From a political standpoint I think the Cyprus call for an EU meeting cost Spain this election. As I said in an earlier email it fed right into Brazil's Need for G77 solidarity...pushing enough of the G77 votes to Graziano.

Second round voting completed we are now waiting for the results.

I congratulated each candidate.

I had a particularly good exchange with Brazil. I invited DaSilva to attend the women's side event...win or lose. He committed to attend and said he saw it as the first opportunity to work together with the USG. I shared with Patriota my comments to you all...regarding our great exchanges. His response included telling me Tom Shannon is a wonderful and professional Ambassador with whom he has a good and strong working relationship.

Any opportunity for Spain to call a larger meeting (even if informally)? Nerissa

The Europeans just objected to the break for the G77 to meet. Legal counsel said can't interrupt a ballot because no ballot has been called then a break.

The European Union just played into Brazil's hand.

By calling for a G77 vote Brazil is going to try and solidify them behind their candidacy.

Before the voting on the second round Iraq (with 6 votes) has withdrawn.

Austria with 10 votes has also now withdrawn.

Please note Brazil just called for a G77 group meeting before the next ballot.

So there will now be a 30 minute vote before the next ballot
