Message Headers:

The message header area is a large rectangle containing numerous redacted text boxes. The boxes are arranged in several lines, with varying lengths and positions. Some boxes are centered, while others are left-aligned or right-aligned. The redaction covers the entire content of these boxes, leaving only their outlines visible. The boxes are distributed across the upper and middle portions of the header area, with a significant gap at the bottom. The overall layout is sparse due to the extensive redaction.
