The Eleison Group (www.eleisongroup.com) received an impressive 4 Pollies out of 6 submissions for competition in the 2010 Pollie Awards for their work in 2009. The Pollies are a bi-partisan award given each year by the American Association of Political Consultants in recognition of the most influential and transformative political and issue campaigns and ads.

The Eleison Group's work was recognized as first or second place in their categories amongst thousands of other nominations including best overall email campaign of 2009 and one of top two best radio campaigns of 2009.

The Eleison Group also was recognized with one of the top two contrast ads and TV ads broadcast over the internet. Three of the winning submissions centered on placing the climate change debate within a moral values and national security framework to argue for passage of the House Clean Energy Bill. The fourth was a video produced during the most vitriolic period of the healthcare debate that refocused the debate back on the people who were being affected by the delays.
