Subject: Amb for Int Rel Freedom... Some rumors...

Not sure where you are on this... There was a group of somewhat progressive types (ministers, activists) who met in Atlanta on international humanitarian issues... Not Jim Wallis types or that type of political activists but Brady Anderson types... On the Amb for Rel Freedom -- the talk that came out of that meeting was that a noted Republican may get the job. This crew is preferring someone nonpartisan or Democratic... So, apparently there is some talk moving out there on this topic...

Okay, here's my take based on the personalities I know... If [redacted] is in the running then he would be telling others ([redacted] has a propensity to move his name). So, he would be the "Republican" this group would be talking about because he would fall on the other side of the line of demarcation concerning relationships and partnerships... I don't necessarily have a concluding thought on this. Just want to make sure you know what I know... I'm avail if needed.
