-- VEJA MAGAZINE, BRAZIL (Jan. 25, headline of a two-page article showing U.S. servicemen walking in front of destroyed buildings in Port-au-Prince): "Better with them, impossible without."

--CHOSUN ILBO NEWSPAPER, KOREA (Jan. 25): U.S. involvement in overseas natural disasters is a 40-year-long humanitarian tradition. . . In a disaster-stricken area, the military is more systematic and effective in carrying out a relief operation than any other group."

-- EXPRESSO NEWSPAPER, PORTUGAL (Jan. 24): "In critical moments of the history of mankind, over the last 100 years, the United States is, in fact, the indispensable nation. Sometimes for bad reasons and, other times, as in Haiti, for good reasons."
