[redacted] I was at the Acumen 10th anniversary dinner -- some 400 people from 20 countries. They did an amazing mural timeline (that's also in their annual report). I was delighted as I walked the wall and marveled at the milestones to arrive at a great photo of you: your mention of Acumen in a speech was one of the markers the Acumen team chose to include in highlights of Acumen's growth and "growing up".

I think the world of Jacqueline and Acumen, and it struck me that your inclusion in their story is a good example of the rippling impact every encounter you have and every talk you give truly has. I may see it almost more than you because I'm "on the ground". The Acumen celebration was astonishing in so many ways -- I really am thrilled to be associated with them.

Jacqueline actually got the "patient capital" term from Ron Grzywinski, and the flourishing of Acumen and so many other endeavors Ron and Mary encouraged and advised reminds me that while SBK may no longer be an operating bank holding company, its legacy continues its influence.

I'm coming over to State this afternoon to see Kris and Lala re State Global Impact Investing Summit. It's always fun to be in the building and to think with no little awe and gratitude about all you're doing.
