Dear Huma,

As you start preparing to move on to life after the State Department, I wanted to say thank you. The small things you did, and the personal touch of the Secretary, always made me feel appreciated. Despite the hectic pace of the life you all live, you all genuinely care about the people around you and it shows. I hope that wherever you go next, we keep in contact and that I meet more people like you and the rest of the team as life's journey continues.

I don't know if you remember that, but when we were in El Salvador for President Funes' inauguration, I missed [ ] As they are both big fans of the Secretary, I asked you if she might sign her name on a card for them. You quickly said yes, and when you turned the card back to me the following day it had a beautiful message inside both congratulating them and telling them how proud they should be [ ]. And when the Secretary boarded the plane to head to Honduras, she told me that once she left, I should be sure to call [ ] and wish them a [ ] from her as well. That card is framed (with the inside message copied and next to it) and on the wall in [ ] with a photo of me and the Secretary beside it. [ ]

Thank you not only for making that moment happen, but for helping me feel like I mattered not only as an employee but as a person.

I hope that the Secretary is recovering well, and that you and the entire team and your loved ones have a 2013 filled with good health and happiness.

Best regards always,
Jason
