Art Works Podcast: Rosa Joshi on directing Shakespeare for a contemporary world

 Director Rosa Joshi is a lover of classical theater, particularly the work of William Shakespeare. She is also committed to producing theater in which the cast reflects the demographics of the audience, and she is passionate about creating work that has big, juicy roles for women. That might pose a dilemma to a director who is driven by the text of the play—as Joshi is. But she approaches casting creatively—casting actors of colors in all roles and switching the gender of the play’s character

 2018 NEA Jazz Master Todd Barkan is a man of many talents: impresario, club owner, producer, artistic programmer. But he would count chief among them his deep and abiding love for jazz and the musicians who create. Owner of the legendary Keystone Korner, Todd created a club where musicians ruled and audiences felt at home. In this music-filled podcast, he talks about that great San Francisco club and shares stories about his many friend-- jazz greats like Miles Davis, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, B

Art Works Podcast: Army Artist in Residence Sargent Juan Munoz tells the stories of soldiers

 The US Army Artist in Residence Sargent 1st Class Juan Munoz might be the Army's best-kept secret. His job is to document through art the experiences of soldiers as they fulfill their duties both home and abroad. Sgt. Munoz deploys with troops for a month as a soldier/artist--expected to carry his weight and to document what he sees. Sgt. Munoz has an extraordinary amount of freedom: he chooses what to document and how to document it. In fact, when he was appointed, the army emphasized he w

My Art Story: Mark Ruffin

In this short video, Mark Ruffin, the program director for jazz at SiriusXM, tells us how jazz / Miles Davis essentially saved his life. In honor of the National Endowment's 50th anniversary, he shared this story as part of the NEA's push to get arts stories from Americans. Ruffin is also the host of the NEA's audio series, NEA Jazz Moments.

Time and Money: Using Federal Data to Measure the Value of Performing Arts Activities

On May 15, 2011, NEA Director of Research & Analysis Sunil Iyengar and Research Analyst Bonnie Nichols presented new NEA research "Time and Money: Using Federal Data to Measure the Value of Performing Arts Activities" [Research Note #102]. "Time and Money" looks at the value of the arts in three ways: time spent on arts activities; organizational revenue and expenses; and direct consumer spending. A particular focus on performing arts data provides consistency across these three measurements. Th

2019 Musical Theater Songwriting Challenge Sizzle

 2019 Winner's Recordings It all came together on October 20 and 21 when the 2019 Songwriting Challenge winners, their mentors, and music directors were joined by New York City-based musicians and vocalists to give the winners' songs the Broadway treatment. Music directors deftly led each ensemble of artists, in consultation with the winners, to craft the best recording of the song. ***

NEA Jazz Masters: Tribute to Maria Schneider

"In this increasingly polarized world of social tensions, the antidote to everything that's gone haywire may be found in jazz—our nation's own extraordinary art form that has at its heart: listening, presence, communication, collaboration, and self-expression. What a blessing for all of us that the NEA still honors this unique art form that vividly illustrates the magic when we embrace this kind of human interaction. Being asked to represent this heritage among a pantheon of extraordinary people

NEA Jazz Masters: Tribute to Dianne Reeves

"In the beginning of my career, I had the good fortune to attend 'living' schools of jazz; I was able to learn directly from, and be mentored by, the masters—the first being Clark Terry. It was the most fertile soil any young aspiring artist could hope for. That was 45 years ago, and the lessons I learned—which still resonate with me daily—made this day possible. I am humbled and honored to be a recipient of the NEA's Jazz Master award, and to be seated in proximity to so many extraordinary, his

Musical Theater Songwriting Challenge

The Musical Theater Songwriting Challenge is a national competition for high school students who have a passion for writing songs that could be part of a musical theater production. Launched in 2016 as a pilot program in three cities (Dallas, TX; Minneapolis, MN, Seattle, WA), the Songwriting Challenge offers six semi-finalists mentorship opportunities with professional songwriters and musicians and the opportunity to have an original song performed by those musicians. The national Songwriting W

Lynsey Addario: The Other Side of the Lens

 Lynsey Addario is a photojournalist who combines the eye of an artist with a journalistic rigor as she covers conflicts in Afghanistan, Darfur, Iraq, Libya, and elsewhere in startling and unexpected ways. She not only photographs combatants, although she does that very well. She's eager to tell the whole story and so trains her camera on the daily struggles of civilians caught in war. Since her first trip to Afghanistan in 2000, Addario has focused particular attention on women living in mal

NEA Message Testing and 50th Anniversary Update

On April 1, 2015, NEA's Director of Public Affairs, Jess Sarmiento, presented the results of a recent study to determine what messages about the arts and NEA resonate best with the public. She also discussed the NEA's plans for celebrating the NEA's 50th Anniversary and ways in which we plan to engage SAAs, RAOs and your constituents. A presentation was followed by a Q&A session.

NEA Webinar for Congressional District Staff

On June 25, 2013, held a webinar for Congressional District Staff. The webinar covered an overview of the agency, our funding opportunities, and tips for Congressional staff on how to help constituents apply for grants. The webinar answered the questions: Who is eligible for an NEA grant? Who is reviewing the applications? On what criteria? NEA grant opportunities include arts education projects, funding for underserved areas (including rural communities), and the Our Town grant program dedicate
