Jake,

I am in Israel for the week and had a private dinner with YM and his friend tonight. It was a useful meeting and we discussed our efforts at prevention of AM's push in NY--and alternatives if our efforts fail to head it off or failing that postponing it. While YM's friend is under pressure to respond very forcibly if AM proceeds, we discussed the consequences of such a move. He gets it but is constrained in the current political environment. He hopes to avoid where this could lead, and favors using others to create an explanation to postpone for AM. Recognizing that this too could fail, he is open to mitigation measures but feels that they need to provide an explanation for him that his country is not vulnerable after such a new status has been achieved. He wants YM to come and urgently discuss possible mitigation measures—assuming our current efforts fail—and would like him to come see the Secretary on Tuesday. He would be there on Tuesday and then go meet David in Europe on Wednesday. I do think such discussions could be useful because they allow us to try to minimize what I think could a lose-lose situation that is likely to unfold otherwise. Dennis
