 were directed against foreign born under the guise of ridding the country of unwanted "foreigig"agitators, anarchists and other "undesirables." Smith alleges the Government oftentimes "lost" applications for citizenship; refused citizenship to individuals on relief; caused such individuals with the loss of income; and other "repressive" measures. She claims that certain foreign-born individuals were victimized by the Government solely because of their activities in certain unions or in pressure groups demanding that the Government aid mass unemployed. Smith alleges the INS, which during the 1930s was a part of the Department of Labor, continued to use banishment from the country as a penalty for "unpopular" activity.

Smith, later in her book, traces the formation and development of the ACPFB and its injection in 1933, of its influence into cases involving Governmental efforts to deport individuals under the then existing laws. Smith admits the ACPFB, in its efforts to assist all, would not hesitate to undertake action on behalf of admitted communists and those who openly supported the Russian way of life. Before World War II, the organization assisted many so-called "anti-Nazis" who entered the country illegally and could be deported.

Smith gives special attention to those individuals who fought Franco in Spain, such as members of the International Brigade, the Abraham Lincoln Brigade and similar organizations. Money, legal aid and medical assistance were given these "anti-Fascists" by the ACPFB.

LatervSmith points out the ACPFB protested as strongly as did the Communist Party (CP) the passage of the Smith Act of 1940. Throughout the entire book, Smith echoes her organization's sentiments over the "injustices" directed against the minorities and foreign born by the Smith Act. As a side note, it is interesting to note the only other organization which consistently denounced the Smith Act from its inception to the present has been the CP.

Upon the advent of World War II, Smith observes the ACPFB aided in the uniting of all "anti-Fascist" elements in the United States and epradsed the efforts of the foreign born in producing the war materials necessary to defeat the Axis. However, as Smith observes later, the ACPFB recognized in 1944-45 certain forerunners of the "cold war" which was to erupt between the United States and Soviet Russia. Smith claimed the ACPFB recognized certain difficulties and stepped up its activities in response to the increased needs of certain foreign born for protection of their rights. When peace came in 1945, Smith highlights the efforts of the ACPFB to successfully thwart the

RE: "TORCH OF LIBERTY"
Government's efforts to deport some 16,000 individuals whose deportation had not been carried out because of the inability to deport these people to certain areas of Europe during the war. Smith's organization made every effort to assist those of the American population who were being subjected to the "hysteria of the cold war" which Smith describes as the unnecessary fear of Soviet Russia. She observed that under the guise of fear of the Soviets, the Government increased its activity against the foreign born and particularly against the noncitizen. This mounting tension resulted in increased attacks on the ACPFB, according to Smith, because of what Smith describes as the continuing workfor justice and protection.

Concerning the Government's activity against foreign born, Smith observes that former United States Attorney General Tom Clark may well stand as the symbol of repression for all times. She accuses clark of reactionary, antidemocratic acts of terror and using procedures which jeopardized the constitutionally guaranteed freedoms for all Americans.

In the atmosphere of the cold war, Smith denounces the Justice Department's campaign against those who had records of "radicalism" and she alleges that all the Government was doing was suppressing the Bill of Rights. She is particularly sensitive, from the tone of her book, over the Government's action in citing the ACPFB as "subversive." It is apparent from Smith's book that she tries to highlight the respectability of this organization by pointing up the "unsolicited" support of the organtzation and its programs from well-known and influential Americans.

As her book progresses, Smith describes in great length the internal terror which resulted from passage of the Internal Security Act of 1950. She denounces the legislation itself; the creation of the Subversive Activities Control Board (SACB); use of informants or other "faceless" witnesses; arrests of aliens under this law; and other provisions of the Act. The ACPFB sounded a call to battle against the Internal Security Act of 1950 in December, 1950 ; protest committees were set up; citizens called upon the Attorney General and INS; and pressure was brogight to bear against Congress by certain trade unions. It is readily apparent from the tone of Smith's book that the Government had at long last hit a sensitive nerve in the ACPFB's "hide."

Smith discusses later what the ACPFB considered a three pronged attack against the organization. This attack consisted of the following: The SACB proceedings which resulted in the SACB hearing officer recommending that the full Board issue an order determining the ACPFB to be a communist front and ordering it to register as such (the final order has not been handed down as yet); the House Committee on Un-American Activities hearings in 1957; and the official action of New York State in 1957 legally restraining the ACPFB from any activity in that state. Smith admitted these actions hindered the $A C P F B$, but it is apparent from her later comments that the organization was so well organized and financed that its programs continued virtually without interruption.

Smith later cites in her book several cases involving favorable decisions for the ACPFB causes and highlights particularly public reaction to the William Heikkila case. Heikkila, in April, 1958, was deported by INS to Finland on very short. notice; however, due to a storm of protest he was forthwith returned to the U. S. Smith condemns INS for its "Gestapo-like" tactics in this and other matters. Looking at the activities of the ACPFB, Smith indicates she believes better times for the organization are ahead. In her concluding remarks in this book, Smith echoes the communist line for the repeal of the Internal Security Act of 1950; the Walter-Mc Carran Immigration Law; elimination of certain "injustices" directed against the foreign born; and increased restrictions in the present authority of the Justice Department and INS.

Mention of FBI

A review of this book indicates the primary target for the author's attacks was INS. However, the Bureau is mentioned on several occasions as follows:

Page 78 discusses the arrest of some 200 alien seamen in 1941, some of whom were picked up on warrants and others collected wholesale from places of employment, taverns, et cetera. Concerning the latter group, Smith alleges "these were lined up for questioning by an immigration official, a policeman and an Agent of the FBI." The instances referred to by Smith are generally nonspecific and, therefore, the veracity of her allegation cannot be proved or disproved.

Page 193 discusses the March, 1941, deportation hearings against west coast labor leader, Harry Bridges. Smith states the presiding inspector, in accepting the testimony of two unidentified individuals, one of whom denied the data "the FBI claimed he had told them" found Bridges deportable.

Page 194 quoted in part the dissent opinion of Judge Healy when the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth District upheld on 6-26-44 the Attorney General's order to deport Bridges. Healy stated "The Service (INS) has enlisted the powerful cooperation of the Federal. Bureau of Investigation (against Bridges)."

On page 256 Smith observes that shortly after the Internal Security Act of 1950 went into effect, INS on 10-22-50 began a series of arrests in New York, Los Angeles and other large centers. During the subsequent period, Smith implies the FBI supplemented INS personneliand

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: "TORCH OF LIBERTY"
"patrolled office buildings, posted guards before apartment houses..." Smith concluded such "cloak-and-dagger activity" was designed to impress the American people with the alertness of the Immigration Service and the"prowess of the FBI...." Bufiles are negative concerning any indication Bureau personnel carried out such alleged functions.

Page 258, quoting from the ACPFB's publication, "The Lamp," listed certain provisions of a Senate bill prepared by the then Senator Mc Carran relating to the immigration questiong which did not become law. Item seven recommended "establishment of a 'central index' of all non-citizens, to include all relevant information and to be available to the FBI and the CIA."

Page 268 contained a discussion of certain provisions of the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, better known as the WalterMc Carran Act. Smith reports that among these provisions is one that the Commissioner, INS, shall maintain "direct and continuous liaison" with the FBI and CIA for a mutual exchange of information.

Page 277 makes mention of the mounting "offensive" against the Internal Security Act of 1950 by the ACPFB and similar organizations. The book alleges that notwithstanding the progress being made concerning this "offensive" the FBI and INS continued "questioning citizens in their.homes and at places of employment."

On pages 311 and 357 Smith reports that reaction against "oppression" is possible even though at times in the United States what she calls reaction is ineffective. She states that "the investigative methods of the FBI Agents had brought trouble and panic and economic disaster to many homes, but public criticism was rare." However, one source of criticism of the FBI did come forth in 1958 when Cleveland industrialist, Cyrus Eaton, denounced the Bureau over television for "such 'police state' hounding and snooping."

Page 358 bears the implication that the FBI, through its activities in sending investigators into homes and neighborhoods, in using the telephone as an instrument of terror, in advising employers to fire certain individuals but not mention the FBI is indeed a "reckless activity." There is nothing in Smith's book as to a specific reference concerning dates, locations, et cetera, relating to this alleged activity of the Bureau.

Page 364, in denouncing the proceedings concerning the ACPFB before the SACB in 1955, alleges that witnesses used by the Justice.. Department were "spies" employed by the FBI. This is an obvious reference to the use by the Government in this regard of several former confidential informants of the FBI.

Memorandum tosMr. Belmont
RE: "TORCH OF LIBERTY"
Page 399 charges that FBI Agents arrested former Congressman Stanley Nowak, a Detroit security subject, on l2-11-42. Bufiles concerning Nowak ( $39-832-45$ ) indicate he was arrested by Bureau Agents on 12-11-42 after his indictment by a Federal Grand Jury charging him with obtaining his U. S. citizenship illegally. The indictment was subsequently dismissed on 2-8-43 upon the Department's recommendation.

Page 414 quotes an article by Robert Spivak, a reporter for the "New York Post," to the effect that admittedly General Swing of INS does not enjoy the prestige on Capitol Hill as does the Director.

Observations:
There is no question that the "Torch of Liberty" is completely biased in favor of the ACPFB. As could be expected, this book ignores completely the organization's history which indicates its controli and adherence to the policies of the Communist Party. The ACPFB is one of the few strong communist fronts remaining today and it has always received due recognition from individual communists and the communist press. As the book rambles on, it is apparent that its author is interested only in showing what a noble organization the ACPFB allegedly is. It can be expected to continue to assist communists who are subjects of deportation orders or denaturalization action by the Government. It is unfortunate that many naive people who will not take the time to get the true facts concerning the ACPFB will read Smith's book and, being impressed with its pleas for the foreign born, will fail to realize that the ACPFB is in reality an outlet for Communist Party propaganda and activities.

The Book and Its Author

In his 213-page book, "The South Strikes Back," the author, Hodding Carter, III, has chronicled the advance of the White Citizens Council from its inception in Indianola, Mississippi, in July, 1954, following the Supreme Court's desegregation decision to its present day status as the most influential resistance movement in the South. The book essentially strives for an objective historical account of the rise : of the council but relies heavily on the publications of the council itself, routine news coverage of its activities and editorials and articles appearing in the "Delta DemocratTimes," a Greenville, Mississippi, newspaper noted for : its controversial views on racial matters, which is published by the author's father, Hodding Carter. The author infers that the phenomenal rise $:$ of the council is due to the various announcements and court activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) which has been pressuring for immediate integration. Secondly the council's organizational structure itself has enhanced its position; that is, its state and local leadership is drawn primarily from the ranks of the white comminities business, political and social leadership. Because of their guidance, no radical or violent elements have entered into the organization. Constant reiteration of "respectibility" and "nonviolence" has been its main appeal to the middle and upper class white population. The author points out that although the council is dedicated to the maintenance of segregation and the preservation of states rights through peaceful and lawful means, it has concentrated on economic pressure to achieve its goals. He predicted that as strong as the council has grown (approximately 300,000 members at this time), it will utimately be destroyed. He states it is essentially a negative movement, founded on the defense of the status quo and dedicated to the repression of a minority which history has shown becomes an impossibility.

References to the FBI
The FBI is mentioned by Carter in the following instances while citing examples of economic pressure exerted by the council against Negro desegregationists:

Memorandum to Mr . Rosen

Reverend George W. Lee, a Negro in Belzoni, Mississippi, who had led a Negro voting registration drive was shot to death while driving a car on 5/8/55. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by causes unknown. Local police authorities claimed that Lee was shot by another Negro in dispute over a woman. The NAACP blamed the council for his death. Lead particles in the victims mouth, the author states, were first described by authorities as teeth filings, but the FBI identified them as bullet particles. No one was ever brought to trial on this case (pages 115-116).

A full investigation was conducted by the Bureau of this incident at the request of the Department on basis of allegations that Lee had been shot because he refused to remove his name from a voting register. The Attorney General on $3 / 13 / 56$ issued a press release that investigation did not substantiate this allegation, that there was no Federal violation involved, that a summary of the investigation was furnished to local authorities. During this investigation, fragments of metal removed from the victim were sent to the FBI laboratory, examination of which determined them to be similar to number three buckshot (44-8949).

Dr. Clinton C. Battle, a Negro doctor in Indianola, Mississippi, reportedly left Mississippi in June, 1957, because of reprisals by the council. Battle claimed he went to the FBI with one particular allegation of voting irregularity, "but they sent a man who was born and raised in Mississippi to investigate. He told me I should tell the sheriff. These FBI men aren't going to make charges against their friends and neighbors. When I: saw that the Federal Government wasn't going to do anything about the violation of my civil rights, I decided I may as well move out of the state."

Dr. Battle's critical remarks appeared in the 7/22/57 edition of the 'Delta Democrat-Times' and again in January, 1958, in a St. Joseph, Missouri, newspaper. In addition to the above, Battle charged that FBI Agents in Mississippi had made superficial investigations; that Agents, because of being southern-reared, would not report the true facts; and he found FBI Agents to be halfhearted and apathetic in their investigation of violations against Negroes.

There is no truth in the statements by Battle. We thoroughly checked them out and found the allegations to be unfounded. Battle when interviewed by Bureau Agents, $7 / 25 / 57$, was unable to furnish details and stated he had no specific criticism against the FBI. The Bureau's jurisdiction and its impartiality in investigation was brought to his attention. It is noted that Battle is generally regarded as a radical and a "publicity hound" by members of his own race.

Background of Hodding Carter, III
Bureau files fail to indicate any pertinent information identifiable with the author, Hodding Carter, III. Our files do indicate limited cordial relations with Carter's father, Hodding Carter, editor and publisher of the 'Delta Democrat-Times," a Greenville, Mississippi, newspaper. Carter, a widely-known author and lecturer, has written several editorials and articles praising the Director and the work of the FBI. Letters of appreciation were sent to him in each instance. Carter and his paper have been outspoken on racial matters, although advocating a moderate view and supporting the upholding of law and order at all times. He is not a strong segregationist and has consistently opposed the White Citizens Councils. We conducted a loyalty investigation of Carter in 1954 and no substantial derogatory information was developed other than to indicate he had sponsored an organization in 1950 which succeeded an organization cited as a communist front. He was a victim in an extortion investigation in April, 1955, following the receipt of a threatening letter after writing an article criticizing the council. No prosecution resulted from this case. Memphis by letter $10 / 2 / 59$ stated Carter expected to be in Washington, D. C., on $10 / 13,14 / 59$ and expressed a desire to tour the Bureau and meet the Director. Arrangements for this were completed; however, Carter advised he had to postpone his trip indefinitely due to serious illness of his wife. (94-8-1764)

RECOMMENDATION:

Briefly, referenced memorandum points out: 1. During the inspection of the Records and Communications Division in December, 1958, the Inspectors analyzed the book review control program and set up this program in charge of the Publications Desk of the Central Research Section. 2. During the past six months, the Inspectors' analysis has been substantiated by the successful operation of the book control program in the Central Research Section inasmuch as it has eliminated duplication, has assured a central repository and has been very economical. Then, Central Research Section recommends that the book control program revert back to the position it was in before the inspection recommended program which has been successful, and that the book review control be relocated in the Crime Research Section.

It is to be observed that the present system, based on analysis by the Inspectors, is efficient, economical, and workable. The Central Research Section is equipped in manpower and designed in function for this very assignment in connection with book control. In order to reassign the book control program to the Crime Research Section it would necessarily require additional personnel. It is felt that the Memorandum to all Bureau Officials and Supervisors dated January 21, 1959, coordinating book reviews on the Publications Desk of the Central Research Section has solved a problem of duplication, additional costs, and time spent on this matter.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the book control program be maintained in its present successful operation in charge of the Publications Desk of the Central Research Section.

WASHINGTON 25. D. $\mathbf{C}_{\mathbf{0}}$

MEMORANDUM TO ALL BUREAU OFFICIALS AND SUPERVISORS
(A) BOOK REVIEW CONTROL BY PUBLICATIONS DESK - CENTRAL RESEARCH SECTION -- The Publications Desk, Central Research Section, has been designated to establish a central control and repository for book reviews. All information regarding books being published, books received at the Bureau, books to be purchased, and all book reviews believed desirable should be brought to the attention of the Publications Desk immediately to avoid duplication and insure prompt consideration and handing of current and future book reviews. In addition, publications-trade and public-press items will be followed by the Publications Desk to provide the Bureau with a more complete knowledge of books being published and those which should be considered for review.

A card index of all books ordered for review or assigned for review will be maintained by the Publications Desk. The card maintained on each book will include the author; title; identity of the official, section, and division recommending purchase and review, as well as the section and division which has the book review assignment; and whether the review has been completed. Once a review has been assigned to a particular section, it is the responsibility of that section to insure prompt handing of the matter. A tickler of all book-review matters should be designated for the Publications Desk to assist in properly maintaining this index.

The various officials, sections, and divisions throughout the Bureau are encouraged to recommend for review any books which they feel might generally have an interest to the Bureau, but.particularly, they, are encouraged to recommend reviews of books which are related to their various fields of responsibility. It should be understood that these instructions do not preclude voluntary reviews of books. However, the Publications Desk should be advised prior to any purchase and review to avoid duplication and to insure proper clearance of purchase with the Administrative Division. In any event, the information necessary for the book-review index card should be promptly submitted to the Publications Desk.

Very truly yours,
John Edgar Hoover
Director

Office Menvorundum - unites Division, regarding book review control matters so that the enclosed material regarding book reviews should be included in the Supervisors' Manual. Basically, the instructions in the enclosure are not new. However, responsibilities of the various divisions in relation to books for review are more specifically spelled out.

RECOMMENDATION:
That the enclosure be approved for inclusion in the Supervisors'

By OLAND D. RUSSELL scripps-Howard staff Writer

ON Aug. 20 next, the mardarer of Leon Trotsky will be set free in Mexico City after completing a 20 year sentence for his famous killing with a short-handled ice ax.

He is the most composed, dedicated and perfectly adjousted assassin in all history, who for 20 years has never admitted his real identitty. To do so would reveal that he is a Stalinist agent, schooled from early youth for the bloody riddance of Stalin's greatest enemy Trotsky.

But the life of Ramon Mercader becomes an open book with the publication of Isaac Don Levine's "The Mind of an Assassin" (FarTar, Straus and Cudahy. $$ 4.50$ ). Mr. Levine, biograsher of both Lenin and Stalin, is one of the world's leading authorities on the barker machinations of the Soviet Union.

TWO VISITS

In preparing this book, Mr. Levine has twice visited Mexico City and saw the assassin in prison, the last time as recently as only a few months ago. More lmportantly, he has had access to the amazing psychological study of Mercader by two expert criminologists. This record alone is 1359 pages long, forming more than half of the entire court record of the case.

Mr. Levine concludes that Mercader. now 45, is a pissionary of the Stalinist-type communist faith, and is beyong redemption. He typiflies the modern political assassin who is to be found in the special character of the cult in which he has enlisted for life. His code of conduct dictates that "morality is a bourgeois heritage, humanity an abstract entity and murder a mere mechanical exercise."

CRIME ANALYSIS

Thus, says Mr. Levine, he turns out to be the prototype of the coming race as seen from Moscow in which man and machine alike will he harnessed twins. "BeHeath the mask of the prosfIner in Mexico lurks the Gremlin's happy robot of the future," is Mr. Levine's frightening summation.

CARMICHAEL

Despite the complexity of the roster of characters in this book, it is documented crime analysis of the highest. order. Mr. Levine is a pleasantly smooth writer who has organized his matrial well and produced a top-grade thriller based on fact.

What will happen to Mrcoder when he is set free? The prospects are many, but two are likely: Either he may be done in by a Trotsky avenger, or, escaping that fate, he will be smug. glad out in glory by commonist agents and go to his adopted fatherland, Russia. There he will be greeted as proper recipient of the Or: der of the Hero of the Sovet Union-and wear a medal such as adorned Nivita Khryahatey on his visit to AmeritaNCLOSURE

Nerat. Dor information.

At 11:45 pom., 11-9-59, Mr. Alfredidudley, 905 Kent Road, Gand Apartment 2, Richmond, Virginia, telephone ELgin 5-6858, employed as a schoolteacher with the Henricho County school system, Virginia, called the Bureau and spoke to the writer. He advised that he is a veteran and recently: came into the possession of a copy of the above-captioned book, He advised that it is published by thofrreedom Press located at 520 Fifth Avenue, New York City, copyright 1958.

He stated that the true name of the author of the book is not given and that the name Victor Jakeriox is a pseudonym resorted to by the true author and that the pseudonym was taken from a code name utilized during the war, believed in the Guadalcanal Campaign which means enemy sighted and I am attacking. Allegedly the true author was a former colonel in the Marines who was familiar with the activities in the Pentagon and through his normal duties came upon subversion. He tried to report this information to his supervisors but was blocked. Later he withdrew into private life and decided to write about the Pentagon life. Dudley advised that the book is fiction and that certain incidents described therein, he (Dudley) has deduced that they refer to the Harry Dexter White case, Alger Hiss case, and the suicide of James Forrestal.

Dudley further stated that he had heard a rumor to the effect that the Freedom Press publishing house in New York City had been burned and that, in addition, two local bookstores in the Richmond area had been visited by an unknown individual who purchased all of the remaining books under the above-captioned title which they had in stock. Dudley stated that he wanted to bring the above book to the attention of the FBI simply out of civic duty and, although rumors were distasteful to him, nevertheless he thought that some parties were attempting to get the book out of circulation. He related that he called the Richmond Office of the FBI and reported the same information that he was relating to the writer. He stated that he would in all probability confirm this conversation by letter. He seemed to be quite concerned with insuring that this information was brought to the attention of the Director.

Dudley appeared to be rational in his conversation and he was thanked for his interest in the matter.

Khrushchev book to be published by E. P. Button & Company in Spring of 1960. This 600 -page volume translated into English under Premier Khrushchev's authorization sets forth his blueprint for the world's future. In order to get a preview of this book, issues of The Philadelphia Inquirer which carried selected portions of this book were obtained. These articles indicate it to be excerpts from speeches, interviews, and published correspondence of Khrushchev setting forth his position on various aspects of Soviet foreign policy. This book undoubtedly will make an excellent reference work as a comprehensive and authoritative collection of Khrushchev's statements. Upon publication, a copy will be obtained. (62-46855-31)

Soviet Foreign Policy

A review of the articles in The Philadelphia Inquirer by Central Research Section reflects the following basic points of Soviet foreign policy:

1. The Soviet Union wants increased East-West trade between the "socialist and the capitalist countries."
2. The best way to settle the cold war is through negotiations, preferably "through a summit conference."
3. The Soviet Union is irreconcilably opposed to capitalistic colonialism. However, the Soviet Union "has helped and will continue to help underdeveloped countries disinterestedly, by lending direct assistance."

 $\operatorname{mac} 2_{6}$

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: FOR VICTORY IN PEACEFUL COMPETITION WITH CAPITALISM
BY: NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV
4. The Soviet Union professes to desire complete disarmament-'to the complete banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons. . . to a complete withdrawal of troops and the closing-down of foreign bases on the territories of other states." Until this takes place, however, Khrushchev says "we shall keep prepared for war."
5. There exist two separate states in Germany today, the socialist German Democratic Republic and the capitalist Federal Republic of Germany. The reunification of Germany would best be solved by creating a confederation of these two states. "in order to pursue a common policy on a definite range of external and internal questions." A peace treaty could then be concluded both with the organs of the confederation and with the governments of the states within that confederation.

Peaceful Coexistence Central Principle

All of Khrushchev's statements are entwined about the central principle of peaceful coexistence. He defines this principle by saying "when we speak of peaceful co-existence we have in mind co-existence between the socialist and capitalist countries".which, "in settling outstanding issues between them, should renounce the use of force in any form, including military force." At the same time, he expresses his belief in the "unshakable principles of Marxism-Leninism, "and his conviction "in the inevitable triumph of Communism." It is only necessary to glance at Lenin's so-called "principles" of peaceful coexistence to see just how "peacefully" communism would evolve. In 1920, Lenin declared:
"As long as capitalism and socialism exist, we cannot live in peace: in the end, one or the other will triumph--a funeral dirge will be sung either over the Soviet Republic or over world capitalism."
(V. I. Lenin, Selected Works, Vol. VIII, p. 297)

What are the laws governing civil rights?  Race Relations and American Law

by Jack Greenberg

Deranging and encyclopedic, this is the only up.toW date treatise on the law of race relations in the United States. Mr. Greenberg writes for citizens, as well as public officials of every rank, who need to know, what that law is, what it is likely to be in the future, and how it operates in order to solve one of the major dilemmas on the American scene. He describes doctrines that affect education, employment, public accommodations, the armed forces, and many other areas in which the social implicaions of law are felt An important, highly informative book.

GEORGE TODT'S OPINION

Notes From New Chinatown
"It can be said that the greatest threat posed by international Communism lies in Asia, and this threat stems mainly from the Chinese Communists."
--CHIANG KAI-SHEK. Soviet Russia in China.

An outstanding social event I attended recently was the Chinese Consul General's reception in New Chinatown on Oct. 10, which was the equivalent for the Nationalist Chinese of our Independence Day, or Fourth of July. They really did it up right, too.

I have a most pronounced admiration for citizens of Chinese and Japanese descent in our nation today -- and for a practical reason. Actually, these folks have the lowest crime rate of any ethnic group in the United States. So low, in fact, that it almost seems unbelievable. But my authority for that pronouncement derives from the Uniform Crime Reports issued by J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation, no less.

In glancing over the UCR a couple of years ago, I noticed that, out of approximately two-and-a-half million arrests for some 25 varieties of crime, only a mere 350 of these were Chinese and an even smaller number were Japanese. In a half dozen or more categories of crime, the orientals completely blanked out -- and they were the only ones to do so. Hats off to them for their exemplary showing here.

In another day, hate mongers used to depict the oriental as a cunning and sinister personage whose presence in a dark alley was something to be avoided at all costs. Actually, it may be just the other way around judging from the arithmetic contained in the FBI's Crime Reports. Something to think about?

Both Consul General and Mrs. Mong-ping Lee are, as might be expected, persons of great charm, culture and intelligence. She is a lady of obvious refinement, beauty and taste. He is youthful in appearance, strong, and with an effervescent sense of humor and joy of living. Altogether, a winsome and delightful couple.

I have known the Lees for several years and one of the first things * which happened after we met was that the Consul presented me with one of the finest, most authoritative books on the worldwide criminal communist conspiracy that I have ever read. It is called "Soviet Russia in China" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, New York City, $$ 5.00$ ) and was written by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The book was published in 1957, just two years ago.

In this summing up at 70 by the Nationalist Chinese leader, we come upon what may indeedke the most monumental work of our time concerning Red methods of conquest and subjugation of the enslaved peoples they have managed to overrun by all their devious methods.

Frankly, this book ought to be read by every intelligent American -especially since the recent visit to our shores of the wily Russian Premier, Nikita S. Khrushchev. There are some interesting parallels, incidentally. And to be forewarned is often to be forearmed.

After leaving the Lee's delightful reception and later attending the banquet of the 28 Chinese Benevolent Associations at Allan Lum's New Grand East Cafe with a pal of mine from the Greater Los Angeles Press Club, the venerable and beloved Joe Riley, I went home to my library to take another look at 'Soviet Russia In China."

As I opened the book, my eyes fell on a significant passage in Chapter III of Part III, under the heading of "Peaceful Coexistence." Here is what the eminent authority on Communist strategy writes:
"Let us study Khrushchev's final concept of 'peaceful coexistence' with the free world in the light of the Russian Communists' military thinking and of our experience. His concept is that Soviet Russia should continue to strengthen her peace offensive and neutralism tactics against the free world and, at the same time, spread the 'anti-war movement' -- while positive preparations are being made behind the Iron Curtain for an all-out war.
"This is the combined use of peace tactics and the preparation for war. In other words, he wants to destroy the world-wide anti-Communist front with his peace offensive before launching military surprise attacks against the capitalist countries in a decisive battle.
"In this way he hopes to realize his final concept of developing Communism into a global system and subjecting the world to Russian Communist domination."

This book and former FBI agent Cleon Skousen's "The Naked Communist" * comprise the two finest works in the entire anti-Communist lexicon for my money. Both have been reported on previously in this space.

If you haven't read them, and wish to obtain an authoritative insight into the treacherous but effective methods of the Communists--why not treat yourself to some very fine reading soon?

As Goethe once said, "Wisdom is only found in truth."
Who quarrels with that statement?

Captioned book was written by Max Ways, senior editor of Time magazine. According to Ways, the U. S. has no wideranging sense of purpose, no public philosophy connecting individual beliefs and political action. As a result, U. S. foreign policy is doomed to lose ground to the communists in the realms of politics, economics, and military affairs unless we can reconstruct a public philosophy. Ways offers the time-honored words: justice, morality, law, of which we are surely in need; however, what these represent in American life is rather vague. Ways holds that our leadership is relatively blameless; the fault lies with the American people. Politicians are not political enough, intellectuals not intellectual enough, and the public, in its basic beliefs, is too private. We have fallen victim to the error of positivism, the doctrine that only the world revealed by science is real; moral judgments are in the realm of make-believe. Actually, says Ways, moral decisions are the only ones the public should make, Ironically, Ways shows, it is the Marxist menace that has brought back to the West some consciousness of the practical relevance of philosophies. This jackleg philosophy has a purpose, plan, and even sort of a public philosophy, using economics, law, and religion to give the people a stimulating consciousness of being needed. According to Ways, the idea of freedom, the idea of order, and the idea of God stand as the heritage America can give to a world in technological upheaval. We must recover the value of knowing "whole truths," and seek an end beyond survival. By concentrating on survival,

| By Max Ways (Harper & Bros.) |

DETAILS:

Approach to the Problem
Ways' thesis is the relation of the American people to their government. Today, he states, the people's main public concern and the government's main sphere of activity is external affairs, meaning both defense and foreign policy. But how does popular concern affect government decisions? While vigor surges through our own society, through our allies, through our enemies, through the "uncommitted" nations, the policy of the United States is swirling into an eddy, a dead end. Crisis has become built in.

Ways contends that while communism is only one aspect of the general peril, communist aggression, though not lessening, no longer stimulates our thinking. Every citizen feels free and easy in expressing his opinion about specifics of what the government does or proposes to do, but becomes timid about discussing the ends and the fundamental beliefs that condition political action. This reticence shuts off the public from that part of political life with which it is most capable of dealing, the moral part. The signers of the Declaration of Independence pledged their "lives, fortunes, and sacred honor" to their new nation. They saw a national purpose beyond survival ('lives'), beyond mere national interest ("fortunes"), to an assumption by the nation and its citizens of moral restraint and responsibility under an immutable higher law ("sacred honor"). The task of the American people, Ways asserts, is to examine and restore the proper connection between morality and politics, to form a public philosophy, a funnel of coherent thought connecting individual beliefs with political action.

The World Situation

If communism disappeared tomorrow, the world situation would still be one of great disorder, Ways writes. The cause, more basic than communism, is the disruption of world order through the explosive effects of technology. In this disruption by technology, societies unable to deal with the fragmented chaos of disorder, turn toward communism, which appears to be a self-confident system with a plausible promise of coherence.

Ways says that the objective position of the United States today is one of growing danger in the midst of (and partly because of) success. To better our position, we will have to use power toward the end of furthering institutions of order and freedom in the world and we cannot carry a message that we have forgotten.

The Quest for Purpose

If the central American proposition of strong but limited government is to be communicated to the world in the form of American action, then we are looking for a purpose more usable than "peace," "national interest," or "survival." As to "survival," Ways says the irony of survival can be expressed this way: men, being mortal, aren't going to survive anyhow; what might survive are values and principles; by concentrating on survival we bury the values and principles which alone have a chance to survive; the absence from policy-making of the values and principles weakens our practical action, thereby probably reducing our life expectancy. We have a treasure house of experience, but this experience will not be available for political action, Ways contends, unless our society can still deal vigorously with politics at the level of the Declaration of Independence.

The Structure of Decision
Ways says that we have paid and are paying a high price of practical danger because of the damage to our structure of decision. We have fallen victim to the error of positivism, the doctrine that only the world revealed by science is real, while abstract ideas involving moral judgments are not fit subjects for debate. Force, instead of being the servant of truth, becomes the arbiter between truths. The public, lacking confidence in the ability to harmonize truths, tends to rely upon power, although it rightly distrusts power. A partial paralysis occurs in the public's function of dealing with problems, such as foreign policy, which contains large elements of ethics and large elements of physical science.

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: Book Review: Beyond Survival By Max Ways (Harper & Bros.)

Ways claims that the politics of this fluctuating world must bear a relation, often hard to discern, to the purest and most universal truths the human mind is able to grasp. God has to be taken seriously.

The Mirror of Marxism

Ironically, it is Ways.' belief that the Marxist menace has brought back to the West some consciousness of the practical relevance of philosophies. Marxism has become a jackleg philosophy, a para-philosophy, something that serves in place of philosophy. Marxism, says Ways, is the only modern philosophy that breaks through the modern barrier against philosophy. The inhuman Marxist philosophy may be giving the people an assuaging and stimulating consciousness of being needed,

Prospects for Reconstruction

Ways claims that politicians are not political enough, intellectuals are not intellectual enough, and the public, in its basic beliefs, is too private. Ways points out that the materials available to the public for the reconstruction of a public philosophy include:

1. Such elements of the pre-modern public philosophy as may be still alive in the common sense.
2. The great American political abstractions.
3. The actual policies we have been pursuing.
4. The struggles in other countries to combat the blight of positivism by other than Marxist means.
5. The general lessons that might be learned from our internal political problems.
6. The reservoir of religious thought concerning the inner man.

The use of these, according to Ways, would effect a world policy turned upon ideas of objective morality and the international application of justice.

Referral/Consult
The Author
Book jacket indicates that Max Ways was born in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1905 and attended Loyola College in that city. From 1926 to 1929, he was a reporter for the Baltimore Sun; from 1940 to 1941, he was a rewrite man and editorial writer for the Philadelphia Record; during World War II, he served as head of the Enemy Branch, Foreign Economic Administration; after the war, he joined Time magazine.

Bureau files indicate that from 1936 to 1941 Ways was a member of the American Newspaper Guild, Philadelphia chapter. The majority of available information in the files indicates that Ways was anti-communist and worked to oust communists from the American Newspaper Guild. Some observers, however, feel he was "coddling" communists in his early years with the group.

An article in the Washington Post, June 19, 1940, states that "a rebel group" of Philadelphians in the American Newspaper Guild, led by Max Ways, was superficially against communism, but "did not object to the pursuit of the Communist Party line." The next month, July 10, 1940, there appeared in the Daily Worker an article which was highly critical of Max Ways and a group of opposition leaders in the American Newspaper Guild for making charges of "Red" domination and inefficiency against leaders of the Guild. The Guild Reporter, official publication of the Guild, issue of February 15, 1941, reports a dispute which allegedly occurred as a result of Ways having named certain writers on the Philadelphia Inquirer as being communists and stating it was the Guild's duty to fight communists in each unit. Re: Book Review: Beyond Survival

Walter Lister, managing editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, advised in 1954 that Ways had been accused of "coddling communists, " but had become anti-communist and worked to get communists out of the Guild. (140-4759-8)

Ways, interviewed by Bureau agents in 1954 concerning another matter, stated that, largely because of his efforts, the Communist Party was never able to control the Philadelphia chapter of the American Newspaper Guild.

SYNOPSIB:
The above-captioned book has been reviewed by the Central Research Section in accordance with a recommendation of Mr. DeLoach that an analysis of the book be made to determine whether its contents might lend themselves to a comparison article contrastiag the Soviet secret police with the FBI.

The book was edited by one former prisoner of the Soviet secret police and contains articles by two others. Six of the nine articles which comprise the book have been written by a man believed to be a former officer of the NKVD.

The articles in the book summarise the history of the secret police from its origin as the Cheka (Extraordimary Commission for Combating Counterrevolution) to the present-daly KGB (Committee of State security). Wy the Devicta todny to supplement their intellisuace oparations. Inne are: (1) pestwar treaties with Festern allies; (2) soivure of tate secrets from German archives; (3) large grougs of ratugeen fileaud oprumunt comainadion, thereby presunting a cever for borlet intrilitymee agmati; (4) lack of travel rumerictions in the free nationay ( (i) lendimey of Western liwe; and (i) Wentern freedom of apeech.

Re: The Soviet secret Police

Efirmon Woilin and Robert M. Slusaer, Frederick A. Praeger Company, New York City, 1957

While the book represents a worthwhile documentary on the Soviet secret police, it is not believed advisable to use the contents as the basis for a contrasting comparison with the FBI for two reasons. In the first place, the widely divergent responsibilities of the Soviet secret police and the FBI do not lend themselves to comparison because of the all-erioracing functions of the former as contrasted to the very limited jurisdiction of the Bureau. Even more important, a comparison of the Bureau with the police-state agency of a totalitarian regime --no matter how favorably contrasting-might still leave many readers with a distorted and fallacious mental association linking the FBI with a secret-police agency.

RECOMMENDATION:
For the information of the Director and Mr. Tolson.

DETAIM:

Reforemee in made to the enclosed momorandam of Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolecn, dated Octeber 30, 1959, concerniay the boek The sorlit Eecrat gtudy be made of thate boak with the view in mind of contracting the activition of the Soviet secret police with those of the FBI.

Divergent Responadillities

The above book, which was published in 1957 by Frederick A. Praeger, New York City, has been carefully reviewed and analyzed by the Central Reaearch Section. It is not believed advisable--or even possible-to make the comparison suggested above by Mr. DeLoach in view of the widely divergent reaponstbilitiea of the two organizations. Because of the all-encompassing nature of the Soviet secret police, as set forth in the book, if that organization were to be compared to its counterparts in the United States, it would have to be contrasted with the Central Intelligence Agency, the Secret Sarvice, the FBI, the Border Patrol, the Bureau of Prisons, the National Guard, the Atomic Energy Commission, the War Production Board, the Bureau of Public Roads, the National Archives, the Department of Labor, the Department of Agriculture, and all the municipal police and fire departments throughout the country. Moreover, there is a danger in contrasting the Bureau with the police state of any totalitarian country--no matter how favorably--in that it may lead some people to continue to associate the two, even though subconsciously, thereafter. (pp. 15, 25, 107, 109, 114, 115, $119,131,133,135,138,145,150$ )

Prisoners Recall Experiences

Essentially, the book is a compilation of short articles (ranging from 15 to 55 pages) on the various aspects of the Soviet secret police as seen through |the eyes of a number of persons formerly associded with it. At least two of thece caltsore is gimen Woith, whe claina to have heen a priscuar of the soviot secrat police aff and en from 1801 to 1027, when he left for Gormany. In 1051, Wolin was the alifeet of a frecial hauiry-fitate Dopartmeat (Voice of America) invectigation, chritas the copurse of which no information of a derogatory mature was meevared. Dureau files also contain no information of a derogatory nature identifiable with the cther editor, Robert M. Slusser. (123-8162)

NKVD Officer
Of the nine articles comprising the book--not including a 28 -page introductory summary written by Wolin and Slusser--six were written by Vyacheslav Pavlovich Artemiev. The book does not identify Artemiev further, but Bureau files indicate that an individual with a similar name was a lieutenant colonel in the Red Army untll his capture by the Germans in 1943, and from 1934 to 1941 had been an officer of the NKVD. In 1954, Artemiev was scheduled to take a teaching post at the Army Language School in Monterey, California. (100-357681-240-168)

Power Spreads
As evidenced by its title, the book is a history and an analysis of the functions of the Soviet secret police from its inception under the name of Chela, down through its various aliases of GPU, OGPU, GUGB of the NEVD, NKGB, MGB, and finally the MVD and KGB as exist today. As early as September, 1918, the Cheka (or Extraordinary Commission for Combating Counterrevolution) declared itself to be autonomous and from there its scope of power began to spread. In 1922, its title was changed from Cheka to the State Political Administration (GPU) "oople's Commissariat of Internal Affairs (NXVD), and it was given almont un.... d powers of arrest. In 1934, the NKVD swallowed up the remnants of the GPU and its successor, the OGPU, and expanded its controls even further to include the militia, prison camps, and local fire protection. At the time of the printing of the book in 1957, Soviet police powers were split between the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MVD) and the Committee of State Security (KGB). (pp. 3-31)

Balanoe of Authority

Accarding to one of the chapters in the book, Soviet bureancracy is divided into the Party apparatus (numbertice approximately 1,000,000 people) and the police apparatus (aumbering 'probably under a million'"). Delicately adjuntad, they eerve to keep the whole soviet system in balance. Bail is unheard of th the Soviet Union, and the use of defense counsel in political cases is "unthinbable." Soviet secret police are trained to regard every "free" citizen as an unexposed enemy and a political prisoner, once convicted, ceases to be regarded as a human being, but becomes "human material" which, along with timber, cement, and steel, is to be used in the building of a bigger and better socialism. (pp. 97, 101)

No Innocent Plea
An interesting point brought forth in the book is the fact that theoretically the secret police has no right to either place under surveillance or arrest members of the Communist Party. In actual practice, however, the Party members decline to admit, even to themselves, that they are being followed, and a Party member is inevitably dropped from the rolls before being apprehended. Still another interesting point is that defense attorneys hesitate to enter a plea of innocent for that is evidence of attempting to discredit the secret police. Instead, they merely attempt to enter what they consider to be mitigating circumstances. The task of the secret police is seen as not only punishing the guilty but also so terrorizing the rest of the populace as to prevent "crimes" of a similar nature in the future. (pp. 125, 126, 183, 184)

Cites Intelligence Aids
In the concuding chapter of the book, Artemiev lists the following aids io Soviet intelligence today: (1) postwar treaties of collaboration between the

Mehta, a resident of Delhi, India, describes himself the title page as an examiner of questioned documents. His particular interest in thumbprints is due to their use on civil documents in India, where, he states in his Introduction, "the majority of the people are illiterate, which necessitates that they should append their thumb impressions in token of their signatures."

The author has a sound basic idea of the method used in establishing fingerprint identifications, but it is evident that his knowledge of fingerprints does not go $f$ ar beyond thin, a knowledge based on reading and superficial practice. This leads him to an unlimited tolerance for some rather low numbers of ridge characteristics, which might be valid in establishing identifications. For example, he writes, "Some of the experts of our Fingerprint Bureau are satisfied with six identical points. In the case of blurred impressions, the view of some of the Indian experts is that if there are three identical points in a very small area of the impression and the identical points occur close to om e another, it can be surmised that the impressions are of ane and see person." This "surmisal" basis is the end of fingerpeint tification, but seems to be useful to an examiner of civil inter in whose work, incidentally, life and liberty are not at stakes. Three similar characteristics by themselves will establish mat w and six points certainly are open to criticism as an adequately safe standard. Mehta (to his credit), however, is loath to accept one point of similarity as basis for an identification (page 90).

On page 24 he states, "The author is of the view that in a court of Law, it is advisable to locate at least twelve idemtical points in the case of clear impressions and five or six lat teal points in the case of blurred impressions." This is a feal y toemaisal statement and at the first reading it appeared that me and more points in poor print. A little reflection, though, leads to the conclusion that he means exactly what he says, since a blurred print will normally possess relatively fewer discernible ridge characteristics.

His examples of cross-examation are fairly typical with the repeated references to pattern types and definitions, cores, deltas, "authorities," and technical trivia, much of which is irrelevant, but which to a layman is ostensibly fraught with learning.

This book might have local forensic value in India, but it has no technical value, insofar as fingerprints and the expert fingerprint witness are concerned. A novice may gain a few erroneous impressions from it concerning points of identity and patterns. It needs a good proofreading to correct numerous typographical and spelling errors.

The review of Basic Electricity, Volume 6, shows that it, also, will be valuable as reference and study material for field radio technicians and sound-trained Agents. This book is available at a publisher's price of $$ 2.90$ and it is believed that the Bureau will receive full value from the addition of one of these books to each field office library, to the libraries of the Bureau's radio stations at Ramona, California, and Midland and Sowego, Virginia, and to the Bureau library.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. Recommend this memorandum and attachment be referred to the Publications Desk, Domestic Intelligence Division and to the Bureau library for information.
2. Recommend the Administrative Division purchase and forward to each field office, to the Ramona Radio Receiving Station, to the Ramona Radio Transmitting Station, to the Midland Radio Station, emedewher Senego Radio Station one book each, Basic Electronics, Volume 6, and obtain and furnish

BASIC ELECTRONICS, VOLUME 6

by Van Valkenburg, Nooger and Neville, Inc. published by John F. Rider Publisher, Inc., $2. 90 reviewed by SA George W. Finger, Jr.

This volume of BASIC ELECTRONICS is an extension of the technical electronics study material of the previous five volumes of this series. The original five-volume series, entitled BASIC ELECTRONICS, and a similar series, entitled BASIC ELECTRICITY, were prepared as courses of study for students in U. S. Navy specialty schools. They included graphic illustrations along with a "building block" approach to demonstrate and develop the fundamental principles of the theory and operation of electrical and electronic equipment. According to the publisher, these courses of study were found so practical and efficient that it was felt that their release to the general public would be of benefit to the nation and they were made available to the general public about three years ago.

Volume 6, BASIC ELECTRONICS, presents a study course on Transistors and Frequency Modulation. It also presents study material through the "building block" method, beginning with a discussion of solid state electronics and continuing through studies of semiconductor diodes, transistor operation, transistor circuits and transistorized receivers. The Frequency Modulation (FM) study begins with a discussion of the fundamentals of FM and includes FM transmitters and FM receivers, with particular attention to theories and circuits peculiar to FM. As in previous volumes the study material is clarified and emphasized by use of cartoon-type illustrations and, while necessarily limited to fundamental concepts, is clearly and concisely presented.

This volume is a valuable extension to the previous five volumes and its study should prove beneficial to anyone who has completed the study of BASIC ELECTRONICS and is interested in a short study or review course in the fundamentals of transistor and FM theory.

GLODG: JOHN DASCH, ET AL. SABOTAG:
shorsic:
Dasch, in "Xight Siles Against America," reletes in three sections his experiences frombis youth ontil the present time. Section one tells of his life in U.S. from 1922 antil his return to Germany, which he claims was to sccure a better job; his alleged anti-Nazi sympathies while in Germany; his acceptance of the sabotage mission allegedly in order to return to the U.S.; his sabotage training and the trip to the $\mathrm{E}, \mathrm{S} . ;$, and his contacts with the RBI. section two covers the trial of the eight saboteurs involved in this case. Section three discusses his period in prison; his repatriation to oermany and his subsequent diffictities there; and the efforts made by Dasch and his Wife to clear him and effect his return to the U.S.

Dasch alleges unfair treatment by the FBI, his principal allegetions being that he was promised a parden after six manths and this promise was not fulfilled; that Mr. foover persomally told him not to worry; that his part ia the defeat of the subotage ission was not properly portrayed at the trisl of the saboteurs and that he has not been afforded proper treatment and recogmition simce. Facts are that before his trial basch was told he conld have all of his activities pointed oat at the trial and take his chances on the results or he could plead gailty and be sentenced and the FpI would recomend him for a pardon in about six months. Dasch after originolly agrecing to plead guilty, changed his mind and refused to cooperate. Information ${ }^{-}$ regarding Dasch's activities and contacts with the FBI was brought out at trial. Contacts with Director alleged by Desch did mot occur. laformation regarding Dasch's activities and contacts with FBI available to public since 1945 when attorney Gencral released sumary of the transcript of the trial and the conglete transcript was available for press review.

Memorandun for Mr. Belmont Re: George John Dasch, Et al.

Bufiles indicate that in memormanu dated 6-25-42 former SA Duane L. Traynor reported that in discussion with Dasch on that date in the presence of SAs N.D. Wills and F. G. Johnstone he told Dasch "that the worst he could expect would be that he would be sentenced as were the others, and that the best would be that after we had been successful in looking at all the ramifications of this case, he would be released and placed in touch with people who deal with propaganda in order that he might work out his own destiny. I informed him that of course we were desirous of treating him fairly and squarely. but I did not want him to feel that we had made him any promises.

Memorandum for Mr. Belmont
Re: George John Dasch, Et Al.

In a memorandum dated 6-27-42, former ASAC T. J. Donegan reported that in the presence of SAs Traynor, Wills and Johnstone on that date, he told Dasch "that there are two courses of procedure open as far as is concerned (1) that he be treated differently at this time and we call to the attention of the Attorney General and the United States Attorney who will handle the matter the part he played in the case so that he could be given approprinte consideration; and (2) that he go aloag with the others, go imbo court and plead guilty and be sentenced to prison, and after a pertod of time in prison the Director would recommend to the Attorney General that he be given consideration for a Presidental pardon based upon the fact that he came directly to us and told us the whole story a short while after he arrived in the United States."

On 7-11-42 SA Wills testified before the Military Commission as follows:
"Question: (Colonel Ristine) Mr. Wills, were you present on Saturday, June 27, 1942, in the evening, with Mr. Donegan, Mr. Johastone, and Mr. Traynor, and Mr. Dasch, when a proposal was made that he should plead guilty?
"Answer: (Agent Wills) I was.
"Question: (Ristine) And was it stated as a part of that proposal that after a plea of guilty, he should be sentenced and that during the trial, he should not divulge anything with respect to the agreement that was made, and that after the case had died down and for about, say three to six months, the FBI would get a Presidentio 1 Pardon for him?
"Answer: (Wills) That in substance is true."
"(uestion: (Attorney General) And did you, so far as you know yourself, when you were present, make him any promise of any kind?
"Answer: (Wills) No sir.
"Question: (Attorney General) With respect to what was to be done with him?
"Answer: (wills) No sir.

Memorandum for Mr. Belmont
Re: George John Dasch, et Al.
"Question: (Attorney General) Who indicated to him that he might wish to plead guilty?
"Answer: (Wills) Mr. Donegan.
"Question: (Attomey General) Mr. Donegan?
"Answer: (Wills) He talked to the defendant.
"Question: (Attorney General) And what did he say to him with reference to if he would plea what would happen, what was told him exactly?
"Answer: (Wills) as I recall the substance, he was told that if he appeared in Federal Court and entered his plea of guilty and be sentenced along with the other defendants, that after a period of about six months, efforts would be made to get a Presidential Warrant, or that he would get a Presidential Warrant -- a Presidential Pardon."
"Question: (Attorney General) Just what did you sty to him that you would do if he did certain thingsp did you promise him anything?
"Answer: (Wills) I promised him nothing.
"Question: (Atiorney deneral) Did anybody promise him anything?
"Answer: (Wills) Yes sir. Mr. Donegan, on the afternoon of Saturday, June 27, told defendant Dasch that he would be indicted und appear before a Pederal Court, that at that time he should enter his plea of guility, or if he entered his plea of guilty and he was sentenced to prison along with the others, that through the F.B.I. a Presidential Pardon would be obtained for him."

On 7-20-42 SA Traynor tentified before the Military Commission as follows:
" 0 Mr. Traynor, when the proposal was made to Mr. Dasch that a plea be entered, coupled with the probable duration of his incarceration of six months, undoubtedly the F. B. I. did not consider that he was guilty with the se other people, did it?
"A We knew very definitely he was guilty with the other people-- that there was violation of the law-because he had participeted therein.

"Q Do you mean to tell this Comission that in the estimation of the F. B. I., six months' incarceration was a suitable punishment for a man who was guilty-- equally guilty-with these other defendants?
"A There was nothing ever said that he would be incarcerated for only six months.
"0 Do you mean by that that there was nothing said by you?
"A I know of nothing atd by anybody that he would be incarcerated for only six months.
"Q You have not been present in the courtroom while the testimony was given, I take it?
"A No, sir."

EYMORTIT

"The Stolen Years" by Roger Touhy and Ray Brennan has been rupinval at the Bureau. It contains several references to the FBI, the most merchant of which contain allegations by Touchy that the FDI man responsible for Ms an mi trfuries incurred in 1933. The book is beinically an attempt to establish 3 as an manat bootlegger and a person victimized by a Chicago police cant in because of his activities in the bootlegging business. The charges Touhy mex male against the FBI prompted the Bureau to request Chicago Office to theroechily review all references to this matter. Chicago Office teletypes of 11-84 ami 23-50 indicate charges unfounded. Interrogation of Touhy by a doctor in 1834 reflected no charges or complaints by Touhy regarding his back. Touhy hae history of nervous condition and palsy. In civil suit against Director and ot here in 1952, Touhy charged a conspiracy to deprive him of constitutional rights, bat made mo mention of any physical abuses. Facts regarding physical condition al Touts set forth. Warden, Stateville Penitentiary, Joliet, nlinois, has complete physical record of Touhy during his long confinement, including $\mathbf{Z}$-rays, which he will heap if Bureau so desires. (2) That the attached teletype be sent to the Chicago Office instructing that office to request the Warden of the Stateville Penitentiary to retain all medical records and X-rays of Touhy.

Rosen to Director Memorandum
Re: Roger Touhy

DETAILS

This memorandum is submitted in response to the Director s inquiries concerning allegations made by Touhy in his book, "The Stolen Years," as to mistreatment by FBI Agents.
"THE STOLEN YEARS" BY ROGER TOUHY:
The Bureau has obtained a copy of "The Stolen Years" by Roger Touhy and Ray Brennan. This book contains several direct references to the FBI on pages 33, $40,46,47,113,118-122,124-125,128,193,226,254,261$, 264 and 266. The majority of the references to the FBI are general in nature; however, the mentions of the FBI on pages 118-122 and 228 are pertinent.

On pages 118-122, Touhy relates the series of events following the collision of his car with a telephone pole in Elkhorn, Wisconsin, in the Summer of 1933, which culminated with the charges against him and his associates for the kdopaping of William Hamm, Jr., in Saint Paul, Minnesota. Touhy relates that after having been taken from Elkhorn to Chicago in connection with the investigation, he was returned to Elkhorn where warrants charging the kidnaping of Hamm were read, and that following this the Government took him and his associates in chains from Elkhorn to the county jail at Milwaukee. He makes general references to physical and mental abuse as well as a claim that he was not permitted to consult with an attorney. Srecthe, the following paragraphs are quoted:
ant inw the jail in excellent physical shape. When I came out, I was 25 pounds lighter, three vertebrae in my upper spine were fractured and weven of my teeth had been knocked out. Part of the FBPs rehabilitation-of prisomers system, I supposed. All of the men who gave me the treatment were strangers to me.
"They questioned me day and night, abused me, beat me up and demanded that I confeas the Hamm kidnaping. Never was I allowed to reat for mere than half an hour. If I was asleep when a team of interrogators arrived at ny call, they woald alug me around and bang me against the wall. I trained myself to alem. for 20 minuten, and be on my feet for the questioners."

Rosen to Director Memorandum

Re: Roger Touhy
Touhy next refers to this alleged mistreatment on page 226 of his book in his narration of the difficulties of the time he apent in prison, claiming that his "souvenirs from the F. B. I. boys--spinal injuries--gave me hell. The prison doctors made $X$ rays and sent the plates to Chicago to be read by experte,"

Touhy's book in general appears to be an effort to free himself of the stigma of kidnaper. He engages in a recital of evtimis of his early life and how he was drawn into the bootlegging racket. He admits he was not a saint and nlaims that he never kidnaped, killed, robbed or stole and did not associate knowingly This where, although he accepted such people as unavoidable evils in connection with his union friends and their fight against the Capone mob. Touhy would have hip reader believe that he was an "honest" bootlegger who made a quality beer during prohibition days and endeavored to market his product in $2 s$ a legitimate manner as was possible under the prohibition laws. He relates various incidents whereby he incurred the enmity of Al Capone and members of his gang, which he would have the reader belleve eventually led to his being convicted of the kddnaping of John (Jake the Barber) Factor. It is also alleged that this was furthered because he incurred the enmity of former Chicago Police Captain Dan Gilbert when he embarrassed Gillbert during prohibition days.

Touhy presents in his book various arguments that the kidnaping of Factor was actually a hoax engineered by Factor in the futherance of his efforts to avoid extradition to England where he was wanted as a swindler, and that Touhy was brought into the case because of the enmity of Dan Gillbert. All of these arguments have been repeatedly aired by Touhy in his efforts to win release through court action during the past years and found by the courts to be without substantiation.

TOUHY'S PHYBICAL CONDITION:

As indicated above, Touhy had made the allegation that his back was injured by FBI Agents when they had him in custody in 1933.

It will be recalled that a film clip of Touhy being interviewed on his release on parole from prison was shown on NBC's Dave Garroway "Today" ahew on the morning of November 24, 1959. In connection with his future plans, Teutry made reference to his "physical condition" and indicated the FBI was reaponable for his apinal indury. He sald he did not know who the Agent was who was remponafle and added, "They don't introduce themselven when they are alugedy yous"

Roean to Director Memarandum

Re: Roger Touhy
HE FACTS:
In response to a Bureau request, the Chicago Office submitted a teletype on November 24 which indicated that a thorough review by the Chicago Office of the Hamm kidnaping case, the Factor kddnaping case, the Touhy escape file and other Touhy files to date has turned up only the following with reference to Touhy's physical condition.

A Chicago report dated 11-1-33 captioned 'William Sharkey, with aliases, et al; John Factor--Victim; Kidnaping" indicates Touhy admitted that he has the same nervous ailment which afflicted his brother Thomas (page 92 of Chicago report). In Chicago letter to Birmingham Office dated 12-2-33, it was stated that a doctor told a postal inspector that Thomas Touhy has palsy. In a memorandum dated 10-26-42, which apparently was a press release in connection with the escape of Roger Touhy, et al. from the Stateville Penitentiary on 10-9-42, described Touhy as having "tendency to jiggle his head nervously as he talke because of a one broken vertebrae." A memorandum in the Chicago tille of the Touhy case reflects an int erview of Touhy on 12-30-42 by Special Agents R.J. Driscoll and J. F. Hennessey, in which Touhy refused to answer questions because the FBI had mistreated him while in Federal custody in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Special Agent Driscoll, presently assigned to Chicago Office, advises that Touhy refused to enlarge this statement.

On October 24, 1952, Touhy filed a civil suit against the Director and others for $$ 1,500,000$ in damages, charging a conspiracy to deprive him of certain constitutional rights. In his complaint, Touhy made no mention of any physical abuse.

By teletype dated November 25, 1959, the Chicago Office indicated a further search of the files of that office located a copy of a letter from Touhy to his wife, in which Touhy stated, "I am feeling all right and my nerves are settled." (19.53)

Chicago report dated 2-15-34 in the John Factor kdinaping case mentioned that Touhy was given a mental examination in Cook County. A copy of the report of this examination made on December 7, 1933 reflects the followist:
"To the question, 'You are feeling all right?', Touky replied, 'All right.' Asted 'No complaints at all,' he said, 'No.' When asked, 'No operations or injuries,' Touhy answered, 'No. itt He stated he had no physical complaints, headaches or dissiness, but he is naturally nervous. The examiner, Br. Harry D. Hoffman, Director of Behavior Clinic of Criminal Court of Cook County, Dlinois, found no cranial nerve involvement, muscular power normal, and no signs of any abrasions or contusions. He noted that Touhy constantly gnawed his teeth and had marked tremor of facial muscles.

Rosen to Director Memorandum Re: Roger Touhy

A review of Touhy's medical history at Stateville Penitentiary on November 25, 1050, disclesed that Touhy's first complaint of the spine was made on Miy 3, 1934, when an X-ray showed old chip fractures of the fifth and aixth cervieal vertchrae. On the same date, a notation was made that spasmodic contraction of facial and nevk muscles is due to old trauma or infary. In an interThew whth the prison psychiatrist on May 6,1945 , the medical histery report shows that Tonhy said that "he had fractured neck gince I been arrested, wix weeks tortare. There was fracture about one or one and one-half inches long. Where there is dampness in air, I can feel it. I had a head twitch five or six years ago but it has improved." The psychiatrist was impressed that Touhy was a clever initridual, though not too bright intellectually but with a native shrewdness used often to get an advantage. It is also indicated that although Touhy was inclined to exaggerate his symptoms, he had some basis for neck symptoms. X-rays showed he has osteo arthritis or cervical spine which undoubtedly produces pain in dampness.

On November 10,1953 , in an $X$-ray request, Touhy claimed his back was fractured in 1933. The X-ray finding was minimal osteo arthritic lipping of bodies of cervical vertebrae. Medical progress reports in 1957 and 1959 show no injuries.

Warden Ragen of Stateville Penitentiary has offered to have the prison physician submit a medical report on Touhy if the Bureau desires one and will retain the X-ray pictures if the Bureau needs them. Normally, the X-rays are deatroyed after a prisoner is discharged.

Pomen to Director Memorandum Res Roger Touhy

for the Hamm and Factor kidnapings, there is little in Bureau files showing the early background of Touhy which could be used to show the public this individual's true character.

Since there is no basis in fact for Touhyes complaint about physical injury and since only 10,000 copies of this book have been printed to retail at $$ 4.50$ and which will probably not be reprinted, it is belleved advisable to tate no direct action in publicly refuting Touhyts allegations. To do so would again atir up this controversy and provide fodder for the press. It is believed that any request for a retraction from the National Broadcasting Company or a retraction from the publisher of "The Stolen Years" would only serve to add to the public interest in this book.

It was noted on an NBC radio program last night which carried a report emanating from Chicago that Touhy is again responsible for "bootlegging." The commentator based this comment on the fact that John Factor has publicly announced he intends to sue the publisher of Touhy's book for the libelous and slanderous statements it contains. As a result, according to the commentator, the book dealers bave put the book under the counter and are now "bootlegging" it.

The ubservations and recommendations set forth in this memorandum are concurred in entirel: ov the Crime Records Division.

CENTKAL RESEAKCH MATTEF
According to information carried in New Times, Vol. 1, (1-6-60) an English translation of captioned book will be available soon. Book is published by the State fublishers of Folitical Literature, Moscow, 1959.

You should be alert for Einglish translation of captioned book, and forward two copies of the translation to the Bureau, attention Central Research Section, when available.

Origin
The Book Review Control Desk was established in the Central Research Section in January, 1959, to serve as a focal point of information concerning book reviews at the Seat of Government and to eliminate duplication in the purchases of books and the number of reviews being conducted.

Scope of Responsibility
The responsibilities of the newly established Desk cover: (1) recommendations concerning books to be ordered for review, (2) recommendations concerning the Division which should conduct the review, and (3) maintenance of records of book review assignments pending, completed reviews, and other information pertinent to each review.

Adequacy of Instructions

On January 21, 1959, a memorandum was prepared for all Bureau officials and supervisors which set forth instructions concerning the handling of reviews and manner in which they were to be coordinated by the Book Review Control Desk. A follow-up memorandum was prepared for all Division heads on February 24, 1959, emphasizing the need for all supervisors to be alerted to and to familiarize themselves with the instructions. In November, 1959, the instructions were incorporated in the Supervisors' Manual. CDB:aml

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review Control Desk Evaluation

Control

A main control file (62-46855) was established to maintain record of all book reviews. This is checked monthly to insure that all Bureau supervisors handling reviews are complying with existing instructions. A card index system is maintained concerning each review showing the title, author, official who ordered review, Section to which review was assigned, and completion date. The index cards are maintained for a period of one year to resolve inquiries. Tickler copies of reviews conducted are maintained 60 days for reference purposes.

In regard to the purchase of books, the final decision, of course, rests with the Administrative Division which clears and approves the recommendation for the purchase of any book suggested for review.

Reviews Coordinated

During 1959, a total of 46 books was requested by Seat of Government personnel for review or reference. Forty-three books were reviewed and three retained for reference. Another 29 books were received at the Bureau from outside sources, five of which were reviewed and 24 deemed only of value for retention as reference material. At the present time, eight book reviews are in the process of being done, and one book is on order for review. It is interesting to note that in 1959, the Domestic Intelligence Division did 29 book reviews, 21 of which were done by the Central Research Section.

Over-All Value
The operation of the Book Review Control Desk is of value in that it:

1. Permits immediate determination as to whether anyone at the Seat of Government has done or is in the process of doing a book review
2. Eliminates duplication of purchases of books for review as well as duplication of reviews
3. Enables Seat of Government personnel to quickly obtain copies of book reviews for reference

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review Control Desk Evaluation

Cost of Operation

The establishment of the Desk has not added any significant cost to the Bureau's operations. The work was absorbed by combining the new function with that of the previously existing Publications Desk without any increase in personnel.

Further Action
The Central Research Section will continue to closely evaluate the work of the Book Review Control Desk to be alert for further streamlining procedures in its operation. At present, no changes are deemed to be warranted. In six months, another status report will be submitted.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev will probably go down in history as the "gravedigger" of the Communist regime in Russia in the judgment of a former colleague now considered the outstanding Soviet emigre authority on Stalinism.
Abdurakhman Avtorkhanov who moved in the highest Bolshevik circles at the time Josef Stalin was grasping power in the Soviet Union, believes with Molotov and Kaganovich that Khrushchev's de-Stalinization campaign will lead to "suicide."
This is the most starting conclusion in Mr, Avtorkhanov's new book, "Stalin and the Soviet Communist Party, A Stuay in the Technology of Power," to be published tomorrow by Praeger for The Institute for the Study of the USSR

Iversen minimizes communist influence on schools and concludes that communists have contributed little or nothing to American philosophy of education and seem to have left even less impression on educational methods. By implication, book is critical of various aspects of the operation of loyalty-security programs as well as congressional and state investigating committees. Nonderogatory references to the Director appear on pages 282 and 308. Allegation on page 287 that Director cooperated with Ellis Rubin, controversial former Florida Assistant Attorney General in field of Un-American Activities, not substantiated by Bureau files. Book Review: The Communists and the Schools By Robert W. Iversen

DETAILS:

Fund for the Republic Study
Captioned book, reviewed by Central Research Section, is one in a series of studies being prepared under the general editorship of Clinton $L$. Rossiter by the Ford Fund for tine Republic on communist influence in American life. Its purpose is to show the extent and success of communist infiltration into the American school system since the inception of the Communist Party, USA (CPUSA), in 1919.

Actually, the book can be divided into two sections. The first deals with the efforts of the communists--both students and teaciners--to use the American schools for their Soviet-controlled purposes. The second portion describes the numerous congressional investigations, in tine years following World War II, into communist infiltration of the American educational system.

Early Communist Activity in Schools

According to the autior, the American educational system was not initially an object of communist attention. Other sectors of society were deemed more expeditious and useful targets--tae more obvious centers of economic and political power. Communist activity at first was belated and improvised, and a Party policy on penetration of the schools was developed afterwards.

The communists began by encouraging children to chalk Marxist slogans on the sidewalks, to tangle with the Boy Scouts, to rebel against the autocratic teacher. Soon, however, they did a complete reversal and asked the "exploited" teachers to rid themselves of capitalist ideology. Separate "workers" schools were created to train the revolutionary elite (Party members) to overthrow capitalist society. At the same time, the communists began a campaign to gain control of the Teachers Union in New York City--Local 5 of the American Federation of Teachers (American Federation of Labor). A long, factional battle between the liberals and the communists in the Teachers Union resulted in communist domination of Local 5 by 1935 and complete control by 1938.

Communist 'Front" Exploitation of Teachers

With the advent of the great depression in the early 1930s and the adoption of the "united front" tactic by international communism in 1935, the

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: $\quad$ The Fund for the Republic
Book Review: The Communists and the Schools
By Robert W. Iversen

CPUSA decided that the teachers must be aroused to class consciousness and must be organized. The communists' first task was to exploit the advantage of their newly won position in the New York Teachers Union for the purpose of gaining control of its parent group, the American Federation of Teachers.

Even more important, however, was the decision to create a host of communist front organizationsor "transmission belts" through which "innocents," including teachers, could become involved in varieties of mass action and in which they would experience Party guidance. Many already existing front groups were expanded and their names changed.

According to the author, the fronts particularly appealing to teachers are divided into five categories:

1. Organizations designed for those attracted to the intellectual system of Marxism-Leninism, such as, the Jefferson School of Social Science in New York.
2. The "friends" groups catering to those who were attracted to the "great experiment" in the Soviet Union, such as, the Friends of the Soviet Union.
3. Groups organized to fight against war and fascism.
4. Special-interest groups--organizations to promote the interests of the Negro, the foreign born, the sharecropper, and the scientists.
5. "Defense" organizations, ranging from the relatively stable International Labor Defense to all the little ad hoc groups that arose in the wake of each lynching, et cetera.

That this "united front" campaign had some success may be judged from the Party's statement that 440 teachers joined the Party in 1938. Bella V. Dodd, former Communist Party member and legislative representative of the Teachers Union in New York City, has estimated that about 1, 500 teachers were members of the Communist Party. Pointing out, however, that this figure

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: $\quad$ The Fund for the Republic
Book Review: The Communists and the Schools By Robert W. Iversen represents an infinitesimal proportion of the million and one-half teachers in the country, the author observes that 'they tended to be concentrated in a few areas, leaving the schools as a whole relatively unaffected; their participation tended to be confined to the thirties, and, above all, they varied widely in the degree of their commitment and involvement in the movement. In no sense were they equally members of the 'conspiracy.' " (p. 362)

Communist Infiltration of Colleges
According to Iversen, the primary factor in the politicalization of the American college campus was the coming of the depression. Prior to 1930, there had been a steady increase in college enrollment, but college education was always expensive and possible for most only with heavy parental subsidy. Following the crash, one of the most expendable luxuries was a college education and in the first three years of the depression, enrollments took a sharp dip.

The young man who really wanted an education, however, had alternatives. For New York City residents, the most notable of these were the free municipal colleges. But these had already begun to become crowded and the depression pressures forced even more rigorous scholastic selection. The result was that the city colleges became a concentration of very bright students, but, more than this, they reflected the cultural uniqueness of New York City and presented a collegiate atmosphere distinctly different from that of the old-line Ivy League schools.

Most of the city college students were sons of Jewish immigrants; many came from an anti-Czarist--but Russophile--family background. They were fighting for an education despite the demands of depression-stricken homes, only to find that the college degree was no guarantee of a place in a depressionstricken society. The futility confronting the depression graduate was not confined to New York City--it was only more concentrated there and it was there that organized student rebellion took its most spectacular course.

Book Review: The Communists and the Schools By Robert W. Iversen

The youth work of the Communist Party was entrusted to the Young Communist League (YCL). The growing discontent among college students provided the YCL with new opportunities, and broad front organizations appealing to students were opened, the most important of which was the American Student Union (ASU). The greatest communist strength among students was probably in 1939, when the ASU boasted 12, 000 paid-up members. These 12,000 represent the peak of communist influence among America's thirty million students.

According to the author, the major factor behind the attraction of these students to communism was the "milieu--compounded of Depression, aggressive Nazism, threats of war, and a notably idealistic contemporary Communist line. . . The radicalism and experimentalism that has always been associated with student life led many to taste communism--it was what 'everyone was doing.' "

Noting the transient nature of most students'commitments, Iversen says that "it comes as no surprise that the radical student peace-strikers of the thirties were in the front lines in World War II and returned to settle in suburbia. For the most part, American students, like their elders, rejected communism, and the Communists found themselves 'miserable merchants of unwanted ideas.' Of the few who were attracted, for the most it was a student flirtation. For the remainder, the Communist experience led either to continued service in the party or to a political education that culminated in some variety of the sophisticated anticommunism that characterizes so many former student radicals." (p. 361)

Congressional Investigations of Communism in the Schools

The second portion of the book details the numerous investigations by congressional committees, in the years following World War II, into communist infiltration of the American educational system. This anticommunist campaign was articulated and elaborated by the "Hearst press, the American Legion, and the rural-dominated state legislatures." According to the author, "the ammunition for the attack has frequently been supplied by a bewildering web of persistent patriots who have made careers of dossier-building." ( $\rho$. 175)

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re : The Fund for the Republic
Book Review: The Communists and the Schools
By Robert W. Iversen

Iversen believes that the cold-war concern over communism in the schools was a reflection of the national frustration over the rise of communist power abroad. He maintains that the selection of the schools as a target was due, at least in part, to a widespread belief that a corps of communist teachers was engaged in instilling Soviet sympathy in the mass of American students while also indoctrinating an elite group to act as future Soviet agents. This alarming picture, he feels, was underscored when congressional investigators repeatedly stressed that Alger Hiss and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were "products" of American schools. Iversen adds, however, that the fact was overlooked that former Senator Jenner and other investigators were also 'products" of American schools.

According to Iversen, "this conception reveals an abysmal ignorance of the educative process. Students are not 'products' of the schools, and 'indoctrinating' them with an alien set of values is next to impossible.... If Communists were 'produced, ' it was not by American teachers." (p. 360)

Motivation Behind Some Communist Defectors

Some of the chapters deal with the motivation behind high-ranking members of the CPUSA who left the communist ranks and turned 'professional and semi-professional informers." Chapter 14, "The Congressional Confessional, " treats of those excommunists who were "redeemed" by testimony before the various congressional committees. According to Iversen, "full redemption" was finally attained by the witness when he consented to publicly identify his former associates in the communist movement.

Iversen describes in detail the history of Bella V. Dodd, former legislative representative of the communist-dominated Teachers Union in New York, whose disillusionment began with the ouster of Earl Browder in 1945. She was formally expelled from the Party in 1949 and subsequently testified on numerous occasions before congressional committees. Iversen claims that, at first, she was unable to state the exact Party line on education and the way it was transmitted to the teachers. Months later, however, "she had done her

Re: $\quad$ The Fund for the Republic Book Review: The Communists and the Schools By Robert W. Iversen homework, " and her testimony as to the Party line in education and its transmission to the teachers "was marked by assurance and total recall." Even later, "her testimony acquired a smooth flow in which questions of the committee and counsel simply came as annoying interruptions. Her confidence in the structure of her story and her command of detail left her free to add revealing ideological embroidery." Iversen concludes her story by saying that "Bella Dodd had fulfilled all the requirements of the congressional confessional. The hesitation and qualification that had marked her testimony soon after her break with the party had given way to a detailed and impassioned condemnation of the false faith and all its followers." (pp. 320, 322, 323)

Scientists and Communists

In Chapter 13, "Scientists and Communists," Iversen points out that the dominance of state interest in education has been recognized by the Federal Government. During World War II, however, due to federally-financed wartime research in the colleges, thousands of academic scientists were incorporated into the Federal bureaucracy. Controls were inevitable, he says, and so, too, was friction.

The passage of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 instituted a security program involving clearance and surveillance of personnel working on its projects, and thus introduced a new note into peacetime academic research. Iversen then discusses investigations by congressional committees of Soviet atomic espionage operations in the United States during and following World War II. In this connection, he goes into a detailed analysis of the case of J. Robert Oppenheimer.

Chapter 13 contains factual references to the Bureau. For example, on pages 293-294 Iversen refers to the investigation of the Radiation Laboratory at the University of California by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, and makes the following reference to the FBI:

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: $\quad$ The Fund for the Republic Book Review: The Communists and the Schools By Robert W. Iversen
"... The surveillance under which the scientists worked was incredibly thorough. Thus, when one of the scientists was audacious enough to have dinner with the Soviet consul in a San Francisco fish grotto in 1943, F.B. I. men were in the next booth with a wire recorder. The indiscretion never formed the basis for an espionage indictment, although it was the basis for dismissal. ..." (pp. 293-294)

References to the Director and FBI

Nonderogatory references to the Director appear on pages 282 and 308. The allegation, on page 287, that the Director cooperated with Ellis Rubin, controversial former Florida Assistant Attorney General in the specialized field of Un-American Activities, is not substantiated by Bureau files. Rubin was furnished only copies of the Director's articles and speeches. Factual references to the Bureau appear on pages $170,241,245,271,281,282,285,287,288,343$, and 346. In addition, the FBI is mentioned throughout Chapters 13 and 14 (pp. 289-331) in connection with individuals who have been subjects of Bureau investigations. It is felt that these references should be reviewed by the substantive desks in the Espionage, Internal Security, Subversive Control, and Employees Security Sections. (67-467635)

Clinton L. Rossiter

Clinton L. Rossiter, head of the study project on communist influence in American life which is being financed by the Ford Fund for the Republic, is chairman of the Government Department at Cornell University.

At the time these studies were first undertaken in 1955, Rossiter announced that former communists would be utilized along with other sources. This procedure was used in preparing the first book in the series, The Roots of American Communism, by Theodore Draper, which was reviewed by the Central Research Section on March 21, 1957. More than a dozen individuals who assisted in the book, The Roots of American Communism, had, according to Bufiles, communist affiliations at one time or another. (100-391697-460; Monograph, The Fund for the Republic, Inc., p. 96)

Conclusions

This is a lengthy ( 423 page) but extensively documented book which obviously required a tremendous amount of research. It is replete with factual material concerning the efforts of the American communists to infiltrate the American educational system both on a student and a teacher level since the birth of the Communist Party, USA, in 1919. More significant, however, is the position the author takes on the numerous postwar investigations by congressional and state committees regarding alleged communist penetration of the schools.

According to Iversen, the much-publicized hearings of the congressional investigators created an impression among most Americans that every sector

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont Re: $\quad$ The Fund for the Republic Book Review: The Communists and the Schools
By Robert W. Iversen
of society was riddled with communist conspirators, but the schools were singled out as the most sensitive sector and the most vulnerable to communist infiltration. Although the committees maintained that the problem of disciplining those educators who had admitted Party membership or who had taken the 5th Amendment was a matter for school authorities, he claims that the threat of adverse publicity "was sufficient to force many administrators to take action. The committees remained the judges of the adequacy and effectiveness of any action taken, and if a school was considered to have acted in accordance with committee standards, it was granted a sort of immunity from further public exposure." (p. 335)

In conclusion, Iversen minimizes the extent of communist influence on the American schools. He states the communists have contributed little or nothing to the American philosophy of education and seem to have left even less impression upon educational methods. The most serious aspect to date, according to Iversen, has been the establishment in the public consciousness of widespread doubt of the schools' ability 'to keep their own house in order." (p. 368)

In regard to communism generally, the author takes the attitude that 'Some maintain that communism is a cancer that eats away steadily at the vitals of an outwardly healthy society. In America one might better say that communism has acted as a vaccine, giving the patient a mild case of the disease--complete with fever--and thus immunized him against crippling attack...." (p. 368)

BACKGROUND:

On 1-22-60, the Director received captioned book as a gift from Vice President Richard M. Nixon. This book was published in 1954 by Henry Regnery Company of Chicago, Illinois. Vice President Nixon inscribed the book: as follows: "To J. Edgar Hoover who is such an intelligent advocate of some of the conservative principles set forth in this book. From his friend, Dick Nixon." By letter 1-22-60, the Director thanked Vice President Nixon for the book. The purpose of this memorandum is to set forth a brief review of this book, which is attached.

THE AUTHOR:
Bufiles contain no derogatory information concerning Russell Amos Kirk. You will recall that on 6-22-59, Mrs. Harry Overstreet called and advised you that in the latest issue of "National Review" Russell Kirk had written a "smear article" on her husband, Dr. Harry Overstreet, the purpose being to ruin sales of their book, "What We Must Know About Communism." It is noted we have had cordial relations with the Overstreets and have furnished them considerable assistance in connection with their books. (100-114575)

The book jacket describes Kirk as a native of Plymouth, Michigan. He attended Michigan State College and Duke University. He contributes to the leading journals of opinion in England and the United States and has written four other books.

REVIEW OF BOOK:
This book is 312 pages in length. There is no reference to the FBI or the Director in the book. There is no information in Bufiles regarding captioned brok. The underlying theme of the book is that the conservative believes that men and nations possess free will, and that if a nation or civilization falls into ruin, it was caused, for the most part, by failure of thriberagt and mind of the people.

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

He defines American conservatism as follows: (1) a belief in an order that is more than human, (2) an affection for variety and complexity and individuality, even for singularity, (3) a conviction that justice means "to each the things that go with his own nature," not a leveling equality, (4) a suspicion of concentrated power, and a consequent attachment to our federal principle and to division and balancing of authority at every level of government, (5) a reliance upon private endeavor and sagacity in nearly every walk of life, and (6) a prejudice against organic change, a feeling that it is unwise to break radically with political prescription.

Concerning leadership, Kirk believes a free society endeavors to afford to men of natural abilities every opportunity to rise by their own efforts, and resists the radical delusion that exact equality of station and wealth can benefit everyone.

Kirk terms talk of "fighting for democracy" in Indo-China as ridiculous when the people we support there are not democrats at all. He states we are not struggling to establish universal "democracy" or "capitalism" or "human rights." He feels our mission in the affairs of nations is not to undertake an eccentric crusade on behalf of these abstractions, but rather the practical task of repelling the menace of Soviet imperialism, and of conserving the freedom and justice and strength of the United States. Further, that we must hearten and help everyone abroad who stands for traditional rights, and respect and enjoy the differences which distinguish other cultures from our own.

In successive chapters, Kirk deals with the problems of the mind, heart, social boredom, community, social justice, wants, order, power, loyalty and tradition. He notes that the aim of education is not to make every man like every other, but to awaken the highest talents of the best persons among us. He hopes that none of us will become political Christians, but hopes we shall not be afraid to infuse Christian faith into politics.

He proposes: (1) renewing the power of religious faith, and piety, among the mass of men, (2) reviving the concepts of honor and dignity which gave motive to honest desire for emulation, (3) returning to individuals the responsibilities which bring a decent satisfaction and the duties of self-reliance, (4) reaffirming the right of men to what is their own, without injustice to others, (5) reminding modern society that security, though a good thing, is not a better thing than freedom, and (6) reawakening men's minds to the eternal contract of society--we do not live simply for ourselves, but to justify the faith and labor of our ancestors, and to transmit life and justice to our posterity.

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum

Kirk contends that the free will which God bestowed upon man was the power to choose between good and evil. He believes the world is governed by love | or by hate.

Deploring collectivism, uniformity and arid simplicity in today's society, Kirk calls for a return to true community, the union of men, through love and common interest. In this regard, he urges conservatives to defend the institutions of local government against a state consolidation of power. He seeks a humanization of urban life, bringing to the city man a sense of community.

Urging a return to true order in our society, Kirk notes that the decay of respect for law is the most obvious proof of the decline of order in our age. He believes there is such a thing as "creeping socialism" and contends that socialism never ceases to creep until it becomes totalitarianism. Kirk believes a faithful man is not of necessity a loyal one. "To produce loyalty, love must be added to fidelity." He further states, "Traditions are the wisdom of the race; they are the only sure instruments of moral instruction."

The Author
The book＂Quick Darkness，＂written by Elston J．Melton and published by the state Publimhing Company，St．Louis，Missouri，was reviewed by the Central Research Section after Melton sent an autographed copy to the Director together with a copy of a letter he had enclosed with his book to Nikita S．Khrushchev．His letter to Khrushchev shows that he has apparently been＂taken in＂by the Soviet propaganda of peaceful coexistence．

Melton has spent most of his adult years on weekly and small daily newspapers and for the past twenty－two years he has been owner of the Cooper County Record at Boonville，Missouri．He was president of the Missouri Press association in 193 and is now president of the Missouri State Board of Education，a policy－making group reiponsible for an outlay of some eighty million dollars a year in public schools below the college level．Bufiles contained no identifiable information on Melton and no ailtorinl ticklers on the Cooper County Record．

The Book

＂Quick Darkness＂by Elston J．Melton is a fictional Will Rogers＇type of storytelling by a small town newspaperman．It centers around the wealthiest family in town and the personal tragedies which engulfed the family during the span of a lifetime，coming to a climax curing the dark days of the depression（1930＇s）．In reality, the story depicts the life of Fowler "Babe" Granfield, the only child of the teen-age marriage of the beautiful daughter of the Janus family. The boy's father spends his life as an invalid in a Veteran's hospital and the mother, who becomes first a Hollywood actreess and then a dope addict, ends up in a mental institution. It is the story of a child being deprived through war and ambition of parental love and affection and left to his own devices while judgment and emotions were immature. It is a series of crimes by a juvenile who through wealth, influence, and the technicalities of law eacaped punishment until a stern judge had him incarcerated in a reform school. There follows the association with the hardened criminal, the fleeing from the reform school, a slaying, and the jury meting out the supreme penalty.

The Dedication

"Quick Darkness" is dedicated to Judge Sam C. Blair of the Missouri Circuit Court, Jefferson City, Missouri. Blair, apparently a very close friend of Melton, in the brother of Governor James T. Blair of the State of Missouri and is reportedly "the brains behind the Governor." (77-7536)

> 'THEDEEDERA PMorence HOAX' BY WICKLIFIF B. VANINARD, SR. BOOK REVIEW

BACKGROUND:

The captioned book, published by the Meador Publishing Company, Boston, Ma.s., is a cloth-bound 7th edition of a book formerly titled, "The Federal kes:" Corporation," which was referred to the Bureau as of possible interest.

THE AUTHOR:

Wickliffe B Vennard, Sr. has written numerous pamphiets Which have been extremely critical of the Federal Reserve System, the United Nations, various operations of the Federal Government and the administration. The Bureau has received numerous inquiries concerning Vennards writings, but there is no der ogatory information concerning him in Bufiles. Byltr dated $6 / 2 \boldsymbol{4}$ Vennard wrote congratulating the Director on his election to the Board of Directe of Acacia Mutuai Life Insurance Company and indicated that he had been the Emen, Manager for 24 years. The letter was a six-page handwritten resume of his betaty, concerning the Federai Reserve System and of the difficulties experienced by hle

REVIEW OF THE BOOK:

The book--276 pages in length--lays most of the ill a ferngyner inciudiag economical, wars, et cetera, to the December 28, 1913, passage at Federal Reser ve Act. Describing the Act as the money scheme of an alien, berumur it has bsen followed by 45 years of aubversion of the American dreade of peade, Hberty and fustice for all.

Momorandum for Mr. DeLoach "THE FEDERAL RESERVE ROAX"

The author states that the money gang has hand picked the presidential nominees of both parties for 45 years; that 20 years ago they played up Fascimen against communism, and today they are playing up Capitalism against communism, financing and controlling both sides.

MISNTION OF THE FBI:
There are several references to the FBI and/or the Director-none of them of a derogatory nature. The author lists what he considers 100 un-American and/or un-Constitutional matters brought to the attention of Senators while they were 'taking a nap on the floor. or absent, or they were too busy wh th social functions and committee meetings. or they were playing party politics instead of national welfare, or the majority leaned to influence." Four of these points referred to the FBI as follows:
"'24. Why did Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman ignore the FBI reports on infiltration? Why did Truman close the files? (p. 78)
"25. Why the rifts between the Justice Department and the FBI? (p. 78)
'41. Opposition to Congressional investigating committees, and closing of FBI files to them. (p. 82)
"91. Why not censure the man who promoted Harry Dexter White, who gave cur money plates to Rus sia, and advocated that the bulwark of Europe be demilitarized, de-industrialized, and cut up into small farms so as to make slaves of the most nationalistic nation on the face of the earth? We know who he is. He was warned by the FBI. (p.90)"

Refer ring to the world bank at Bretton Woods and Harry Dexter White, the author atates, "The sub-committee on internal security (September, 1954) found that the FBI had ma de seven reports on the Communitt underground activities of Harry Dexter White. Yet in spite of these reports to our government, White was kept in charge of the 'Monetary Fund.' (Harry Truman testiffed that the FBI requested that White be retained in such high positions so that he could be watched, but J. Edgar Hoover testified to the falsity of that statemert. $)^{\prime \prime}(\mathrm{p} .136)$

On page 164, the author speaks of the slowness of the Nation to recognize the communist menace and the international bankers and atooges who use communism as a meang to ride to power. He points out the tendency of the people to act anneyed at the "Paul Reverea" trying to warn them, and states, "Ine Irs made latalled reports on the peril to the Erecutive and Juetice Dopartmente $\boldsymbol{i n}$ the early 1920 's. Others have tentified voluminously since."

Memoramtum for Mr. BeLen ch "THE FEDERAL RESERVE HOAX"

OBSERVATIONS:
Vennard appears to be a "super patriot" and the fact that this book is in its 7th edition, and incorporates much of the information in numerexs pamphlets he has written over the years, indicates that he is quite intenge in hie beliefs concerning the dangers of the Federal Reserve Act. He is definitely against the Federal Reserve Act and for its repeal and in his zeal to put weroen his ideas be has tied in every event of the past half century from the Russian revolution of 1917 to the present national debt and including the bombing of Hiroshima, the United Nations, Judaism, segregation, et cetera.

RECOMMENDATION:
None. For information.

Memorandum to Mr. Rose

Kennedy comments, speaking about the Department, that the lack of action by the Justice Department was disappointing. He states some of the cases handled by the Department were lost "through incompetence." In this regard he cites that Senator McClellan, who was a witness at the perjury trial of James Cross (president of the Bakers Union, who was indicted for perjurious testimony before the Committee and acquitted) made no secret of the fact he was highly critical of the way Government attorneys presented the case.

With respect to the Hoffa wire tapping case, which was tried in New York City, Kennedy claims Carmine Bellino, Committee investigator, had furnished the U. S. Attorney handling the case information as to Hoffa's whereabouts which was pertinent to the trial of the case. He states that he asked the U. S. Attorney after the trial why (with the help of Belling's memorandum) he had not been able to get his dates and places straight. The U. S. Attorney allegedly made the admission that he had not read Bellino's memorandum.

RECOMMENDATION:

The above is furnished for informational purposes.

SUMMARY FROM RUSSIAN

"KOMMUNIST," NO. 1, January, 1960,

ASTOUNDED AMERICA
Page 113

"A principal thing which we have to achieve is to insure peaceful living conditions for all the people on earth," stated N. S. KHRUSHCHEV on the eve of his departure for the USA. These words determine the basic purpose of a historical visit of the head of the Soviet Government to America.

A book entitled "Face to Face 傅ith America," just published, vividly and comprehensively describes the sojurn of the head of the Soviet Government in the citadel of capitalism. It has been written by a group of Soviet writers and journalists who accompanied KHRUSHCHEV on his trip. The reader will find many comments and remarks and a number of discussions by KHRUSHCHEV which did not appear in previous reports of his visit to the USA.
"Face to Face With America" describes the atmosphere in which this visit took plage; it depicts the USA tensely watching the progress of/distinguished guest. At the same time, it contains a vivid and absorbing story about contemporary America and its working class, its Government and its leaders, and about the true masters of the count and executors of their will. CET: " REC -51 REC- 51

This book contains not only an excellentsrmaprigigeo of the progress of the visit but also an analysis of events preceding and accompanying it. "The act of invitimed. S. KHRUSHCHEV to the USA," write the authors, "is not a consequence of a Christian love toward one's neighbor, but result of necessity confronting America of today." KHRUSHCHEV's visit the the US was an outstanding event going beyond the framework of an ordinagy diplomatic practice.

The USSR and the US are the most powerful modern states, personifying two different social systems and the character of mutual relations between these two countries determines, by and large, mutual relations in the rest of the world.

Authors of the book recreate a picture of the ice of the cold war breaking and melting during KHRUSHCHEV's trip through the US and the atmosphere of distrust and suspicion yielding to the spirit of good will and hospitality His ready wit and his manner of approach to his audiences won the people. "KHRUSHCHEV has conquered America," unanimously admitted numerous press organs of the GUSA.

In reading about KHURSHCEEV's visit to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousements Union headquarters in San Francisco, we see that he feels himself particularly at home among workers and instantly finds a common language with them. "NIKITA SERGEEVICH," says the book, "literally blossomed out finding himself in the thick of the crowd, in the strong embrace of longshoremen. On all sides hands were stretched out for a friendly handshake and greeting were heard." Dock workers will probably long remember about this meeting and discuss it with their friends and families.

During his traveling from city to city, a warm interest toward the Soviet messenger of peace and friendship grew. In Pittsburgh, in spite of the late hour, thousands of residents came out on the highoay in order to see him. The "New York Times" reported that "Soviet Premier....caused the greatest gathering of people in all the city's history." "Baltimore Sun" noted: "This was more than a polite welcome; it was an open enthusiasm."

As a result of slander against socialism and Soviet system, write the authors, a great store of fossilized ideas and prejudices has accumulated in America. The arrival of KHRUSHCHEV and his remartable speeches dealt the heaviest blow to these prejudices. Words of an American woman journalist who a ccompanied N. S. KHRUSHCHEV are quoted in the book. She states that she has been always hostile to the Soviet Union and believed the things which were said about it. But after observing KHRUSCHEV and listening to his speeches she realized that "this is a real man and that he proposes serious and, what is more important, practicable, things. Believe it or not, but now this man arouses sympathy in me. I involuntarily contrast him to some of our leaders such as HERBERT HOOVER or CALVIN COOLIDGE, when they were in power, whose lips, constantly curved with contempt toward the people."
N. S. KHRUSHCHEV opened to many Americans a new world, the world of socialism. He convincingly and clearly explained in his speeches that socialism is the most progressive system answering the interests of the broadest strata of the population. Before listeners were unfolded majestic perspectives of a future communist society.

It is not easy for the people to change their. convictions, particularly if we consider that for decades they were being scared by stories about communism. However, there is no doubt that the trip of N. S. KHRUSHCHEV through the United States became associated in the minds of average American people with their growing interest in socialism and in the causes of outstanding successes of the Soviet people in so short a period. The truth penetrated the mends of millions of Americans that socialist society is capable of developing remarkably fast and that, by its very nature, it is not interested in annexations of foreign territory or in wars.

Throughout his visit, the head of the Soviet Government firmly and patiently explained Leninist principles of a peaceful coexistence. $K H R U S C H E V$ convincingly demonstrated that in conditions of a peaceful coexistence, both the armament race and maintenance of large armies become unnecessary.

The head of the Soviet Government made a vivid speech in the U. N. in which he made a proposal for a universal and complete disarmament. In the entirebistory of the United Nations Organizations there never was heard a speech of any political leader which would produce such a great impression, assert old members of the UN staff. But, perhaps, even a greater impression was produced outside the walls of the UN: a huge stream of letters and comments of the world press was the world's response to the speech of the head of the Soviet Government.

The book, "Face to Face With America" quotes from a letter of two American women - Mrs. EATENTNN and MRS EDNA GSLVIA (both spelled phonetically.) This speech should enter history as one of the greatest statements made by man," they write. $\qquad$
Peaceful coexistence opens a broad scope for the development of business contacts between countries and, in particular, for activation of the international trade. While in the US, KHRUSHCHEV often had to meet with businessmen.

According to XKKERMAN, Executive Director of the Bconomi $C$ CIub af New York, people were striving for inuitations to a dinner in honor of KHRUSHCHEV sponsored by the club, as "the hungry people fight for bread..... Judging by accepted invitations, we shall have the greatest gathering of prominent businessmen which had ever taken place under one roof."

This was not an ordinary curiosity bst a desire to learn what $N$. S. KHRUSHCHEV would tell with regard to development of Soviet-Americon relations and perspectives for the broadening of contacts between the East and West.

This shows that not only average Americans but representatives of business circles as well begin to realize that armament race threatens with u war, disastrous to capitalism, and should be replaced by a policy leading to disarmament and broad international cooperation.

A change in attitude involving the broadest circles of American society frightens adherents of the cold war - armament kings and (political) leaders who carry out their will. Certain individuals were given instructions to "outarguesKHRUSHCHEV or die." There were repeated attempts at the dinner at tble Economic Club of New York and during KHRUSHCHEVAs meeting with the leaders of Americanclabor unions, wherdeEEUTHER and other labor bureaucrats staged a vulgar farce. Walter

The book describes KHRUSHCHEV's meeting with labori union Ieaders, which they attempted to carry out according $V$, to a previously predetermined plan. REUTHER had a large folio in front of him and unabashedly read his questions and answers from it. Other leaders were also armed. withe; pieces of paper. And yet, all this cunningly conceived but at the same time, rather naively stupid plan, was swept away by KHRUSHCHEV who took over the initiative and put in the center of discussion basic problems of vital interest to the working class of all countries; the problems of stopping the armament race, the new Soviet disarmament proposals, and the problem of liquidation of international tensions and insuring a friendly cooperation between the countries.
( On meeting such people, KHRUSHCHEV boldly opposed them and came out a winner. He showed a historical inevitability of the triumph of communism and downfall of capitalism, rebuffed all hostile attacks against the Soviet Union and demonstrated the advantages af socialism.

The tactics of "outarguing KHRUSHCHEV or dying," were defeated.

While in the US, KHRUSHCHEV felt the support of the Soviet people, for this visit was an expression of their will. Tens of thousands of letters and telegrams were sent to KHRUSHCHEV. Only a small portion of these messages has been published in the book but it gives an idea of how the people evaluated this unprecedented visit.

Over three months have passed since the time of KHRUSHCHEV's visit in America, but this is an event over which time has no power. It combined in itself too many hopes and high principles to be easily forgotten by the people.KHRUSHCHEV's visit to the US was not an isolated fact. but a "victorious result of appolitical line of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Soviet Government, and a heroic work of the Soviet people illuminated by the light of great ideais," states the book: "The world has not only changed; it is continuing to change. And a brief Camp David Communque is only a partial result of the past and only the opening line of a story which history intends to record on its pages in the second half of our turbulent century.".

The book, "Face to Face With America," says the reviewer, "helps better to understand and evaluate historical significance of the visit of N. S. KHRUSHCHEV to the United States, and to understand the profound theses on a peaceful coexistence and economic competition of the two sustems expressed by him. This work, successfully combining elements of newspaper reporting and scientific research, will, undoubtedly, find a wide and grateful reading public in our country and beyond its borders."

Manths which have passed since the trip of $\bar{N} . ~ S$. KHRUSHCHEV to the USA clearly demonstrate that tremendous forces have been put in motion which dayby day lead the mankind away from the "brink of war" toward which aggressive forces of imperialism were pushing it.

"DILLING ER" BY SAUL COOPER BOOX REVIEW

Date: 3-60

RACRGROUND:

By letter of 216-60, Christopher W. Wilson, Vice Presídent and General Counsel, The First National Bank of Chicago, Chicago, Hlinois, forwarded the above-captioned book to Director and asked for suggestions to prevent further distribution of book since it contains account of robbery of his bank which actually never occurred. SAC Chicago was requested to have Agent contact Wilson and advise him that Bureau could not comment on matter. A check of the book reflected that it contained several inaccuracies about the FBI. The purpose of this memorandum is to set forth a review of book.

AUTHOR AND PUBLISHER:

"Dillinger" by Saul Cooper was published by Hillman Periodicals, New York in 1959. Cooper is not identifiable in Bufiles. Hillman Periodicals has a poor reputation in its field, specializing in publishing cheap, sensational-type livarature.

REVEW OF THE BOOR:

NOT RFCORDED
176 MAR 211960

"Dillinger" is a 144-page, paper-backed book which purports to be an account of the gangster's career. Definitely a dime-store novel, it is poorly written and tends toward cheap sensationalism. Its appeal would be extremely limited.

The author has utilized fictitious names, time sequences and locations throwghout the book. Accounts of robberies of a Dalesville, Indiana, bank and of The First National Bank of Chicagd are both fictitious. The author plays up Dulinger's affair with a Peggy Alesander (probably Evelyn Frechette, Dillinger's marnour.) Dillinger's arrest by local police in Dayton, Ohio, and his subsequent orcaperrom a Lima, Onio, fail, as well as a later arrest in Tucson, Arizona, and hin motorlous escape frem the Crom point, Homa, jail are recounted. The boos ches further with Dillifros's escapea after cun battlen with the law in St. Paul and

MENTION OF FBL:

Pages 62-63 state that Marvin H. Purdy, Chief of the FBI Chicago Office and Sam Crowlog, his subordinate, were about to open a case on Dillinger, based on information that Dillinger after his Lima, Ohio, jail break had crossed the state line in a stolen car.

Actually, of course, Samuel Cowley was placed in charge of the investigation of this case and was not subordinate to Purvis. Also, the Bureau entered the case after Dillinger's Crown Point, Ind. jall break, not after the Lima, Ohio, jail break as stated in the book.

Pages 71-75, 80-82 relate that just after Dillinger's escape from the Lima, Ohio, jail, Crowley contacted Martin Zaplinsky of the Dalesville, Ind., police force, made him "an honorary G-man" and requested his help in locating Dillinger. Zaplinsky immediately arranged for Crowley to meet a Mrs. Ann Savory who was willing to help trap Dillinger through his girlfriend, Peggy Alexander, if Crowley would promise to help her fight deportation proceedings. The author infers that Crowley hinted to Rifs. Savory that he would like to discuss the matter at one of the "exotic spots around town at offibeat hours."

Here the author is obviously referring to the contacts Cowley and Purvis had with Sergeant Martin Zarkovich, one of two East Chicago, Ind. officers helpful to the $T B I$ in this case. These officers actually brought Mirs. Anna Sage to the Agents' attention only a day before she led them to Dillinger at the Biograph Threater.

Pages 112-116 reflect that Mrs. Savory contacted Crowley and furnished information that Dullinger and his girliriend were at a certain address in St. Paul. Purdy then sent a coded message to the RHinneapolis-St. Paul Ofice who had the apartment covered by Bureau Agents and St. Paul detectives. In the gun battle which followed Dillinger, his girlfriend and Harry Pierpant escaped.

Actually, the information concerning Dillinger's whereabouts in st. Paul wed furnished to the St. Paul Office by a manager of a St. Paul motel. Also, Bomer Van NLeter was with Dillinger in St. Paul, not Plerpont as indicated in the book.

Pages 121-125 tellw of the Little Bohemia Lodge raid. The author states that Purdy, Crowley and Chicago Office Agents proceeded to the Lodge and set up a surveillance. He related that Agents fired at three men outaide the Lodge when they failed to heed Purdy's command to halt. Two of the three men, who proved to be imnocent victims, were moptally wounded. The author gees on to state that three FPBI Agenta were killed by "Boby Face" Nelson at a nearby residence. The author stasen thas the entire gang, including their women companions, successfully escaped.

The author has again misstated facts in his description of Little Bohemia. For example, Cowley had not even entered the Dillinger case as yet. Also only one man was accidentally killed by Agents; the two others were wounded. Only one Agent was lillied at the nearby residence; another Agent and a local officer were wounded. Dillinger's women companions were captured in the raid, contrary to the author's statement.

Pages 138-144 relate the story of the trap set for Dillinger at the Biograph Theater. The author states that Agents, led by Purdy and Crowley, stationed themselves outside the threater. By prearranged signals Rurdy and Crowley pointed out Dillinger to Agents who fired at Dillinger and dilled him. The author states that Agents, who wanted no help from local police, chased away two Chicago police officers who happened to come loy the Theater.
 nctivaities himself. Also officers of the East Chicago Police Department agisted liti Agents in the trap set at the Biograph Threater.

You will recall the "Washington Evening Star" of 1-24-60 mentioned seven booklets to be issued in preparation for the Conference at the White House between March 27 and April 2, 1960, dealing with the problems of youth. The Director noted: "We should get copies as they are issued and analyze them and see if figures tally with our crime statistics. H." "The Nation's Children" (three volumes) is the second publication in the series of seven and was ostensibly planned to provide the delegates of this conference with materials outlining the major developments in the field of children and youth since the 1950 conference. In addition, it is aimed at providing a basis for future activities. The three volumes making up this set are (1) "Tho $\begin{gathered}\text { Family and Social Change," }\end{gathered}$ (2) Development and Education" and (3) Problems and Prospects." Each of these will be dealt with separately.

"The Family and Social Change" is a compilation of ten articles by various sociologists, Doctors and other writers concerning the changing role played by the family in the move from a rural to an urban economy. It points out the ailments experienced by the family in this farreaching readjustment. Employment, patterns of consumption and leisure all have abr uptly changed. The impact of these changes on the urban areas contributed to the suburban growth which in turn created other problems. The rapid absorption of new families, facilities for the education of their children and adequate transportation all became acute items. The cities deprived of the bulk of their middle-income families still continued to grow but principally by the addition of low income families which were unable to assume the same tax burden of their predecessors.

DETAILS:

"The Family and Social Change is composed of ten essays which cover a wide multitude of topics dealing with the family's role in social change. These essays were prepared by sociologists, a historian, anthropologist, Doctors and religious leaders.

ANAL YSIS OF "THE FAMILY AND SOCIAL CHANGE":

The ten essays are:
(1) "From Frontier to Suburbia" by Foster Rhea Dulles points out that at the turn of the century the farm and the small town was the major influence in shaping our American way of life, whereas, today this role has been preempted by the burgeoning suburbs. The many influences on our life brought about by urbanization are cited, such as increased recreation, and use of automobiles.
(2) "Demographic Trends and Implications" by Eleanor H. Bernert is a statistical analysis of the population trend within recent years. Miss Bernert cites the reversal of the declining birthrate of the 1930 's as a principal factor in the rapid growth of metrepolitan areas. She comments that one frightening consequence is that in $60^{\prime}$ 's the schools of the Nation will have to absorb approximately 15 million additional pupils. Several statistical categories are discussed including the increase of children living with broken families and the increase in the number of working mothers with minor children.
(3) "The American Family in the Perspective of Other Cultures" by Conrad M. Arensberg. This essay discusses what is universal and what is unique about the American family in contrast with the families of other societies. He describes the American family as largely restricted to the father, mother and minor children in contrast with the larger families of the Far East where the kinship system is used.
(4) "The American Family Today" by Reuben Hill. Mr. Hill, who claims he is a family sociologist, believes the family to be suffering from "growing pains, " which are normal symptoms of reorganization following adjustment to the new industrial-urban society which as developed rapidly since the turn of the century. He comments that everyone has discussed the role of the family and agrees it is "ailing," for the most part these writers base their views on a limited number of observations and are governed by their personal prejudices. In the transition from a rural to an urban economy, the family ceased to be a producer of goods. As a consequence, the father who was formerly the authoritarian foreman, left the home and made the living elsewhere. This he claims began the decrease of selfsufficiency.

(5) "The Changing Negro Family" by Hylan Lewis points out the new task facing fegro families in our society in preparing its members to live in a desegregated world. The impact of rapid urbanization, the percentage of illegitimate births among Negro families, and the fears experienced by middle class Negro families that low class families are harming their position, are all discussed at length.
(6) "A Healthier World" by Doctor George Rosen gives a panorama of medical advances since the turn of the century and points out that the main problems facing our society today are those of human malformation and mental health. These are a far cry from the challenges before us at the turn of the century when we are faced with conquering the killer diseases.
(7) "Growing Up in An Affluent Society" by Moses Abramovitz describes the changes that have taken place in employment, consumption of goods and leisure within the past 50 years. There has been a dramatic shift from jobs of direct manipulation and production to jobs which are concerned with organization and regulation of production and distribution. This has brought about a softening of the class divisions. As a result, there is higher income, fewer hours and more leisure time. This has intensified family life and has allowed the father to spend more time with his family than ever before.
(8) "The Impact of Urbanization" by Jean Gottman continues the discussion of the profound changes in our society brought about by the decline of the rural economy and the rise of industry accompanied by urbanization. Because of this, statistics show that more than 90 per cent of society lives by non-farming pursuits and therefore the impact on the cities of our Nation is tremendous. More and more/our children are born and reared in suburban areas. The bread,winner of the family earns his income in the city and requires many of its services but is not taxed because his domicile is located elsewhere. The cities have found that the population increase is in low income families who make a poor tax base. The problem in the suburbs is that the increase in population has been so rapid that facilities cannot keep up with demand. This is particularly true in the field of education.
(9) "The Place of Religion in American Life" by the Very Reverend Monsignor Raymond J. Gallagher, Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum and Reverend Doctor William J. Villaume expresses the conviction that "pointless differences which now dissipate the strength of religious influence in our country" should be eliminated. They state there is an opportunity for religion to play an active role in strengthening contemporary life.
(10) "The New Leisure" by August Heckscher describes the increase in leisure as one of the most startling changes of the past decade. Because of the higher standard of living and more freedom, the very nature of leisure has changed. In earlier times leisure consisted of conversation, dancing and theater-going whereas today our citizens are active participants in sports such as bowling and golf. This has made leisure a prominent item in our economy as this change has made it an expensive item.

"THETUNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE"

BY WALTER S KBOWEN AND HARRY EDWARD 升EAL BOOK REVIEW

BACKGROUND:

The "Indianapolis Star" of 3-20-60 carried an article by L. Md entitled "Secret Service Battles Crime, Politics, FBI, " which purports to be a review of the captioned book, but is mostly devoted to criticism of the FBI. As you will recall, you wrote Mr. Robert P. Early, Managing Editor, on 3-25-60, concerning this article and pointed out that "L. M. Hunt" is possibly identifiable with Lesteryint who has been openly antagonistic toward the FBI for several years. Below is a brief review of this book which is attached.

THE AUTHORS:

Walter Scotyowen and Harry Edward Neal are retired veteran Secret Service officials. Bowen was first private secretary to the Chief of the Secret Service, then its official Historian by Congressional appointment. He retired in 1948 following a career which spanned nearly forty years. Neal joined the Secret Service at the age of 20 as a stenographer and spent 31 years in the Service, retiring as Assistant Chief in 1957. He is also the author of numerous stories in such mayazines as the "Saturday Evening Post," "Cosmopolitan," "Esquire," "Pageant," and "Coronet." In addition, he has written eight books in the young adult field.

A check of Bufiles reflects no indication of any correspondence or contact with either of these men during or since their association with the Secret Service.

THE BOOK:
"The United States Secret Service, " published by the Chillon Company of Philadelphia and New York, is a 196-page history of the U. S. Secret Service since its organization in 1865, setting forth highlights of past investigations, brief background and character sketches of each of its 13 Chiefs, and the problems and difficulties faced by each. Although the authors have covered nearly 95 years of the Secret Service's operations in less than 200 pages, the book, nevertheless, is extremely well written and contains many interesting and humorous incidents.

The Chilton Company also publishes commercial journals, and articles by the Director have appeared in many of these; such as the "Commercial Car Journal," "Distribution Age," and "The Jewelers' Circular-Keystone."

MENTION OF THE FBI:

The book contains numerous references to the FBI, none of which appear to be of a derogatory nature.

Page 83 refers to the transfer of 8 Secret Service Agents "to the Department of Justice on July 1, 1908, forming the nucleus of an investigating force that, years later, was to become the Federal Bureau of Investigation. " (Our files reflect that on July 26, 1908, 9 Secret Service employees of the Treasury Department were appointed Special Agents of the Department of Justice and these, together with 25 others, constituted the organization of the Bureau of Investigation.)

Chapter 11, entitled "Teapot Dome," on page 99, quotes a letter from Secret Service Chief William H. Moran to a Secret Service Agent at Pueblo, Colorado, which states: "We have learned that you are being followed by agents of the Bureau of Investigation and the Burns Detective Agency, who seek to ascertain the progress and scope of your investigation. . " (A quote from the Whitehead book says: "Ironically, while Bureau agents were being used to protect civil rights in Louisiana and other places, William.J. Burns and Jess Smith were sending men to spy on members of Congress who were then demanding investigations of reported corruption in the Harding Administration--corruption that had included the infamous 'Teapot Dome' scandal. '")

In the final chapter, "The Secret Service--Then and Now," the authors refer to legislation sought by the Secret Service in 1950-1951 which would define in permanent law the powers and duties of the service. The authors state that there was opposition from the Department of Justice to a part of the language which authorized the Secret Service to detect and arrest persons committing offenses 'against the laws of the United States relating to the Treasury Department and the several branches of the public service under its control." The Justice Department argued that this language authorized Secret Service to investigate such matters as bribery and corruption in the Treasury Department, which were within the jurisdiction of the FBI. The authors point out that the Justice lawyers were unable to point to a single instance in which there had been any jurisdictional conflict between the FBI and the Secret Service, or any single case in which the Secret Service had ever made investigations of bribery or corruption since the FBI was established.

The Justice Department subsequently, so the authors state, succeeded in having the Secret Service law amended, striking out all the language to which Justice objected, after which a "Memorandum of Understanding" between the Justice and

Treasury Departments was drafted to "supplement" the law which defined the Secret Service powers and duties. The memorandum provided that the FBI would have authority to investigate any Federal offense involving an officer or employee of the Treasury Department or its constituent agencies, and stated that as soon as the Treasury had any suspicion or notice of any such offense it should immediately notify the FBI and turn over full information on the matter. The memorandum also required that the Treasury Department issue instructions accordingly to its officers, "such instructions to be submitted to the Department of Justice for comment prior to their issuance." Secret Service suggested to the Secretary of Treasury that Treasury also be given an opportunity to see any instructions issued by the FBI to its officers in connection with the memorandum. The suggestion was not adopted--but all Treasury instructions were submitted to the Department of Justice. (pp. 190-193)

While the above criticism, of course, pertains to the Department of Justice and not to the FBI and as a matter of policy we do not comment regarding legislation, it is noted that we did feel that the broad terminology of the Treasury Department bill might serve as justification for Treasury to assume jurisdiction over such matters as bribery, theft of government property, et cetera. (66-2252-282)

OBSERVATION:

As of particular interest, it is noted on page 179 that when the present Chief, U. E. Baughman, was offered the position of Chief of Secret Service (1949-); the authors quote him as replying, 'Id like to make one condition, Mr . Secretary. Id like your assurance that every appointment in the Service, and every promotion, will be based strictly on merit, without any political factors. "

CONCLUSIONS:
The Bur eau presently enjoys favorable relations with U. E. Baughman, Chief of Secret Service, and with the Service generally, although incidents do occasionally arise in the field. The book, while perhaps slightly critical of the Department of Justice, makes no derogatory references to the FBI itself. Hunt's review of the book is a complete distortion and it, would appear that, in addition, he has substituted the FBI where the authors refer to the Justice Department.

RECOMMENDATION:

For information only, since Hunt's antagonism to the Bureau is well known and you have already written to Mr. Early of the "Indianapolis Star" concerning Hunt's distorted review.

 OF CROWDS" BY J. P. CHAPLIN BOOK REVIEW S

BACKGROUND:

By letter dated 2-25-60, the SAC, Los Angeles, advised that the abovecaptioned book had been brought to his attention by Mr. Coulter Irwin of Long Beach, California, who indicated the book was critical of the FBI. Mr. Irwin stated he was prompted to bring this book to the attention of the SAC in view of the recently published apologies by the Regents of the University of California in connection with an improper question concerning the FBI. (Check of Bufiles reflects no references identifiable with Irwin.)

THE AUTHOR:
According to "American Men of Science", the author, Dr.James Patrick Chaplin is a member of the Department of Psychology of the University of bermont. Chaplin was born received a B.A. degree from the University of New Mexico in 1940 and his M. S. in 1941. He was a fellow ofi the University of Illinois 1946-47 and received his Ph. D. in Psychology in 1947. During World War II, Chaplin served as a psychologist in the Aviation Cadet Program . A check of Bureau indices reflects no record identifiable with Chaplin.

THE BOOK:
The captioned book is a paper-back edition published by Ballantine

Jones to DeLoach Memorandum
The author states that the key to world problems lies in understanding human nature and concludes that "until we have the key to the understanding of human nature, our programs will continue to be dictated by expediency; war hysteria and credulity, not reason, will hold sway as they always have."

Chapter 4 entitled "Bolsheviks, Bombs and Babbitts" concerns the so-called Palmer raids and, according to the author, resulted from hysteria attendant on the discovery of more than a dozen bombs earmarked for some of the country's most prominent citizens, including Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer. These bombs got no further than the post office because of insufficient funds; however, the person or persons responsible were never identified. Shortly thereafter, the Attorney General's house was bombed and then, according to the author, the Attorney General's hysteria knew no bounds. It is noted that no where in this chapter is the Director or the Bureau mentioned.

MENTION OF THE FBI:

There are several references to the FBI and/or the Director--some of which are rather critical. Those references of a derogatory nature are set forth below:

In Chapter 8, "Celestial Crockery" the author refers to a project initiated by the Air Force to deal with the increasing flow of reports of unidentified airborne objects. He states that Air Force personnel were soon augmented by fastronomers, psychologists, physicians, physicists, meteorologists,"and representatives of the dread Federal Bureau of Investigation." (Page 121).
