Hillary,

I am VERY glad you're addressing the Global Philanthropy Forum week after next. I'm been involved with GPF since inception; Jane Wales has pulled off something quite special; not a conference but a convening of philanthropists with people doing outstanding work that spurs development and reduces poverty. Many important collaborations and partnerships spring out of the informal, off-the-record, no-solicitation setting she creates for a mix of HNW individual/family philanthropists and more established foundations. The Forum has drawn a number of HNW individuals into becoming significant, focused philanthropists.

I hope you'll talk about the importance of private efforts supplementing government policy and development assistance, and reaching where governments sometimes cannot go.

So exciting to see all you are doing!

Jan--thx for your feedback. We are balancing so many competing difficult factors. We'll do our best. And, by the way, Margaret is a dream. Thx for that too. Happy Easter! H

Hillary,

So glad to see the G20 trip come off so well.

I hear increasing rumors that [redacted] is your choice for AID. I hope this is incorrect. She does not meet your "Paul Farmer criteria": no passion for development. No evidence of strong management ability, either, and she has some critics on the Hill. I know this search has been difficult, and getting a person named is urgent, but [redacted] would be a credible alternative with broader grounding in development yet an open mind for new approaches and reconfiguring. Not sure the close association with [redacted] is good for you either. Of course there could be a lot of factors I don't know that dictate this choice, if she is the candidate. I'll certainly do everything I can to support the next AID leader, whoever it is. Very critical post.

Happy Easter!
