US create experimental non-lethal plasma weapon

The US military is working on groundbreaking laser technology which can create human voices out of nothing by altering atoms.

This non-lethal weapon works by shooting a burst of light for up to 15 seconds which creates a ball of plasma.

Then a nanolaser is fired at the plasma in such a way that produces light and noise.

And already the boffins have achieved human-like noises, similar to a haunted walkie-talkie.

U.S. Marine Corps Lance Corporal Briar Purty tests Drone Killer Counter-UAS Technology at Camp Pendleton

"We're this close to getting it to speak to us. I need three or four more kilohertz," said David Law, who runs the US Joint Non-Lethal Weapons Program (JNLWD).

It has been reported that the laser-induced weapon will say "intelligible" words in the next three years.

Ultimately they want to create a number of effects from firing the plasma such as light and even heat.

The website Defense One reports that plasma is a field of electrified gas which highly responsive to electromagnetic effects.
